TRAIN HITS AUTO; TWO ARE KILLED

Mrs. Lucy Tyler, 42, Sullivant avenue and Burr road, and L. M. McCarley, 45, Grove City, were killed Monday when their auto was struck by an inbound Hocking Valley passenger train at the Infirmary road crossing.

They were on their way to a farm southeast of Columbus to get Arthur Tyler, the woman's husband, and bring him home, Tyler said. The train, due in Columbus at 3 p. m., was traveling fast. Trainmen brought the bodies to the Union station.

Mrs. Tyler also is survived by her mother, Mrs. L. M. Shover, and two brothers, Elber and Ella Shover. McCarley, a carpenter, is survived by a son, Francis, aged 25.

Tuesday evening, Feb. 10, at Glenwood Methodist church, the next number of the Hilltop lecture course will be given by the Golden Gate Concert company. This company is a de luxe entertaining organization which not only presents most expressively the dreamy, lilting music of Hawaii on the ukulele, steel guitar, banjo, mandolin, violin and piano, but also interprets this music artistically, by means of these instruments, popular, semi-classic and classic American and European music, including renditions from great operatic compositions. Vocal selections add still further variety.

CIVIC ASSOCIATION MEETING

The next meeting of the Hilltop Civic association will be held Tuesday evening, Feb. 17, at Burgess Avenue U. B. church. The regular meeting of the association has been postponed to this date because of the revival meetings being held at this church.

IMPROVEMENT ASS'N ENTERTAINS LADIES

Tuesday evening being the social meeting of the Hilltop Improvement association, about 75 members and their wives enjoyed a dinner served at the club rooms.

Jerry Bliss, president of the South Side Civic association and a man of a great deal of experience in community work, addressed the members and guests, reciting the history of the South Side Civic association and telling of its accomplishments since its organization in 1921. He also gave the members of the Hilltop association some very good points along the line of community cooperation.

Miss Anna Olga Jones, council woman of this city, also gave a very interesting and instructive talk, dwelling at some length on the citizens responsibility in government and cooperation in community work.

Lincoln Essay Contest

Just one more day remains for entrance into the Lincoln Essay Contest, which closes at 5 p. m. Friday.

The boys and girls of the various Hilltop schools are showing considerable interest in the contest and quite a number of essays have alredy been received, and from advices from the schools there will be many more before the close of the contest. Every child in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades is eligible to entrance and is urged to enter the contest. Have your papers in The Record office before 5 o'clock Friday evening, Feb. 6.

Here is the way it is to be done: Any boy or girl attending any one of the Hilltop schools, in either the fourth, fifth or sixth grades is eligible to enter the contest. He or she is to write plainly, on one side of the sheet only, in ink, a short story or anecdote connected with the life of Abraham Lincoln. The composition must be the product of the one entering the contest, and without the assistance of any other person. The story is not to be over 350 words in length.

After you have finished your composition, fold it neatly, put it in a plain white envelope and SEAL TIGHTLY and bring to The Record office. We will put a number on the envelope, take your name, school and address and put your number opposite your name.

On Feb. 6, by which date all stories must be in The Record Office, we will turn all the sealed envelopes containing the stories over to competent judges, who will open them and grade them—on composition, penmanship, spelling and neatness. The judges will not see the names, but will go by numbers only.

After thoroughly examining them they will grade them as to standing, marking "first," "second," "third," "fourth" and "fifth," also honorable mention. Then they will return them to this office and we will publish the result, together with the stories as written by those pupils, Feb. 12th.

To the one being awarded first place we will give $2.50 in money, the second $1.50, third $1.00 and the fourth and fifth 50 cents each.

All stories must be in The Record office not later than 5 p. m. Friday, Feb. 6.

Get at it, boys and girls, and bring in your story to The Record Office, over Cussins & Hartsough's store, 2354 West Broad street. The office is open each evening until 5 p. m.

A PRAYER FOR GUIDANCE IN CANCER RESEARCH

It is earnestly wished that this prayer may be repeated every morning by all men and women; so that all may feel inspired by the thought of a united prayer for those who serve God in their service to humanity.

Through faith all things are possible. "O God, Who declarest Thy almighty power in showing mercy and pity to all who call upon Thee, and Who revealest to men, in each new discovery, a part of Thy truth; Enable with Thy Grace, we pray Thee, the dullness of our blinded sight, and grant a new vision to all those, who serve thee, in their search for the cause of cancer and its cure. Lighten their darkness, Oh Lord, we beseech thee and mercifully direct them into Thy path of knowledge and truth; Grant them the realization that through Thee all things are possible, pour upon them the abundance of Thy inspiration, and finally lead them to the attainment of victory, that the scourge of cancer may be ended, and that we, being freed from this burden of fear, may live continually in the love and service of Thine only Son, our savior Jesus Christ. Amen."

HILLTOPLETS

The management of the Columbus State Hospital for Insane reports a population of 2,964 patients. This is the greatest of any like institution in the state, with the exception of the one at Massillon, which has but a few more.

The Rev. Superintendent was called to 236 Catherine street Wednesday morning, where a small fire caused from defective wiring did damage amounting to $50.

ANOTHER VIEW ON SEWER QUESTION

Publisher Record:

I have read with much interest in your last two issues the articles by two different people relating their views on the sanitary sewer and the proposed methods of financing the same. One individual believes a special assessment of approximately $40 per lot would, in his judgement, be the quickest way of attaining the desired end. Another believes that each property owner should be assessed according to the benefits derived from the installation of such a sewer.

If I remember correctly, Mr. Simpson in his address before the Hilltop Civic association made the statement that there were two ways by which this project could be financed, viz.: the assessing of approximately $40 a lot, or by special permission from the legislature to levy an assessment on the whole city for this specific purpose, as the city could not now issue bonds for this purpose owing to the financial condition.

To my way of thinking both methods are manifestly unfair and should not be considered.

Take the special assessment of $40 per lot plan. Hilltop property has been assessed and is paying taxes for sewers in all sections of the city. Then why should Hilltop property be assessed for their own improvements and then as will undoubtedly happen, be assessed to pay improvements in other sections of the city? Is it just?

As for the other plan, I do not believe it feasible or practical as it is impossible to tell who would be benefited and who would not. If we had, say, until the number of houses on the Hilltop that we now have, our sanitary sewer would undoubtedly be adequate. Are we going to say to the men who have built their homes later, "You must pay an assessment for sewers because our present system cannot handle it," when his lot was assessed to pay for those same sewers?

Why not the whole city pay for them, even though the legislature has to grant permission for the city to issue bonds to finance the sewers?

Taxpayer.

Twenty-five thousand miles of wire will be used in the two cables supporting the world's longest suspension bridge, now being erected across the Delaware river to connect Philadelphia, Penn., and Camden, New Jersey. The wire is the strongest of its kind ever made. It is shown by tests to have a tensile strength of 223,000 pounds per square inch of cross section, and it will hold at anchorages against a pull of 30,000,000 pounds. The length of the new bridge is 9760 feet, as compared with 5989 feet, the length of the Brooklyn bridge.

BACK TRAILING ON OLD SCHOOL DAYS

AN OLD FASHIONED FRIDAY AFTERNOON

By M. E. J.

In those days we had never heard of swimming pools or pageants or plays, no not even gymnastics, in connection with our schools, but looked forward to our Friday afternoon exercises with a great deal of pleasure. We always had good music—singing in which the whole school joined, for we had a good music teacher who taught us good music, and often as a reward for a good lesson would play several pieces for us on his violin.

Then we—the girls had compositions, which were always dress up affairs—and declamations by the boys. Sometimes the subjects for our compositions were given us by our teachers and again we chose our own, but the composition was written by us, and handed to our teacher for correction and then given us to read. The boys usually took their declamations from our readers and committed them to memory. Some of them would choose something pathetic, others the most patriotic speeches they could find. One little chap deserves special mention. He was scarcely 12 years old, with light curly hair, and large brown eyes, with a face and hands scarcely ever clean, but he was a born orator. He chose such subjects as "Parting of Marmion and Douglass," "The Merimac," etc. and during the recitation "you could have heard a pin drop," we were all so interested in him. Then the exercises would close with a "spelling bee," sometimes a "spell down" and again a "choose sides." In the "spell down" the one who missed the word took his seat, and in the "choose sides" the one who spelled the word correctly would call a pupil from the other side to our side of the room. It often resulted in one side being very much smaller than the other.

All of these exercises were helpful in making better scholars of us, for we put in our spare time studying our spelling books, and getting all the information we could for our compositions. We always had the privilege of inviting our parents, which created a pleasant feeling toward our teachers.

After our new high school was occupied, gymnastics were introduced and it really was a beautiful sight to see about 200 pupils in their uniforms of red waists and black skirts for the girls and red waists and gray trousers for the boys, come marching in and take their places on the chapel floor from which all the chairs had been removed.

The stage was usually crowded with visitors and with everything in order the leader would nod to the pianist and the exercise begin, and last about an hour.

I have no doubt that many readers of this paper will recall many such incidents in their early schooldays which will bring back many pleasant memories of the old fashioned Friday afternoons.

Following "W. S." on the customs prevalent in the "old school days" of collecting buttons for a button string I recall my sister having one which measured about three yards in length. I do not remember that she ever wore it about her neck as an ornament, but the clearness and luster of some of the buttons was quite equal to some of the "paste" imitations of some of the rare (?) jewels of the present day. We also had a custom of exchanging "scraps" of dress goods to be used for quilt pieces, taking them home to have mother instruct us in the art of sewing, and I feel quite sure the work equalled any displayed today. And the good old songs of those days, "Hold the Fort," "Work for the Night is Coming," "Star of Bethlehem" and "His Jewels" are remembered and sung even in this generation while present day songs, some of them good in their way, pass out and are forgotten from one school year to the next. We also used to sing the Capitals of the States and some of the poems found in our readers, one verse of one selection which comes to my mind was:

"Come in, little stranger," I said,
As she tapped at my half open door,
With the blanket pinned over her head
Just reached to the basket she bore.

And another:

Hear the children gayly shout,
"Half past four and school is out."
See them as they quickly go
Tripping homeward o'er the snow.

In the art of cooking in the present day school, daughter is taught to make excellent fudge and a tempting dish of salad. Applesauce is right! Great stuff for dad's dinner pail!

"P. T. A. Member" reminds us that the school plays of today are "instructive and develop mind, body and soul." I presume she refers to the grades. The student from the "grade" to "high" must take a long stride or auger almost complete aberration, because we see them enjoying "joy rides," "petting parties" and cigaret smoking during the recreation periods.

Dreading the editor's wrath and possible rejection of this article because of the strong vocabulary we might be tempted to use, we forbear commenting on some of the wise (usually otherwise) stunts put on at the higher institutions of learning in the name of discipline. Discipline forsooth! Give us some of the good old days when the coy maiden, concealing her natural blushes 'neath the old "poke" bonnet, tempts the love-lorn swain, hesitating on Cupid's threshold, dares him enter where angels only tread.

FLORIDA LETTER

Publishers Records:

Speaking of St. Cloud, Fla., I may say that the first settlers here were veterans of the Civil war, and there is a large colony still living here permanently. A large number spend the winter here and then go north in the summer. The tourists here are not confined to the soldier class, but they are here from all walks of life, and from nearly every northern state.

There is a fine memorial hall here and they have a weekly, interesting program, free of admission to all. The Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists and Disciples, each have good church buildings, but the attendance is so large that some of them find it necessary to enlarge.

What about fruit and other products? They are here in abundance. Vegetables of all sorts, now green in the garden and ready for use. Oranges! Oranges everywhere. The crop in this section is fine. The trees are loaded and bending to the ground, and sweet as honey—almost. The same may be said of grape fruit orchards. The trees grow large, and the fruit most is good size, hanging in clusters from three to five, making a most wonderfully beautiful picture. What is of real interest, too, that poor northerners can have all they want here, irrespective of the size of their purse.

One can buy the largest and finest oranges here at the fruit store for 10 cents per dozen, and grape fruit for 15 cents per dozen.

The strawberry season is now opening and they are plentiful. The price is high. Today I saw them quoted at 35c per quart, and fine large berries at that. The smaller fruits, such as tangerines and kumquats are very cheap. We had a persimmon the other day about three inches in diameter and of fine quality, but the season for them is over and I did not get to see any of the largest ones. They tell me they get as large as a good sized apple.

It has been raining here quite a good deal, which is unusual for this season, and consequently the gardens do not look as well as they should, for it is too wet. We expect to attend one of the big fairs before we come north, and we may have something to say regarding the exhibit.

We attended a reception last night for tourists, at the Presbyterian church, which was a very pleasing affair. There were people there from most of the northern and western states, and also from Canada. Ohio reported the largest number present.

We were disappointed in not being able to witness the the eclipse of the sun on account of the cloudy and rainy day. It is nice and warm here now and very pleasant of evening, except for the dampness, but we have pine wood fires when we need them.

Real estate is booming all over Florida, and towns and cities are springing up as if by magic. More realtors here than you can find even on the Hilltop.

P. W. Drumm.

BIBLE READING IN THE SCHOOLS

The present agitation of having the Holy Bible read in our public schools should arouse us to some serious thinking. Our public schools are institutions caring for children of all creeds and sects and I feel reading any one version of the Scriptures would cause factional disturbance in the school and the present day teacher already has his (or her) hands full trying to keep peace and harmony without prejudice. Being a faithful reader of the King James version of the Holy Bible and learning the great lesson of tolerance (Matt. 18:1-4; Matt 26:28; Mark 9:38-40; Mark 10 10:35-45; Acts 10:15; and Paul's letter to the Corinthians I Cor. 9:19-22) as taught by the lowly Nazarene, and realizing the standards of religious ideals of this nation were formulated on the theory and principles of "charity for all and all for charity," I can see nothing Christian-like in the idea of reading one version of the Bible more than another in our public schools. I make this statement guardedly. If we can promote a plan of segregation whereby each sect or creed can hear the word of God read according to their own mind and conscience, all well and good. Otherwise, I can see nothing but agnosticism (the Lord knows we have too much of that faith already) planted in the thoughts of our youth, who, while the mind is plastic, grasps at the most plausible, to them, theory—the easiest way.

If we have the correct perspective this land and nation, since the landing of the "Pilgrims" who sought to found a colony where they might worship God "according to the dictates of their own conscience" down through the ages comprising the founding and settlement of Philadelphia, that "City of Brotherly Love," the Revolutionary war freeing us from civic and social oppression of the mother country and establishing our own constitution (read the preamble) was founded on the theory that God is no respector of persons (Rom. 2:10-11; Eph. 6:8-9) and He will hear the prayer of the earnest, sincere follower regardless of sect or creed. Religion to be real must be sincere and one of the signs of true religion is love for all, hatred toward none.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

PNEUMONIA.

If we judge entirely by our feelings, none of us can safely say that his kidneys are as "all right" as they were 10 years ago, for the progress of kidney diseases, after inception, is usually so slow and insidious as to be unobserved for years, except by special test. This is true also of some other chronic diseases, but it cannot be said of acute ailments. Pneumonia, for instance, is like a robber that may pounce upon you as you turn a corner—the encounter may be fierce and the departure abrupt. The germs may be carried in the throats of people who are not at the time susceptible to infection, and may still be given by them to others who become infected. As is true in typhoid, the watchful care of the patient is most necessary in its treatment, and, like typhoid, the outcome will depend upon which is the stronger—the germs or the vitality of the patient.

The initial infection of pneumonia is usually in the lower part of the right lobe. Both sides infected, constitutes the dreaded double pneumonia. Aside from germs, there are contributing causes, such as overwork, over eating, any excesses and loss of sleep. You may or may not have a cold; there may be a day or two of chilliness, leading up to a genuine, sure-enough chill to be remembered, when you will monopolize the hot water bottles. Short, painful breathing and coughing and an occasional, or more frequent, stabbing pain, and you and your friends and the doctor may hope for the best. At such a time your vitality is your greatest asset. The cultivation of vitality, like thrift, should be an everyday business when in health, and, like money, the time will surely come when it will be convenient to have it.

You may be one of the 75 per cent of cases that recover, but your doctor will be watchful for further spread of the infection in the lungs; the fever; the condition of the heart; the count of leucocytes (white corpuscles); how the kidneys are acting, and if there be any complications.

A crisis will come, after which recovery will be slow because of a weak heart. No excitement must be allowed; ambition must be curbed; there must be plenty of fresh air and frequent bathing. The fight is always a hard one. As in the invasion of a country by a foreign army, resistance is necessary. And as in war, prevention—the constant cultivation of vitality—is much cheaper than to allow invasion.

As a strong nation will never know much of war its known strength has averted, so, a person who has great vitality (not necessarily great muscular strength) will never know how many times invasions of the enemy have been repelled by this vitality. The foreign relations committee and the diplomats are supposed to "keep us out of war," and the general public do not always know about it. A good heart and strong vitality are our "foreign relations committee."

Finally, then, by way of pneumonia prevention: Always cultivate and conserve vitality; always breathe through the nostrils, and never re-breathe the breath of another—who may be sick or well.

HELPFUL HINTS

A CERTAIN WISE MAN.

I knew him well. We lived in the same town when I was younger than I am now. He was a great man, but few knew it—and fewer still knew him intimately. His tastes were simple and inexpensive. His home was plain, but charming and attractive. He was surrounded by many comforts, but few luxuries. In those days he had no active business. If he had wealth it was not apparent. He lived a quiet and peaceful life in a college community, but as time went by, many strangers came to his home. He drove them over the beautiful streets with elms and maples arching overhead. These men were sometimes young and sometimes old, but with the characteristic American face of strength and intelligence.

It was rare indeed that an aristocrat appeared among his guests. A few years later my own profession took me to many cities and states where I met again the friends of my neighbor. Then I learned something of the quality of his visitors: In the east they included leaders in the professions, experts in the arts and sciences and financiers and promoters of great enterprises. In the west they were men who built railroads, reclaimed and watered desert lands, cleared forests and drained valleys. At first the significance did not appear, but slowly it dawned upon me that my pleasant neighbor was a national character, and that his home was a shrine where men of many interests came for inspiration and advice. I found that he sat in the seats of the mighty and counselled in the halls of wisdom; that the capital of his state wanted him, and the cabinet of his country's capital had long been open. He had refused such invitations and continued to live his simple life of comfort and contentment in the peaceful town of his adoption. I saw others pay the price and grab greedily for those gifts which were offered to him with an open hand. I did not understand him or his philosophy of life for many a day, but after a while I knew, and it came about in the way I shall tell you in the next issue of this paper.

Chat No. 3

When one wishes to build a home, there are three points to be considered:

1. The size of his pocketbook.
2. His family and their requirements.
3. The type of house out of which he can realize the greatest profit if it becomes necessary to dispose of it.

"OUR PLAN SERVICE" shows many practical houses that are REAL HOMES, and also homes of the saleable type.

Let's "Chat" it over at your convenience.

Members of the Iwanta club were entertained at the home of Mrs. Hartford Gaib, 74 South Ogden avenue, Jan. 27. The following were in attendance: Mrs. B. E. Bieber, Mrs. C. J. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Walter Larris, 50 South Richardson avenue.

HATS WITH TALL CROWNS GLORY IN THEIR HEIGHT

You never can tell just what Lady America will do with a French style, she may acclaim it and carry it to extremes, she may make a wry fact and swallow it, but she has been known to adore it. For this spring Parisian milliners have sent over the high chown in several varieties, among them the [illegible] crown, borrowed from our cowboy hat (thus paying America a compliment) the pierrette crown, the beehive crown and the telescope crown.

In all of these aspiring crowns glory in their height and call particular attention to it by means of bows of tufts of ribbon ends, or bunches of flowers perched right on top, proclaiming their good points as from the housetops. Americans have chosen to accept the high crowns with some modifications and now the crown's the thing mounted on sundry kinds of small brims.

At the top a turban of faille silk has a crown in four sections and sloping toward the back. Narrow straw braid put on in a floral pattern decorates the coronet, the flower motifs centered with beads. There are many lovely colors in which hats of this type are made and it is suited to youthful wearers with its amusing crown topped by a bow of ribbon.

In the hats at the left and right the high crown achieves dignity. One of them made of satin and straw cloth in black, with an intricate ribbon brim on the top crown, is well suited to matronly wearers. The other, of green taffeta, has narrow brown braid for adornment of the beehive crown and upturned front brim. Corded taffeta covers the wide crown. A hat covered with black cellophane braid and faced with silk finishes the group. It has a monture of shiny, black foliage and flowers at the back.

MOTHER SHIPTON'S PROPHECY

Following is Mother's Shipton's prophecy, which many of our readers will doubtless remember, especially among the older generation:

Carriages without horses shall go,
And accidents will fill the world with woe,
Around the world thoughts shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye.

Water shall yet wonders do,
Now strange, shall yet be true;
The world upside down shall be,
And gold found at the root of a tree.

Through hills man shall ride,
And no horse or ass be by his side;
Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk.

In air men shall be seen,
In white, in black, in green;
Iron in the water shall float,
As easy as a wooden boat.

Gold shall be found and shown
In a land that's not now known,
Fire and water more wonders do,
England shall at last admit the Jew.

When pictures look alive with movements free,
When ships, like fish, swim below the sea,
When men, outstripping birds can scour the sky,
Then, half the world, deep drenched in blood will die."

The world to an end will come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

There has been much controversy about Mother Shipton, whose prophecy first appeared in England in 1641. She probably was a fictitious person, whose name was used by many for alleged prophecies.

EXPECT GAS TAX TO PASS

Indications are that the gasoline tax bill, carrying a 3-cent a gallon tax, is expected to pass the house without any amendment to reduce the present automobile license tag tax. Vote will be taken next Tuesday.

An informal test vote taken late Tuesday of the Republican members, disclosed that the bill is certain of passage, house leaders maintain.

With 97 members present, 59 voted in the affirmative. Those in favor of the bill declare they will have no difficulty in getting the six additional votes necessary among the 18 Republicans who were absent and the 20 Democrats.

A similar poll will probable be taken Thursday in the senate when Republicans will caucus.

The house committee on motor vehicles Wednesday recommended the bill for passage. The proposed amendment to reduce the license tax to $3 on pleasure cars and to $3 plus 70-cents a hundred pounds weight on commercial cars, will be voted down, members said.

St. John's Ladies' Aid society will meet next Wednesday. Mesdames Lauer and Link will be the hostesses.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Marion Ollom (Ruth Hensley), 1482 Sullivant avenue, Jan. 28, a daughter, Anna Louise.

A miscellaneous shower was given by Misses Irma and Leota Williams in honor of Mrs. Robert Fristoe (Mabel Taylor) Monday evening, Feb. 2. Among the guests present were: Margaret Walker, Ellen Highland, Esther Haines, Mary Ghent, Mildred Urton, Margaret Huffman and Virgie Huffman. Dainty refreshments were served.

East Indian silversmiths are famous for their skill and cunning in fashioning objects from beaten metal, and the beaten work of gold and silver adorning their temples in India is among the finest examples of the art in the world.

"CHRIST'S RETURN AND THE RESURRECTION"

Text—1 Cor. 15:55

THE HILL CREST BAPTIST CHURCH

WEST BROAD STREET AT ELDON AVENUE

The greatest tragedy of the eternities—Universal history has written SIN entered the world and DEATH through SIN.

Read history and it is full of the awful word Death. Go back to Abel, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Samuel, Ruth, David, Solomon.

All of these were good men, but when life had finished its work with them there was nothing left for them but to die.

But listen to Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and at last he will stand upon the earth." Isaiah 26:19, "Thy dead shall live again."

The New Testament teaches the resurrection of the dead. He is coming for his children. And we shall be caught up in the air.

(a) Our residence in Heaven. (b) The great tribulations. The devil shall be chained.

If in this life only, we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.

AUTO SKIDS INTO GARAGE; THREE PEOPLE INJURED

William Haynes Suffers Fractured Leg While Two Others Sustain Bruises.

As a result of an automobile skidding into a garage at 2810 West Broad street, three people were injured Saturday.

Wm. Haynes, 11, Charles street, was crossing the street when the car struck him and received a fractured right leg and bruises about the body. He was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital for treatment.

E. A. Hott, 358 South Hague avenue, an employe of the garage, received bruises about the body.

Rev. W. C. Munson of Zanesville sustained several cuts.

Rev. Mr. Munson was in the car which was being driven by Charles Dorn of Sedalia, Ohio, when the car ran over the curb, broke off a concrete pillar and struck Hott, who was working on a truck.

RANSACKS HOUSE —THEN ESCAPES

When E. W. Stith, 349 South Burgess avenue, returned home last Friday night he found evidence that a burglar was in his house. Going next door, he aroused Patrolman Harry Garrett, a neighbor, who summoned Patrolman Gordon in the police speed car.

As Gordon turned the corner into Burgess avenue, from Sullivant avenue, Garrett and Stith heard a thud in the rear of the house. Investigation developed that the burglar apparently had jumped from a rear window after thoroughly ransacking the house.

The regular business meeting of the Hilltop Improvement association will be held at the club rooms next Tuesday evening. At this meeting the report of the nominating committee appointed to nominate officers for the coming year will be received, and other business of importance will come before the association.

The Hilltop Civic association will hold its regular February meeting in the Burgess Avenue United Brethren church, corner of Burgess and Sullivant avenues, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. All interested in the welfare of the Hilltop are invited.

LINCOLN ESSAY CONTEST

As announced last week, we present in this issue the results of the Record's Lincoln Essay Contest, which was so commendably taken part in by almost 60 school pupils of the fourth, fifth and sixth grades.

The Record wishes to thank each and every boy and girl for their assisance in making the contest not only possible, but also a success. For we feel that it was a success and we are indebted to these young Americans for their help.

There were boys and girls from the different Hilltop schools who took part in the contest. And while, according to our announced plans, only the first five would be prize winners, yet a very large number of those turned in were very commendable.

We wish to congratulate the winners of the prizes and only wish it were possible for us to separately award each boy and girl who entered the contest, but we feel that there was more in the contest than the winning of a prize, for each boy and girl will undoubtedly reap a benefit far greater by the study and thought of the life of this Great American, which was necessary that they might compete in the contest with their essays. And after all the aim of the contest was to stimulate the study of the life of and become familiar with the sterling qualities of the greatest of all true Americans.

As each contestant presented their essay it was placed in an envelope which was numbered and the contestant given a corresponding number. The publishers of the Record did not see the text of any of the essays. They were then delivered to the judges who opened the envelopes and read the essays, each essay being numbered as taken from the envelope and the pages of each fastened together, the judges going entirely by number and not knowing the name of the writer or the school which they represented. We feel this was fair both to the judges and the contestants, and abide by their decision.

Interest in the contest was not confined to any one particular locality or school district as a perusal of the entrants show that all localities and schools of the Hilltop were represented by entrants.

The Record is indebted to Mrs. Charles W. Lentz, Rev. Richard E. Shields and Mr. M. K. Weber for kindly consenting to give their time to the judging of the essays:

Second, No. 22—Charles Welsch, 91 South Park avenue, West Broad Street school, 5A grade. $1.50.

Third, No. 13—Louise Wintermeyel, 244 South Warren avenue, John Burroughs school, 5A grade. $1.00.

The prize money will be presented to the winners upon application together with card number at The Record office.

No. 10—Alice Gregg, 215 Whitethorne avenue, Highland Avenue school, 5B grade.

No. 36—Louise Robb, 192 South Ogden avenue, West Broad Street school, 6A grade.

No. 18—Leroy Davis, 2022 Fairmont avenue, Highland Avenue school, 6A grade.

No. 29—Russell Wise, 316 Whitethorne avenue, John Burroughs school, 6B grade.

No. 44—Edith Myers, 2034 Fairmont avenue, Highland Avenue school, 6B grade.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF JUDGES

February 10, 1925.

Record Printing Co.

We, the judges in the Lincoln Essay Contest, wish first to share in the general expressions of appreciation of your fine spirit shown in stimulating, among the young citizens of the Hilltop, an interest in the life and character of that great and typical American, Abraham Lincoln, and also to commend the boys and girls who made the response.

It was no easy task that you set for us. The great variety in form and composition, as well as the relatively meritorious character of many of the essays, made decision difficult.

After careful individual reading and study and an extended discussion in conference, your committee of judges came to unanimous agreement, which we herewith respectfully submit:

First award	No. 48
Second award	No. 22
Third award	No. 13
Fourth award	No. 16
Fifth award	No. 25

Honorable mention—No. 10, No. 36, No. 18, No. 29 and No. 44.

(Signed)

MRS. WHITEHEAD ILL FOR SOME TIME DIED SATURDAY

Resident of Hilltop for a Number of Years and Prominent in Glenwood Church Work.

Mrs. Emma Whitehead, wife of Dr. Howard Whitehead, died at the family residence, 2229 West Broad street, Saturday morning, Feb. 7, at 10 o'clock. She had been in ill health for some time and her death was due to myocarditis.

Mrs. Whitehead, before her marriage, was Miss Emma Slack, and was born in Galena, Ohio, Sept. 30, 1867, being 57 years, 4 months and 7 days old at the time of her death. She was married to Dr. H. Whitehead Oct. 21, 1890.

Early in life Mrs. Whitehead united with the Methodist Episcopal church at Galena and transferred her membership to Glenwood M. E. church soon after her marriage, in which church she had ever taken an active part in the work of the various organizations.

Though of a retiring disposition she won unfailing admiration and love from all who knew her and held them in her friendship through the very worth and beauty of her character.

Surviving her are her husband and one brother, Edwin Slack.

Funeral services were held in Glenwood M. E. church Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. George F. Barber officiating. Interment was made in Green Lawn cemetery.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

COLDS AND COUGHS

In-door people are easiest affected by exposure to wet and cold and when so exposed, the top of the head, back of the neck and soles of the feet need most protection. The nerves at those points are most susceptible and the intercommunication of nerves is more wonderful than radio. Wet feet may quickly cause a cold in the head. In most colds the entire skin is affected, which means a partial constriction of the pores, thus limiting the excretion of poisons.

The skin normally excretes one-third of the poisons which are continually forming in the body; the lungs and our breathing another third, leaving only the remaining third for the bowels and kidneys. When any one of these four methods is affected the others are overworked, and if one method be disabled entirely the patient cannot live long. This makes an active, normal skin, with open pores, most important, and stamps a bad cold as a more serious matter than most people think. When the outer skin (the epidermus) is burned, it is robbed of its pores and can no longer excrete poison. That is why a badly burned patient cannot live.

From the above it may be seen that the physician's great concern is to supervise and reduce the intake of food (the creator of poison), and do all he can to promote all these methods of excretion. As individuals we must maintain this proper balance of nutrition and excretion, or become confirmed and short lived invalids. Colds should be arrested and controlled from the start. To "wear out" a cold is to be prodigal of vitality.

COUGHING

"A cough is nature's method of expelling something from the air-passages that should not be there."

It may be some tangible object or it may be a call, through some nerve, from a distant point where a contracted muscle is interfering with that nerve, and the possible causes back of that may be as divergent as mouth breathing, over eating or a weak heart. The cough, then, becomes a danger signal and the cause, back of it, should be found, if possible, and removed. Sedative medicines may stop the coughing by deadening the nerves, for the time, but they cannot remove the distant cause. (Imagine the heinousness of taking down any "danger" signal and its inevitable consequences.)

An inclination to cough should be resisted, for coughing causes more coughing. Persistent hacking will produce a condition in the throat that will continue the cough indefinitely. We have all noticed waves of coughing in audiences where the coughing waits and seems to break loose after the climaxes in the program. Much of this could and should be avoided by using a little will power.

Some coughs should not be stopped. For instance in the advanced stages of pneumonia or tuberculosis, for if the secretions be not expelled the patient will virtually drown in them.

Adenoids and diseased tonsils which first cause mouth breathing, should be treated and followed up by reformed habit of nose breathing. Miners, stonecutters and any "dusty" occupation conduces to coughing and susceptibility to infection because of accumulations of dust where germs can propagate. In all such conditions and all other conditions—yes, all of us are safer if we habitually breathe through the nostrils. "Keep your mouth shut."

Chat No. 3

When one wishes to build a home, there are three points to be considered:

1. The size of the pocketbook.
2. His family and their requirements.
3. The type of house out of which he can realize the greatest profit if it becomes necessary to dispose of it.

"OUR PLAN SERVICE" shows many practical houses that are REAL HOMES, and also homes of the saleable type.

Let's "Chat" it over at your convenience.

FIRST 21 YEARS OF LINCOLN'S LIFE

Abraham Lincoln's grandfather, also named Abraham, settled in the state of Kentucky when that state was a pathless wilderness. He felled trees, hewed and trimmed logs for a cabin. He had three sons, and each boy helped clear the land and build the cabin.

One morning the boys heard a shot ring out and saw their father fall dead. One boy ran to the cabin for the gun while another ran to the nearest fort for help, while the youngest son, Thomas, knelt beside his father. As the oldest son started leaving the cabin with the gun he saw an Indian stooping over his little brother. He took quick aim and killed the Indian. Thomas then ran into the cabin. Indians then ran out of the woods, but were kept off by the big brother, who fired at them through cracks between the logs till help came from the fort. Thomas, the lad whose life was so narrowly saved, afterward became the father of Abraham Lincoln.

As Thomas Lincoln became a good-sized lad, on account of the poorness of the family he wandered about getting work wherever he could. He was stalwart and honest. He finally married a poor orphan girl by the name of Nancy Hanks. They went to housekeeping in a one-roomed cabin. There a little girl was born, whom they named Sarah. Afterward Thomas bought a farm along Nolin's Creek, where a little log cabin was already built, where Abraham Lincoln was born Feb. 12, 1809. After a few years they moved to a better farm. As there were few schools in Kentucky, a teacher would occasionally come along and teach in one of the cabins. Abraham went to such a teacher for a short time.

Not long after the family moved to a wild section in the Indiana forest, floating all their goods down the Ohio river on a raft, settling near Pigeon Creek. The mother and two children rode the distance, 100 miles, on borrowed horses. It took three days to go inland to their new home, a distance of 16 miles. Little Abraham was seven years old, but he helped his father build their camp, which was made by cutting down small trees and enclosing three sides, but leaving the one side open, before which a fire was built, it then being the fall of the year and the nights were cold. The building had no floor and the cracks were open, admitting the elements. This they occupied for nearly a year, when a better cabin was built and they moved in with new furniture inside. A brand new "bedroom suite" had been built running along sticks from between the logs to forked sticks driven into the ground at the corners. The skins of bears and other forest animals afforded bed "clothes." The cabin floor was made of logs hewed on one side and laid side by side. The chairs were three-legged stools and the table a log split in two and four sticks fastened on for legs. Abe's bed was a pile of leaves up in the "loft." A good deal of their clothing was made of skins of deers and like animals.

When Abraham was about nine years old his mother died, but being a Godly woman, she had taught little Abe to love God and righteousness. His father made a coffin out of rough hewn boards and buried Mrs. Lincoln in the forest.

Abraham's sister, Sarah, was 11 years old and on her was thrust the care of the poor, humble home in the lonely forest. The father afterward married Sally Bush Johnston, a good Kentucky woman, with a son and two daughters, and her belongings were moved to the forest home. This brought a time of more comfort and cheer, also better clothes and a good mother to help supply the place of the one that he had lost, for she loved little Abe and helped him study and improve himself.

The mother insisted on the children going to school as much as possible, they having to walk miles through the forest to do so. There was, however, not much schooling. Abraham went to school all he could, and while he was working would study between times.

His pen was a turkey quill and the writing fluid was made from the juice of berries. As he got older he would walk many miles to get a paper or book to read.

At 19 he had reached six feet and four inches in height and was called "Long Shanks"—his trousers being too short for him and his bare legs shown below them. He was very strong, a good runner and wrestler.

According to the laws of those days a boy's time belonged to his father until he was 21 years of age, and whenever he worked a day, which was from sunrise to sunset, the pay went to the father.

At one time a Mr. Gentry loaded a flat boat with pork, corn, bacon and flour and hired Abe to take the boat a thousand miles down the Mississippi river to New Orleans and sell the cargo, and bring the money back. He got $8 a month for the work.

After reaching 21 years of age, and after his sister Sarah had died, his father decided to leave the Indiana home and move to Illinois. An ox cart carried their possessions. The wheels were round blocks cut from a big oak log.

After reaching Illinois, the family chose a place on the Sangamon river and built a cabin. Here they suffered with the cold during the first year. The following spring, Abe, who had reached 22 years, struck out for himself with an ax and a little bundle of possessions. He made another trip to New Orleans. It was in that city that he first became acquainted with the slave trade. He saw a young woman being sold and then promised himself if he ever got a chance to "hit this thing" he'd "hit it hard."

FIRST PRIZE

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Abraham Lincoln was born near Hodgensville, Ky., Feb. 12, 1809. His parents were poor and lived in a mere cabin out in the wilderness. He had one sister, Sarah. They worked hard on the farm. When quite young the mother died and Mr. Lincoln married again. They first moved to Indiana and then to Illinois. Later he was known as the railsplitter. Lincoln became greatly interested in law and became a lawyer. Then he entered politics. He was elected president of the United States in November, 1860. The Civil war came on. This caused Lincoln to worry and be disappointed. There was to be a meeting at Gettysburg to dedicate a portion of the battlefield as a cemetery for those who gave their lives that this nation might live. The president was invited to make a speech. Mr. Edward Everett, an orator, was to talk also. They were on the same train. Mr. Lincoln picked up a piece of paper from the floor, as paper was scarce in those days. He took a pencil and began writing. He seemed discouraged with what he had written. The meeting had now begun. Mr. Everett talked for two hours. There were great cheers and applause. Then Mr. Lincoln's name was called. He began with a high-pitched voice, but as he went on he became more firm. People held their breath. When two minutes passed he walked from the stage with a hung head. Not a hand was lifted in applause. Not a sound was heard. He thought his speech was a failure. People do not quote what Everett said, but most people know what Lincoln said. The silence after Lincoln had finished was called "The Perfect Tribute." At the close of Lincoln's term he was again elected president. On the 14th of April, Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln went to Ford's theater, in Washington, where he was assassinated. Many people grieved over the death of that great man whose life he gave for his country.

SECOND PRIE

Abraham Lincoln was a strong and healthy boy. He loved birds and animals. He was brought up among them in the wilderness.

He did things we would never think of doing. Some of the things are: He read by the open fireplace. When he had no other book to read he would read the dictionary. He had no paper to write on, so he had to work his problems on an old wooden fire shovel. When he filled it he would shave it off again.

He was always after an education. He would borrow books and to pay the people he would work for them.

He would never give up until he had finished. By that way he became a great man and also one of our best presidents and freed the slaves.

He loved boys and boys loved him. This is some of the things he said: Give the boys a chance, and not to drink, swear or smoke and above all things trust in God. If all boys would do what Lincoln said this would be a better world.

THIRD PRIZE

LINCOLN AND THE SLEEPING SENTINEL.

Louise Wintermeyel, 244 South Warren avenue, John Burroughs school, 5A grade.

In a regiment that guarded a road to Washington, in the first year of the Civil war, was a farmer boy, William Scott, a volunteer of the Green Mountains of Vermont. One morning he was found asleep at his sentry post. He had taken the place of a sick comrade, and had been on continuous duty for 36 hours. He was tried and condemned to be shot, under stern conditions of the military law covering such cases.

When the war department refused to set aside the sentence of the court-martial, the captain of the boy's company rushed to the White House and told his story to Lincoln. He declared that if anyone, he was the one that should be shot. For it was he who had kept that brave and faithful soldier for so long on duty. Mr. Lincoln rode out to the grand camp and inquired into circumstances, and within an hour, by means of executive pardon, had restored William Scott to his regiment.

Six months later William Scott died a heroe's death. In the lost battle of Lee's Mill, he was the last to retreat from a field on which half his company had fallen. He bore a wounded officer to safety and then returned twice, under fire, and saved two more comrades from capture, but he himself fell mortally wounded, and was carried to the rear. Before he died he wanted President Lincoln to know that he had served his country faithfully. "Tell him I tried to serve them well and be true to the flag. Thank him for giving me a chance to die in battle and not like a coward at the hands of my comrades." "Good-bye," he added cheerily after a time. With a smile on his brave young lips, he fell into eternal sleep.

FOURTH PRIZE

Abraham Lincoln was born in a log cabin Feb. 12, 1809. His father was always moving the family from one state to another and his mother could not stand moving from one place to the other and died when Abraham was nine years of age. Abraham and his father made the coffin out of old tree limbs.

Abraham and his sister slept in the loft of the cabin and Abraham's father went away that night and left Abraham and his sister alone in the cabin and the wind came through the cracks and Abraham and his sister were afraid and they thought the noise was wild animals or Indians.

After a while Abraham's father came home with his wife and Abraham and his sister were glad. One time Abraham's step-mother sent him to the store to get her some goods and he heard the people in the store talking about a professor having a story of Washington's life, and so Abraham ordered the goods and he went to the professor's house and the professor was sitting on the porch reading a book, and Abraham asked him if he could borrow Washington's life, and the old man said if he would take care of it. And Abraham promised him he would and the old man went in the house and got Washington's life and gave it to the boy. Abraham went to the store, got the goods and went back home with the goods and his step-mother was sitting at the window sewing, and Abraham held the book up in his hand to show his mother and Abraham ran in the house and started to read. His father would not let him. He could not read or write and did not want Abraham to, so Abraham had to go to work and he put some bread in his pocket for dinner and his book in the other. At noon he started to eat and plunged into the first chapter of the book and he had to start to work again. At night they went home and Abraham layed down by the fire and read the story. At night he took the book, laid it on a piece of wood in the loft. It rained hard that night and got the book wet. It faded the words and Abraham took the book back to the professor the next morning. The professor was mad when he saw the book.

The book was only worth $2. He wanted $5 for it. So Abraham promised to pay for it by husking corn for the professor. He promised to start the next day. After Abraham paid for the book his cousin saved money and bought Abraham a book of Arabian Nights.

Abraham said, whatever I am or hope to be I owe to my mother.

Abraham had Arabian Nights, Aesop Fables and Pilgrim's Progress. Men would come riding through on horseback and Abraham would run to the door before they could get off their horses and would ask them questions about Washington and other famous men.

Abraham's father was moving in a covered wagon. Abraham would walk along the side and pat the oxen on the back and the little dog always walked along the side of Abraham, and would chase rabbits and squirrels up the trees. One day the dog chased a rabbit and the wagon went on. They crossed a little creek, the ice was thin and broke. They were on the bank and heard a dog bark. They saw the little dog running up and down the bank. The dog thought the ice would not hold him. The older people said, leave the dog alone and come on. Abraham said he will starve to death or get killed. Abraham took off his heavy shoes and stockings, waded back and got the dog.

Abraham and his friends were riding down the Mississippi river in a boat. He saw a slave market and he said: "If I am ever president I will hit the slavery and hit it hard." Abraham was elected President of the United States. When Abraham was president, his cousin, Bennie Hanks, came to see him and asked him why he wore that gold watch and chain, and Abraham said, "If you had a watch you would wear it, too." So Abraham went out of the room and came in with an old silver watch he had and gave it to his cousin. Abraham said "this is yours." He was offered $50 for it and he would not part with it because it belonged to Abraham Lincoln.

Abraham and his wife were sitting in a show and a man by the name of Wilkes Booth shot him, April 14, 1865, and Wilkes Booth jumped from the balcony and broke his leg and he got out to his horse. He lived in a barn. He saw men coming toward the barn on horses. He hid, but they came to give their horse a drink and lightning struck the barn that night and burned and killed Wilkes Booth.

FIFTH PRIZE

Joseph C. Smith, 125 Midland avenue, St. Aloysius school, 5A grade.

Abraham Lincoln was born in Hardin county, Feb. 12, 1809, in a log cabin home. He was the son of Thomas and Nancy Hanks Lincoln.

The school he attended was five miles from his home, and the teacher could only teach reading, writing and arithmetic.

The Lincoln family moved to a farm near Gentryville, Indiana, in 1816. It was here that Lincoln's mother died in 1818. Abraham was only nine years old and helped his father make a rough coffin in which his mother was buried. His first letter was written to a preacher, asking him to stop on his next round and say a prayer over his mother's grave.

Lincoln's mother always urged him to "Learn all he could and be of some account in the world."

Lincoln was always honest, loyal and affectionate, and always tried to do good.

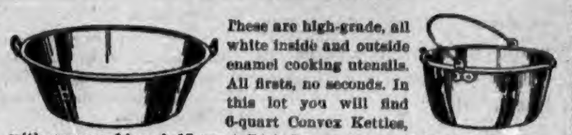
When 21 years old he helped his father build a cabin in Macon county, Illinois. He cleared the land and split wainut rails to fence the clearing.

Lincoln was a self educated man, a good lawyer and orator. In 1832 he was captain in the Black Hawk war, was postmaster at New Salem in 1833, and was a member of the legislature from 1834 to 1842.

November 4, 1842, Lincoln married Mary Todd. They had four sons.

He was elected president of the United States in 1860, and inaugurated March 4, 1861.

On January 1, 1863, he issued the Emancipation Proclamation. He was re-elected president in 1864.



Lincoln was shot by J. Wilkes Booth at Ford's theater, Washington, April 14, 1865, and died the next morning. He was buried May 4, 1865, at Springfield, Illinois.

They say Lincoln had the brain of a sage, the foresight of a prophet, and the tender heart of a mother. He was a firm believer in the saying, "Laugh and the world laugh's with you." He was a good storyteller and nearly all his stories contain morals and lessons that could not be taught in any other way. It is said "Lincoln, like the Man of Galilee, spoke to the people in parables."

Still standing, at the corner of Front and East streets, Bloomington, Ill., is old Major's hall, in which on May 29, 1856, Lincoln delivered his famous "Lost Speech" and which many writers claim marked the birth of the present-day Republican party. A bronze plate on the side of the building was installed by the Daughters of the American Revolution and marks the site of the historic event of 69 years ago.

Holder's Helpful Hints

THE WISE MAN AT HOME

One Sunday afternoon I went over to my neighbor's house to see his brother, George. George had been sick, but had recovered and on this day was leaving for the city. When I arrived, the car was at the block and George and his wife were entering it to take their departure. My friend, his wife, daughter and two sons and I bade farewell and turned back to the shaded yard. The mother and daughter went to the house, while we four sat in easy chairs on a carpet of grass as soft as velvet, thinking our own thought, but saying nothing for many minutes. Then my neighbor turned to his two boys and said: "Sons, for a long while I have had in my mind something I have wanted to tell you when the time seemed right. Today seems opportune, and for reasons of my own I want to talk to you with our friend here present.

During the years you have been growing up I have said little to you of business or of life and how to get the most out of them, but this year you finish your college course, and next fall you will be off to the university—one to be a physician and surgeon; the other to be an architect. These are not the vocations I would have chosen. I have hoped that you would choose some open air life where your associates would be the big men of the open country. If you could know the prairies and plains; if you could sleep on a bed of desert sand as wide and wonderful as the ocean; if you could walk in the forests and learn the language of the trees; if you could feel the powers of the mountains which talk to you of the mysteries beyond the stars in the silent night or when storms are breaking over the peaks, you would know life in a way you can never learn it within the four walls of an office with your feet under a desk.

But every boy has a right to choose his own career, and I am content. Up to this time I have taught you but two things: to honor women and to love truth. If you honor women you will be good men. If you love truth you will be good citizens. If you hold fast to these principles you have a sure foundation for the house of life you will soon begin to build. Other principles are but incidents, but some of them are important and will affect your peace of mind and contentment of spirit.

There is only one crop of land but an endless crop of babies, and every baby born anywhere on the round earth increases the value of every acre of your land.

HILLTOPLETS

The city and state have been keeping tab for a long while on traffic using the various thoroughfares leading out of city. One of the official counters stationed at Broad and Hague last Saturday, and for several days previous, stated that East Broad street ranked first, North High second, West Broad third and East Main street fourth in the number of vehicles passing over these various city streets. He also stated that statistics have proven that in the proposed improvement of West Broad street paving brick should be used instead of resurfacing.

If spring has not "ariv" it surely is not far away, according to present indications—marbles, kites, roller skates and, someone said something about hearing a robin, but—

We think one of the surest signs of its nearness is the abbreviated coal pile in our basement.

One of the boys that took part in the Record Lincoln Essay contest remarked as he handed in his sealed contribution, that he wanted to win so he could take the money and buy his girl a valentine.

Well, since this historical old world didn't come to a "period" and take its place amongst the has-beens last Saturday, suppose we'll have to turn our attentions to the tin cans, Christmas trees, etc., in our alleys before long. Kind o' thought maybe this year might be a "skip-stop" in that line and that by this time we'd be where tin cans, etc., cease to trouble. But 'sno-use.

As the population of the Hilltop is moving westward, a nice park to the west of the Hilltop would be a great asset to the residents of this section at the present time and will be a necessity in the near future. There is a tract of wooded land west of Hague avenue, between Broad street and Sullivant avenue that should be acquired by the city for this purpose at this time, while it can be had at a much more reasonable price than would be possible should it be purchased and platted into lots. Would not this be a good move for the improvement and civic associations of the Hilltop to look into?

In 1923 at least two of the larger American publishers made more from serious books than from fiction. Retail booksellers report a similar condition in their sales. By "serious books" are meant works of history, biography, travel and the like, written in non-technical language.

ROY SMITH IS CAPTURED BY C. H. STITES

Capturing "Bad Men" Getting to Be Old Story for Stites—One Other Experience

The capture of Roy Smith, the boy law-breaker, by C. H. Stites, was the second time in about a year that Mr. Stites has bumped up against that sort of an experience. Mr. Stites states that during the mixup at Eureka and Sullivant avenue, Smith shot at him about five times, but did not hit him, the bullets going wild, one of which hit Robert Hott in the leg. Smith then ran south of Sullivant avenue, where Stites succeeded in capturing him.

About a year ago Mr. Stites was held up by a bandit, Roy Sandles, near Sullivant avenue, who relieved him of his money, after which Stites grabbed Sandles' gun and they had a scuffle during which time Stites bit Sandles, causing him to release the gun, and then shot him in the back. He also received a broken rib and several blows from Sandles' blackjack. Sandles then ran and jumped into an auto with two buddies, who took him to Marion and placed him in a hospital, where, he thinking he was going to die, confessed to the holdup and also the shooting of a man in Chillicothe and killing a man in West Virginia. It is stated that he is now doing 15 years in the Ohio penitentiary.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Owens of Watsontown, Pa., who are in Columbus attending the Ceramic convention at Ohio State university, were dinner guests of Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Shields Thursday evening. Mrs. Shields is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Owens.

The Story Hour, which is held every Saturday afternoon from 1 to 2 o'clock at the Holmes library under the auspices of the Hilltop Circle of the Child Conservation league, will be conducted this week by Mrs. Attie Metzler, a member of the Story Tellers' league of this city. All children are invited to attend.

Columbus manufacturers and jobbers entertained the wives of the Ohio Hardware Dealers' association, in attendance at the convention last week, Wednesday afternoon at the Lazarus tea room. Mrs. W. L. Milliken, 55 South Warren avenue, was a member of the committee in charge of arrangements.

Last Thursday afternoon Mrs. O. A. Ferguson, 290 Nashobs avenue, delightfully entertained a number of guests in honor of the birthday anniversary of her sister, Mrs. H. M. Freeman. Those present were: Mrs. Frank Grimm, Mrs. John Hastings, Mrs. Frank Frallinger, Mrs. Elma Haab, Mrs. Harriett Trott, Mrs. H. M. Freeman and the hostess, Mrs. Ferguson.

About 45 members of the Burgess Avenue U. B. church drove down to Ashville to hear Rev. E. B. White, the former pastor of the church, who is conducting evangelistic meetings at Ashville.

Rev. Richard E. Shields of Hoge Memorial church attended the meeting of the committee on Christian Education held in the First Presbyterian church at Cincinnati Tuesday morning and afternoon. He represented Columbus Presbytery in the meeting.

Friends of Mrs. Frank Thunes, 70 South Eureka avenue, are pleased to learn that she is recovering from her severe attack of tonsilitis.

HILLCREST CHOIR ENJOYS SURPRISE AND SOCIAL TIME

After Completing Rehearsal Friday Night a Spread Was Served in Basement.

Last Friday night a well planned scheme to surprise the members of Hill Crest choir was carried through with remarkable success. J. C. Dickerson and A. C. Skipper were the prime movers of the whole event (of course the leader of the choir had to be let in on what was "doin' "),

Having lined up the singers after a good rehearsal for Sunday's work they marched to the basement for a particular drill to be learned. They marked time in pure regimental style led by the director and organist down the flights of stairs until the basement, which was totally dark, was reached. But they kept together until all had marched across in front of the stage ready for the drill to take place—and stood waiting for the janitor to turn on the lights (which in some way he had forgotten to do). But suddenly the lights came on and the whole bunch was surrounded with fathers, mothers, wives, husbands and sweethearts galore. Harry Wilson got so excited in the dark that he hastened to find an electric switch and nearly upset the tables. But, oh! boy there couldn't have been a more completely surprised bunch. It was fun. Harry couldn't even talk. But later when he was chosen to be toastmaster his speech all came back.

A regular concert program was carried out by the following singers in a double quartet: Mae Vollmer, Mrs. Harry Stephens, soprano; Mrs. Beatrice Morgan-Willits, Mrs. Paul Benton, contraltos; John More, Charles W. Humphreys, bassos; W. E. Knox, Lewis H. Gay, tenors.

Mrs. Stephens, Mrs. Benton, John More and Lew Gay each sang a solo and each gave an encore to the delight of everyone.

Wayne Miller had that usual charm and assurance in his accompaniment on all numbers rendered.

Then came the eats, and plenty of them, too! Harry presided as toast master in a very humorous manner and things were at a high pitch. Ray Evans in his talk had some very witty sayings, Rev. McFarlane made a good talk and told some good stories.

The waiters were given a hearty vote of thanks for good service as well as the singers for their splendid music. America was sung and after benediction all went home happy because of this jolly surprise party.

The next regular meeting of the Child Conservation league will be held next Monday noon, Feb. 23, at the home of Mrs. E. B. Ward, 223 North Warren avenue. This meeting is to be a pot-luck luncheon, followed by open discussion of the C. C. L. work. All members are urged to be present.

WASHINGTON BIRTHDAY PARTY.

On Friday evening, Feb. 20, Glenwood leagues are planning a George Washington party to be held in the recreational rooms of the church. A special program with a social hour has been arranged. These social gatherings are a fine opportunity for the young folks of the Hilltop to become better acquainted.

Mr. Russel Randles and Miss Stella Davies were married on Saturday, Feb. 14, at the Glenwood Methodist parsonage, Dr. G. F. Barber officiating. They were accompanied by the bride's brother, Mr. Thomas Davies.

HILLTOPLETS

We heard a robin the other day, but couldn't just decide whether it was rehearsing for its opening spring song or rattling its skid chains.

The frame building in the rear of the new Orr & Day flat building on North Oakley avenue that served as the first meeting place of the Hilltop Lutheran church and afterward for the congregation of the Hilltop Church of God is being given a once-over treatment in preparation for a garage.

Roy Smith Bound Over

Leroy Smith, 18, colored, 233 Clarendon avenue, was held to the grand jury under $7500 bond by Judge Mahaffey Wednesday. He was charged with shooting to wound Robert Hott, 448 Centner avenue and burglarizing the home of William Hess, 225 Nashoba avenue and Carl E. Smith, 236 Columbian avenue.

JOHN BURROUGHS P.-T. A. MEETING

Father and Son Night Outstanding Feature—Fine Spirit of Cooperation Manifest.

Friday evening, Feb. 6, at the John Burroughs school, Father and Son night was the outstanding feature of the regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher association. The exhibition given by the Boys' Drum Corps showed some real skill, which they have worked hard to acquire in a short time. Another pleasing number was the song "Father," sung by the Boys' Glee club of the sixth grade under the direction of Miss Phelan. Mr. Scott Wehe of the city council addressed the audience on the subject of city ordinances, in an enlightening manner.

The spirit of Co-operation between parents and teachers at John Burroughs school is remarkable; the interest and support given by Hilltop people to this work are unusually fine. This is greatly appreciated by Miss Charters and her teachers, and by the boys and girls whom these parents come out to hear.

Florida Letter

Publishers Record.

Since our last letter we have traveled the East Coast from Titusville to Miami, a distance of about 200 miles along the Indian river and Atlantic coast, and we are delighted with the scenery and beauty spots along the way. The land lies well, though much of it is wet and swampy, quite a good deal is under cultivation, especially is this true of the ocean coast. We saw hundreds of acres of celery in the vicinity of Melbourne, and the sight is beautiful indeed. Melbourne is one of the very old towns of the state, but just within the last few years have the inhabitants awakened to the fact of their possibilities, and it is rapidly coming to the front as one of the important cities of the east coast. There are very few farm houses to be seen, as most of the people live in villages or cities.

The houses, as a rule are not large, and of bungalow style, but the surroundings generally are beautiful.

The windows and porches and even the fences, where they have fences, are entwined with beautiful flowering vines and other flowers as well and brilliantly colored foliage and shrubbery.

Our trip, as planned and carried out, took us from St. Cloud, north through the most beautiful cities of Orlando, Winter Park, Sanford, and thence east to the coast, a round trip of something like 600 miles to Miamia and return. The Indian river is one of the most beautiful streams in Florida, and the new Dixie highway, which is not yet completed, runs parallel with it for many miles.

West Palm Beach, on this road, is a fine resort, but it does not compare with Palm Beach, whose magnificent hotel looms up in full view to its western boundary.

We had the supreme pleasure of driving over to the faunous beach and beholding some of its exceeding beauty and wealth.

The hotel is the largest in the state and perhaps the second largest in the United States. It is said to contain 2300 rooms, with 17 miles of hallway and attended by 1600 servants. We were a little hungry when we passed it, but we were informed that a plain sandwich would cost us $2.50, and if we had mustard it was $3, so we all said we were not much hungry, anyhow, and we would go to the next town.

A very familiar sight in almost any direction is the subdivision of new towns, and the real estate signs boosting them. If all the new plats and new villages just springing up in Florida become cities, as their promoters claim they will, this state will have the banner population.

Many northern people are investing here, and some have received large returns, but just where to invest is the important question.

The drive along the coast is a most delightful one. Large fields of pineapple, many of them already showing half-grown fruit, and others just starting from the blossom, attract the eye and is one of the pleasing pictures. Not less attractive, however, are the large cocoanut trees, hundreds of which line this beautiful trail. Many of them are loaded with their fruit ranging in size from the bud to the full grown nut. We crossed a number of streams, including the Jupiter, Sebastian and St. Lucia rivers. Arriving at Hollywood-by-the-Sea, we stopped long enough to secure our rooms at the great Hollywood hotel, and then left for Miami, which is about 18 miles farther south. We made a tour of this wonderful city of fine homes and indescribable beauty of floral environment.

We crossed the far-famed causeway spanning the St. Lucia to Miami Beach.. Miami has grown in the last few years to a city of 80,000, and is growing rapidly in every direction. It is said that property values have increased in the last 10 years from 5000 to 8000 per cent.

We came back to Hollywood to remain two days. This city, three years ago, was a thicket of palmetto and swamp. The city is beautifully and scientifically laid out. It has already 2 fine hotels, churches, school, postoffice, banks and quite an array of business, with a population of 3500. It lies directly on the ocean coast, and the beach, when once entirely completed and the new hotel erected, will be one of the finest to be found in the state. It will be several miles in length, and faced by a wide cement plaza and a fine ocean drive clear to Miami. Arrangements have been made for the erection of a great harbor, which will give the place pre-eminence among southern cities. The cheapest desirable lots are already selling for $2000 and up.

I see in a Columbus paper that the ground hog has predicted an early spring. I enclose a few verses clipped from a poem, entitled "The Ground Hog's Soliloquy," by the late C. B. Hughes, who then lived in St. Cloud:

I'm a silly old fellow to come out in the spring
And be tossed about like a feather,
And shiver and shake to maintain this old fake,
So I'll drop the old thing altogether.

I know what I'll do, by St. Patrick's old stroll!
When quite ready I'll tell it out loud.
I've heard of a clime, where there's no winter time,
In the southland; they call it St. Cloud.

Down there the old fellows who fought for the flag
Are enjoying themselves all togvether.
And they don't care a snap for the weather.

Whenever they are ready to plant, don't you know
It's as easy as to roll from a log.
There being no winter to break, don't you see
They need not depend on the "Hog."

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

THE HEART.

Advertisements for kidney remedies will ask, with more wisdom than honesty, about your back-pains in the region of the kidneys. This characterizes it as a "safe remedy" and you buy the medicine. Likewise, you have pains over your heart and, finding your symptoms described in the ads, you fall for the "heart medicine." And, indeed the sedative medicine may relieve your pains, which, you may say, is money well spent and you recommend it to others—even write testimonials about its wonderful effect. More often than otherwise, you have no kidney or heart trouble and the pains in your chest walls have no connection with those organs. But the element of fear, so indidiously encouraged, helps to sell the medicine or the doctor's services.

Your faithful and trusted doctor knows, or should know, your case, and should reassure you, but he will not take time to explain to you the intricacies of the two nervous systems in our bodies, and of their intimate relations (similar to electricity), by which a disturbance of a nerve may cause pain in a distant part of the body.

As stated, a sedative medicine may relive pain, but a more rational treatment would be to take the abnormal pressure off the innocent nerve and so allow it to behave itself. It is when nerves are not interfered with, in any way, that we are not conscious that we have them. That is health.

Strange as it may seem, the heart, having no sensory nerves, has no pain in itself. The heart muscle has been successfully operated upon, and it might be done even without anesthetic, for the same reason. Gashes in the heart have been stitched, with some loss of blood, of course, but it may be its own borrowed blood, and not from the blood stream that the heart is constantly pumping. A most delicate operation, for the heart must work the while—it cannot take a vacation.

Heart troubles are more often "functional" (sympathy from other affected organs) than organic (itself diseased). Short, difficult breathing means depletion of blood because of air hunger. The blood, receiving too little oxygen, is soon overcharged with carbonic acid gas, which the lungs, with deeper breathing, might have averted. The impurity of this blood affects the heart for discomfort, but not necessarily to the point of disease. It is easily seen that the rational remedy is deeper breathing. Distress from climbing a hill or going up stairs is a danger signal, which may mean that you should do more of it, or less. Consult your doctor. He may prescribe less exercise and corresponding rest for the heart muscle.

Communication

Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 4, 1925.
Publishers Record:

We started for the south on Oct. 10 in a Ford sedan. Mr. McMasters, my daughter, Elizabeth, and myself. We visited at quite a number of towns and arrived here Nov. 2.

I was stationed on Lookout Mountain in 1864 and have always had a desire to come back here and visit the old scenes and note the changes that 60 years would make. The change is truly wonderful. From a sad little village of 12,000 people, laid waste by the Civil war, it has grown to a city of 137,000 population. Northern capital and enterprise has made a flourishing city of all kinds of industries, especially in the manufacture of cotton goods. The city lies in a pocket surrounded by mountains, which are all famous in history of the Civil war from '61 to '65.

Lookout mountain looms up on the southwest 2800 feet high, where Gen. Joe Hooker had his fight, attacking from Moccasin Point.

Signal Mountain, northwest, 1700 feet high, and Missionary Ridge, being east of the city, all historic points. I spent last Sunday eight miles south of Chattanooga on the battle field of Chickamauga, where so many of our men lost their lives from the 26th to the 28th of September, 1863. The pass that General Thomas held to keep Longstreet out of Chattanooga was the severest struggle of the battle here, 14,000 men losing their lives in the two days' fight.

The old blacksmith shop, Gordon's mill, Brotherton house, Dyers and many others are still standing and are jealously guarded by the United States government. The battlefield covers 27,000 acres, with fine cement drives curving all through the park, where magnificent monuments and slabs show wherever an Ohio or other Union forces were fighting. I want to go down there some morning soon, take a lunch and spend a whole day there taking notes of where the different regiments, division and brigades were located.

We have had no snow here and outside of plenty of rain lately have had fine weather.

We will start home about March 20 and arrive in Columbus the first week in April.

Give my regards to my host of friends on the Hilltop.

BACK TRAILING ON OLD SCHOOL DAYS

NAPOLEON AT REST.

(From McGuffey's Reader)

His Falchion flashed, along the Nile;
His hosts he led through Alpine snows;
O'er Moscow's towers, that blazed the while,
His eagle flag unrolled—and froze.
Here sleeps he now, alone! Not one
Of all the kings, whose crowns he gave,
Bends o'er his dust; nor wife nor son
Has ever seen or sought his grave

Behind this sea-girt rock, the star,
That led him on from crown to crown,
Has sunk; and nations from afar
Gazed as it faded and went down.
High is his couch; the ocean flood
Far, far below, by storms is curled;
As round him heaved, while high he stood,
A stormy and unstable world.

Alone he sleeps! The mountain cloud,
That night hangs round him, and the breath
Of morning scatters, is the shoud
That wraps the conqueror's clay in death.
Pause here! The far-off world, at last,
Breathes free; the hand that shook its thrones,
And to the earth its niters cast,
Lies powerless now beneath these stones.

Hark! Comes there from the pyramids,
And from Siberian waste of snow,
And Europe's hills, a voice that bids
The world be awed to mourn him? No!
The only, the perpetual dirge
That's heard there is the sea-bird's cry,
The mournful murmur of the surge—
The cloud's deep voices, the wind's low sigh.

—John Piermont.

The author of the above poem was born in 1785 at Litchfield, Conn., and died in 1866. Was graduated from Yale college in 1804. He studied and graduated in law, but owing to his dislike of the practice, he entered into the mercantile business, in which he made a failure. In 1810, after graduating in theology at Cambridge, he was engaged as pastor of the Hollis Street Unitarian church at Boston, where he preached about 20 years. In his time and age he was acknowledged quite an able writer. Among some of the books published were a series of school readers, which enjoyed a well deserved popularity for many years.

This poem, being written by him in compliance to a request, is smooth, musical and vigorous, which is characteristic of all his poetical writings. We always enjoyed teaching this little poem to somewhat advanced pupils in school, for it contained such sweet and ample food for their minds and imaginations. The "sea-girt rock" in the second stanza means the island of St. Helena, where Napoleon was confined six years, and died and was buried there May 5, 1821. In 1840 his remains were transferred to the hotel des envalides, Paris.

UNDER THE SPELL OF THE CHAMPION.

M. M. Marshall

Outstanding on the wall of memory, is a vivid picture of a little white, one-room school house, located on a green sloping knoll near the foot of a mountain-like hill in southern Ohio. Its elevation gives to the observer a magnificent view of the winding river and the great hills and fertile valleys on either side.

A stream of water called "Fairy Creek" winds around the hill from the west, zingzagging its way, rippling over great boulders, swirling among the willows along the shore, whispering, bubbling and foaming, seemingly in a hurry to reach the place a mile below where it empties into the river. At high tide it widens, cutting deep into sandy places, leaving miniature lakes here and there which is utilized as "wading pools" in summer, and "skating rinks" in winter by the young people fortunate enough to be enrolled as pupils in Whitethorne college. The house stands close beside a little grove of sweet locust and graceful beechnut trees, with here and there an oak proudly towering above them, together furnishing much needed shade in summer, and nesting place for numerous song birds whose joyous notes enliven the dullest days.

But as the summer morning of which I write, not a note was heard, save now and then, a sad chirp as of a bird lost from its mate, or facing eminent danger. The cry grew louder and sadder until it seemed like a wail of agony. And awed silence prevailed in the school room. Each sunny face grew sober. Dismissing an hour before the usual time, the teacher said, "Let's find that suffering bird before eating our lunch."

All hurried to the grove, and soon discovered on the limb of an oak some fifteen or twenty feet from the ground, a little brown wren looking intently up into the tree and hopping higher and higher, still uttering its sad wail. One of the largest boys, after a strenuous effort to reach the first limb, was climbing the tree when he hurriedly descended, crying out in alarm, "There's a big snake in the tree looking down at the bird."

Sure enough in the forks of the oak, coiled close, almost hidden from view, was a huge black snake, its head stretched out on the top of a limb, its piercing diamond-like eyes fixed upon the little wren.

Under the lure of its charm the bird was powerless to break the spell, and was slowly but surely hopping to its own doom. We shouted, threw sticks and pebbles, but the bird seemed not to notice us.

Finally, some men at work in a field nearby, came to our assistance and, with strong arms, big clubs and rocks brought the snake tumbling to the ground and quickly took his life while the little wren, with a glad cry, flew away to safety.

This is a true story, and illustrates the danger of "charmers" which line our pathway.

ENSEMBLE SUITS MAINTAIN A STELLAR ROLE STYLES

The curtain has gone up on the first act of spring's style drama and there is no gainsaying the success of the ensemble suit, or costume suit.

When it made its entry on fashion's stage a new star strode into the limelight and spring discloses that it is maintaining its prestige. The costume suit is one of the things that promises a happy ending to the story of spring business.

The ensemble, or costume suit, may be of the two-piece or three-piece variety, but it usually consists of two pieces—a one-piece frock and a coat to match, as in the handsome model pictured here. Each piece is complete in itself and they may go their separate ways—but they belong to one another and look their best when worn together. The suit pictured is made of a twill, in the color called rosewood, and beautifully braided in an ingenious banding pattern which is cleverly manipulated to indicate the pockets in coat. The coat has raglan sleeves and is lined with russet crepe, and there are invisible plaits down the back, to give it sufficient fullness for a comfortable stride. Thus, adroitly, it maintains the long, slender lines that women adore. It is provided with self ties and a single fastening at the front, almost on a line with the pockets. Distinction is written in every detail of this model which will compel attention and admiration.

A good many of the new ensemble suits reveal a combination of plain cloths and printed silks, and they contribute a youthful note to the mode, hard to achieve in the costume suit, heretofore. But in the collections made ready for spring, we may find any degree of gaiety or any degree of dignity that we may be looking for.

Julia Bottomley.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Lear of South Burgess avenue, Columbus, were entertained Sunday at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chamberlin of Smith road.

Mr. and Mrs. George Stevenson and grandson, Leon Hope, spent the week-end in Cleveland at the home of M. F. Glenn.

A patriotic program was given by Rome school last Thursday, Feb. 12, at the M. E. church. The purpose was to finish paying for the Victrola.

Before the program a supper was served in the basement of the church, consisting of sandwiches, pickles, potato salad, baked beans, cake, coffee and ice cream.

The room was decorated in red and white, with red hearts for menu cards. The school wishes to thank the community for the interest they showed and the parents for their liberal donations.

The first, second and third grades gave a drill, "The Flag of All Nations." The dresses were made by the primary teachers, Misses Lillian and Elsie Kreiger.

Helen Maier gave a recitation, "The Setting Hen."

Ar operetta, "Betty Ross or the Origin of the Flag," was presented by the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grade pupils. The theme of the play deals with the making of the first flag by Betsy Ross.

The leading characters were as follows:

BONERS

Residents of a certain street were awakened early one morning recently by the insistent ringing of an alarm clock somewhere in the neighborhood.

Windows were closed by sleepy-eyed residents, who wondered where that alarm clock was. The mystery of the clock was solved later when one of the housewives went to the back porch for the bottle of milk. Instead of milk, she found the alarm clock.

Hurrying into the house, the woman found an empty milk bottle on her dressing table.

She had carried both the bottle and the clock to the porch before retiring. Absent-mindedly she left the clock in the cool night air, and brought the bottle in.

A bushel of corn weighs about 60 pounds and about 33 of these pounds are accounted for by starch. Recently a way has been discovered to convert this starch into sugar. The new product will be only about three fourths as sweet as the common white granulated sugar which is generally used. The advantages of this discovery are that we shall be less dependent on foreign countries for our sugar supply and at the same time will develop corn-growing in the United States.

Substances which closely resemble opals and pearls grow in giant tropical bamboo trees. These trees attain a height of about a hundred feet. When they are young the hollow stems of the bamboo are filled with a jelly-like substance; as the trees grow older this fluid dries up, and a deposit is formed. Some of this helps to make the bamboo stems stiff, but sometimes an excess of the mineral settles in round lumps. These are pale blue or white, becoming phosphorescent when heated.

BANDITS PICK WRONG VICTIM FOR HOLDUP

Command to "Cough Up" Answered by Revolver Shots by Mrs. Carey.

Mrs. Louise Carey, 280 South Eureka avenue, was a poor choice of two bandits who tried to hold her up at the Baby camp stop on Sullivant avenue at about 6 o'clock last Sunday morning.

Mrs. Carey was waiting for a car after finishing her night's work at the institution for feeble minded. A machine drove up on the other side of the street, Mrs. Carey said, and a man stepped out and came toward her. He grabbed at her coat. A button flew off. "Cough up," he said.

She "coughed up" all right, but instead of money she drew a revolver from her purse and fired two shots at the man, who fell face down on the car tracks. A second man then pounced out of the auto, she said, flourishing a revolver. Mrs. Carey took refuge behind a telephone pole, prepared, she said, to "shoot it out" with the second bandit, who, however, apparently had no inclination to force the issue, but bundled his insert companion into the car and sped away.

Her description of the two men, together with the fact that they drove an auto, led police to believe she was accosted by the same pair of criminals who staged three holdups in quick succession Saturday night, and who are believed to be responsible for the robbing of the Donaldson Baking Co. safe early Sunday, when $4000 was obtained.

Announcement is made of the marriage on Feb. 14 of Miss Mary Bostic, 140 North Eureka avenue, and Mr. J. E. Sullivan, 188 South Terrace street.

Hilltop Circle of the Child Conservation league met Monday, Feb. 23, at the home of Mrs. E. B. Ward, 233 North Warren avenue. This was a discussion meeting with a pot-luck luncheon at noon.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Jerman, 47 Clarendon avenue, entertained the following guests at their home Saturday evening: Mr. and Mrs. Elroy Drye, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Close, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Keller and Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. McDowell, jr.

ORGANIZE RADION CLUB AT WEST HI

The Radion club of West High school held their first meeting of the year Friday, Feb. 13.

There were five members remaining from last year's club, all the other members having graduated. For this reason a drive is now on for new members.

Election of officers was held, and the results are as follows: Owen Reel, president; Walter Gibson, vice-president; Jack Merriman, secretary and treasurer. The next meeting will be held Friday, Feb. 20. The present members hope to see their association grow and with these new officers it should be one of West's most active clubs.

The Women's Democratic club of the eleventh ward met at the home of Mrs. Frank Ireland, 67 South Richardson avenue, Monday evening, Feb. 16. The meeting was well attended and some very important business was reported. The next meeting will be a pot-luck supper at the home of Mrs. Carl Hercaw, 78 South Richardson avenue, March 16.

E. J. MOORMAN ROBBED BY MAN AND WOMAN

Forced to Lie on Floor at Point of Gun While Woman Rifles Cash Drawer.

"Lie down on the floor, be quiet, do it quick," were the words that greeted E. J. Moorman, who operates a confectionery at Whitethorne avenue and Broad street, at 11:10 Saturday night, when he looked up as he was preparing a soda for a would-be customer.

Mr. Moorman had been sweeping the sidewalk in front of his place of business before closing for the night, when he notice a machine park in front of Hempy Bros. tire store, one door east of his establishment.

After he had finished sweeping the sidewalk he went into his store, thinking he had locked the door after he entered and began sweeping the floor, preparatory to leaving. However, a young man about 25 years of age and a woman of about 20 entered and asked to be served sodas.

As Mr. Moorman was preparing the sodas the man stuck a gun in his face, forcing him to lie on the floor and ordered the woman to go through Mr. Mooreman's pockets and the cash register. The result of the operation was a gain of $83 for the bandits.

WILL DEDICATE TEMPLE MAR. 30

West Gate Masonic lodge will dedicate its new temple, erected on West Broad street near Roys avenue, March 30. Plans for the occasion are being arranged under the direction of the master of the lodge, C. O. Irwin, 77 South Richardson avenue.

The lease on their present quarters at Burgess avenue and Broad street expires March 30, and it is planned that the various bodies meeting there, including the lodge, chapter, council and Eastern Stars, will have moved into the new temple before that date.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Earl entertained with a dinner Saturday, Feb. 21. The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. Ira T. Hutchinson, Miss Anna Hutchinson, Mr. George Hutchinson, Mr. Hurley Shuster, Miss Eleanor Crawford, Robert G. Earl, Audrey A. Earl and the host and hostess. The occasion was the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson and Mr. and Mrs. Earl.

Group No. 1, Ladies' Aid of Glenwood church will meet at the home of Mrs. C. W. Walton, 39 Eldon avenue, Tuesday, March 3. The assisting hostesses will be: Mrs. C. F. Prior, Mrs. L. G. Shanley, Mrs. R. G. Gibson, Mrs. R. C. Millikin, Mrs. Anna Mott, Mrs. R. B. Bidwell, Mrs. W. T. Riddile and Mrs. M. W. Seiller.

Rees, Mrs. Elmer Houdasholt and Mrs. O. E. Spencer. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. D. U. Creager, 107 North Hague avenue.

Sperry, Mrs. C. C. Cook, Mrs. W. H. Riley, Mrs. C. W. Finley, Mrs. John Durr, Mrs. W. H. Palmer and Mrs. Rex Benefield. Mrs. J. C. Close was director. Hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. R. L. It seems as though the Hilltop has not been behind other localities of the city in the number of hold-ups, burglaries, etc., during the past couple of months, and there have been several instances in which the outlaws succeeded in getting considerable loot and successfully getting away. There has been all manner of comments as to what should be done to check these depredations—more policemen on the districts at night; more motor cops, etc.—but it seems there are some ways in which all can help a bit, and that is examine all windows and see that they have good locks, then at night, or on going away see that they are all securely fastened. Don't go away from the home or retire at night without trying each door as to whether it is locked.

Under no circumstances should a lone woman or girl leave a stranger into the house, whether day or night. If he should say he is a gas or electric meter reader, make him show his badge before you admit him.

Some storekeepers keep only enough money in the cash drawer to make change, and when it accumulates to a larger amount it is taken away or banked. This is a wise idea.

While waiting for a street car at night it is a good plan to go to a stop that is well lighted.

Any person—especially a woman or girl—is taking a big chance in accepting an offer for a ride, over town or back home, in an automobile driven by a stranger, whether the driver be a man or woman. The best way is—play safe and keep out of all of them, unless you are well acquainted with the driver.

On the other hand, no lone woman driving a machine should stop and let a man stranger in, even though he should hail you to do so. There are lots of men (?) practicing that stunt these days.

If you should have a surplus of money that you do not intend using immediately better bank it instead of keeping it around the home.

And we might go on suggesting many paragraphs expounding cautions, but the best method to make the outlaw business unprofitable is to try and guard our property ourselves at all times. We may then be victimized, but small losers.

The Women's Foreign Missionary society of Glenwood church will meet in the Sunday school room of the church Thursday, March 5, at 10 a. m. The following program will be given: Hymn 506; devotionals, Mrs. C. F. Prior; hymn 98; business meeting; chapter III of Ming Wong, Mrs. L. E. Kline; founder's day program of music and prayer will follow.

HEALTH EXPERTS WILL TEST WELLS

A small army of experts of the state health department will begin their journeys to various sections of the state in the near future to examine the water in wells which are used by the traveling public.

Dr. John E. Monger, state director of health, made announcement to this effect Saturday.

"We have completed putting the seal of safety on all wells located on the National highway in Ohio, and most of the Dixie highway," Dr. Monger said. "In addition to this, the highway connecting Cleveland and Cincinnati has been gone over and every well in which the water is used by the public has been either given the seal of safety or condemned and closed.

CONTRACT FOR STORM SEWER IS LET SATURDAY

Work Will Start on Long Needed Improvement as Soon as Weather Will Permit.

Work on the emergency relief sewer for the Hilltop will soon be underway. The contract was awarded Saturday to Conneliey Brothers, Cincinnati, for $154,576.90, which is $39,370 below the estimate of the engineers for the work.

The sewer will be approximately two and one-quarter miles long. A nine foot sewer will extend from the south end of Richardson avenue to the Aiken road and above Richardson avenue will be a 60-inch sewer with a water fall of about 16 feet per second.

This project will give much needed relief to this section of the Hilltop where flooded cellars and streets have frequently followed heavy rains. There were 13 bidders on the project.

If we recollect aright, it seems that about a year ago a resolution was gotten through council to improve that frightful looking half-square of hillside on the south side of Broad street just west of the entrance to Glenwood park, by grading it down to a gradual slope, thus doing away with the mud hole along the sidewalk and beautifying the frontage of the park. Wonder what has become of the project. Why not get busy and see that such a resolution, if not already passed, can be made a reality.

Miss Dorothy Postle, 304 North Warren avenue, was one of the seven Ohio State students honored Wednesday by election to the Phi Betta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity.

The city will close its collection of these assessments Saturday noon and thereafter unpaid assessments will be added to the next regular tax settlement, plus a penalty of 10 per cent. About one-third of the assessments are still unpaid.

ATTEND COUNCIL MONDAY NIGHT

As suggested in the Record several weeks ago, both the Hilltop Civic association and the Hilltop Improvement association have gotten behind the project of a city park west of Hague avenue and between Broad and Sullivant avenues. These associations are pulling hard for this park and are using all the influence they have with the city authorities to accomplish the establishment of a park in this part of the city.

These association must necessarily have the support of all residents of the Hilltop and they request that as many people as possible, whether members of either association or not, attend council meeting next Monday night and lend whatever assistance they can in putting this project across.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL EVENTS OF HILLTOP COMMUNITY INTEREST

ROBERT MORRIS CHAPTER, O. E. S.

That most folks like parties was evident at the meeting of Robert Morris Chapter, O. E. S., Tuesday, Feb. 17. Parties are such a lot of fun and more fitting time to lose one's poise and become acquainted could hardly be asked for. Hearts of the loveliest red abounded everywhere. The meeting opened in short form, thus allowing everything to move along in rapid style toward the party proper. To insure food for everyone, folks counted off. There is a saying, "as long as there's water we'll have soup," and with the splendid crowd present we wondered just how much stretching would need to be done and how big our helpings would be. However, there was no need for alarm, for there was an abundance for all, showing well the efficiency of the social committee. The games planned by the entertainment committee went over in fine style and if anyone failed to learn at least three more names of chapter friends, it is a pity, and folks who hitherto have maintained that musical talent was not theirs became the most enthusiastic musicians.

All single girls of the chapter are requested to meet with our worthy matron, Mrs. Rachel Drye, March 5, at her home, 186 Whitethorne avenue, at 7:30 p. m. All girls are urged to attend this meeting, and Dorothy Dennis, 960 Sullivant avenue, or Irene Priest, 70 North Burgess avenue, will be glad to receive the names of girls interested.

The social club of the chapter met at the home of Mrs. Bertha Elliott, 2941 Crescent Drive, Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. Don Latham, Mrs. Pearl Frazee and Mrs. Chloe Hill assisting hotesses.

The Amity embroidery club was entertained at the home of Mrs. C. E. Morgan, 184 South Terrace street. After the business meeting the afternoon was spent in fancy work and guessing contests. Mrs. Graves, Mrs. Hammond and Mrs. Ditrick won prizes. After a delicious luncheon the club adjourned to meet in two week with Mrs. Ray Rhodes, 32 North Princeton avenue.

The ladies of the Needle Art club and their husbands gave Mrs. McLaughlin on South Burgess avenue a pleasant surprise last Friday evening. The main entertainment of the evening was the radiola, which was very much enjoyed, along with several games which was played, after which the ladies went to the kitchen and unpacked the well filled baskets which they filled before leaving their homes. Everybody ate and had a good time, after which they got a song book that was printed before most of them were born, and they enjoyed old-time songs.

The beautiful new home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Deems, in Broadview, was the scene of a most delightful occasion on Friday evening, when their daughter, Mrs. Albert Jordan, invited a few intimate friends to assist in celebrating her father's birthday anniversary. Years and dignity were forgotten and the evening spent in merriment and fun. The evening closed with the serving of delicious refreshments by Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Herbert Deems. These friends were present to wish Mr. Deems many happy returns of the day: Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chamberlain, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kingery, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Riley, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jordan, Betty and Mildred Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Deems, and the honor guests, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Deems.

Covers were laid for six on Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Staehli of 58 South Ogden avenue, honoring Mr. and Mrs. John Wahl of near Grove City, who were quietly married Tuesday afternoon, Rev. J. M. Wenrich officiating. Mr. Carl Staehli and Mrs. Lillian Adair, brother and sister of the bride, were the attendants. Mr. and Mrs. Wahl will reside near Grove City.

Mrs. E. I. Price, 147 South Terrace street, entertained with a party in honor of the eleventh birthday anniversary of her daughter, Mary Elinor, Saturday afternoon, Feb. 21. The time was pleasantly spent in playing games and contests of various kinds. Recitations were given by Eloise Richey, Amorette Freese, Kathleen Price and Grace Bell Day. Violin solos were played by Louise Farber and Mary Elinor Price. Dainty refreshments were served at the beautifully decorated table, the centerpiece of which was the delicious birthday cake with its eleven pink candles. Many beautiful and useful gifts were received. Those present were: Mary Alice Dorsey, Catherine Wolfendale, Mary Hunter, Louise Farber, Margaret Donaldson, Eloise Ritchey, Virginia Bukey, Kathryn Soutung, Amorette Freese, Ethel Belle Kelley, Mary Allison, Gertrude Noles, Jean Meisop, Jane Harlor, Kathleen Price, and the guest of honor, Mary Elinor Price.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Raines gave a birthday party in honor of their son, Harold, Monday evening: Those present were Miss Marie Lang, Miss Opal McCann, Miss Margaret Thomas, Mrs. Frances Dorney, Miss Lucille Lang, Miss Olive McCann, Miss Wanda Raines, Miss Thelma Raines, Miss Gladys Raines, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Raines, Miss Evelyn Strain of Logan, Mr. Floyd Kelly, Mr. Thomas Tobin, Mr. Vaughn Seeds, Mr. Clarence Odell, Mr. Clyde Kelly and Mr. Ralph Bryan.

HEALTH HINTS.

The impure blood affecting the heart may be caused by accumulations of pus at teeth, appendix or tonsils. Rheumatism, by causing an inflamed condition, may shrink the heart valves and result in overwork, as well as undernourishment for the heart muscle. The special blood supply to the heart muscle (coronary artery) may be diseased and cause Angina Pectoris—a most distressing disease. Or there may be accumulations of fat about the heart, etc., all of which should be properly sensed by the examining physician whose advice as to life and habits should be carefully followed. To submit to most careful examination, periodically, is becoming habitual with more middle aged and elderly people every year.

Imagine the blood course from the heart to your finger tips and to all points in your body. It starts out through the one large artery—the aorta—which is soon divided and subdivided, and thus multiplied indefinitely, until no point of your flesh can be pricked with a fine needle without rupturing one of these fine blood vessels. It (the blood) is pushed on through other small vessels (veins) which increase in size and decrease in number until reduced to one large vein which returns the blood, with its accumulated load of impurities, to the heart, which by the same pumping process sends this impure blood by another route, on a similar trip through the lungs, to be purified, and is returned to the heart in an incredibly short time (some authorities claim in one minute), to repeat the journey.

This routine of pumping began before you were born, and will continue while you live, and possibly a little longer! Yes, the nerve rythm has been known to keep the heart beating a short time after death. The wonder is that the heart can work so incessantly and so long. Even with a normal nervous system, its endurance in constant activity through a long life is most wonderful.

We who have all our nerves intact cannot fully realize how helpless we would be with even a nerveless and withered arm, and a general paralysis is "usually the beginning of the end." yes, the beginning too often dates back to physical indiscretion and general wrong livi g.

Our nerves must not only be normal, but the blood vessels must have their natural elasticity to be acted upon by the nerves. This natural, wave-like, onward movement is a wonderful aid to the heart in pushing the blood onward through the arteries. With hardened arteries, then the heart does the work of both and is, therefore, overworked. Herein is reason enough for limited capacity, distressed living, heart failure and shortened life—the cost of all intemperate living.

Natural death is very rare; the ordinary, as well as the extraordinary, premature death, can hardly be called "God's will," and the crime of the ages and civilization is slow suicide.

RAPID GROWTH OF OYSTERS

Young oysters grow very rapidly. When first hatched, the eggs are single cells, but under favorable conditions they grow by subdivision and in from six to 10 hours become free-swimming larvae. The larvae are almost microscopic in size, but by the time they are two days old they have acquired a tiny pair of shells. After drifting about for two or three weeks the baby oyster attaches itself to some solid object in the water, then settles down for life or until it is dug up to grace someone's dinner table.

Holder's Helpful Hints

WHEN A MAN MARRIES

After a while you will marry. No father can advise his son what woman to fall in love with—that is a question of personal temperament and men have very little to do with it, because, while the men do the courting, the women do the choosing. They choose us and use us, and abuse us, and love us through good and evil days—God bless them—and there is not a man anywhere good enough to be a good woman's mate. But if sentiment does not sidetrack you into some wilderness of passions, marry a woman who worships babies and loves cats. And when you get her, you will want a home. You will want a home of your own.

Don't be a renter.

A renter is a pauper.

He begs the right to live on another man's saving, and on another man's land, and he pays well for the privilege.

The first serious act of your life should be to buy a home and pay for it—own it.

Forget every luxury until the last dollar of mortgage is redeemed, and then you have a luxury which is priceless. Your garden feeds your table. The fragrance of flowers will not come from a greenhouse. You will distil it in your own yard from God's showers and sunshine and dew. It will be home grown, mixed with all the tendrest sentiments of wife and laughing children and love. This fragrance of home becomes delicious and intoxicating. You will become so drunk with it that you will throw all other interests of life to the winds to protect it from risk and hazard. It is your kingdom and throne.

Would a king build a kingdom on leased soil?

Would a monarch establish a throne on rented land?

My sons, your homes will be more priceless to you than any king's kingdom, and more precious than any monarch's throne. In the days of thy youth learn wisdom. Begin now to buy your homes, and protect them with your lives.

Boys, buy land.

BACK TRAILING ON OLD SCHOOL DAYS

By W. S.

I wonder how many pupils of the higher elementary grades, or even high school grades, could, if asked to do so, bound each state of the United States, and then name the capital city of each state and tell where that city is located.

Well, that was one of the features we used to study in our geography lessons of 40 and 50 years ago. And we used to have these drilled so thoroughly into our memories that I believe a large number of us "grandparents" of today, who were school pupils then, can, with a little mental "dressing up" bound most of the states of the union, also name the capital cities of the states.

Since those days a big change has taken place as regards to the states of the union. For instance—there was then only one Dakota (a territory), which in 1889 was split and two states, North and South Dakota, resulted. Also during the same year the territories of Montana and Washington were admitted as states.

The section of country known in those days as Indian Territory is now Oklahoma. And that vast scope of "wild west" comprising the territories of Arizona, New Mexico, Wyoming and Utah, have bene admitted as full-fledged states, the latter as late as 1896.

As an aid to memory we used to sing a song connecting the states and their capitals up together with their localities which did a whole lot toward creating a lasting impression on our minds. Following is, as near as I can remember, one or two verses of the song we sang of the states and their capitals, beginning with the New England states and going through:

Main—Augusta, on the Kennebec river.
New Hampshire—Concord, on the Merrimac river.
Vermont—Montpelier, on the Onion river (now Winooski).
Massachusetts—Boston, on the Boston Harbor.
Rhode Island has two capitals, Providence and Newport (now Providence).
Connecticut has two capitals, Hartford and New Haven.
New York—Albany, on the Hudson river.
Pennsylvania—Herrisburgh, on the Susquehannah.
Delaware—Dover, on the St. John river.

Then there were the principal cities of the various states, beginning with New York, the largest, then Philadelphia, which used to be second, but gave way to Chicago for that place.

How many cities that stood out in prominence, industrially, years ago are now seemingly not much heard of. There was Natchez, which was a prominent point on the Mississippi when river steamboats played such prominent part; Wheeling, W. Va., until several years back, was the capital of that State. New Haven, Connecticut and several towns of the old New England States seem today almost forgotten in this part of the country. But instead we hear of Seattle, Los Angeles, Birmingham, Miami, Akron scores of others that have seemingly sprung up almost in a generation.

So I suppose this state of affairs puts a lot of us older ones as back numbers so far as up-to-date geography is concerned.

But the old mountains, nevertheless, remain "eternal." Yes, I remember most of them yet—the Katskills in northern New York, the home of "Rip Van Winkle"; the Appalachian and White Mountains of New Hampshire, also Mt. Washington and the granite quarries and industries in that state. The Allegheny and Blue Ridge extending north and south through several of our eastern states, the Ozarks of Missouri and lastly the Rockies and Sierra Nevadas of the great west. Can the boys and girls of today tell off-hand through what states these mountains pass?

What states of the union are known as coast states; also which of the several states touch the five great lakes, and name them. Where is the source of the Mississippi, Missouri, Ohio, North Platte and Rio Grande rivers, and where do they terminate. Which is the longest river in the United States?

But I suppose school pupils of today learn a good deal of these facts in their geography lessons and besides a lot more that we did. But I have often wondered if in the present-day methods of "pushing" the pupils so rapidly really permitted them to get sufficient hold of some of the prominent geographical facts about our own country? I hope they do.

At a party given Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tomlinson, 436 South Ogden avenue, announced the engagement of their daughter, Evelyn, to Mr. Stephen J. Worsley, son of Mrs. George White of Lakewood, Ohio. The marriage will be an event of the early part of June. Guests at the party included Miss Carrie Athey, Miss Isabella Reid, Miss Helen Garnhart, Miss Gladys Cooke, Miss Helen Simonds, Mr. Ray Newlun, Mr. Alexander Reid, Mr. Luther Boger, Mr. John Parr, Mr. Pilgore Hansen and Mr. Wilfrid Tomlinson.

Pretty Things that are made at Home

The most important item in dress accessories for the coming spring is sure to be neckwear, collar and cuff sets for wear with plain, simple day frocks and coat dresses which fashion continues to sponsor. Printed and striped linens, light weight flannel, kasha and other cloths, and many plain crepes appear in the displays of spring utility dresses and all of them look to collar and cuff sets for appropriate finishing.

For utility and sports dresses, plain or striped linens in natural and other colors are employed for making round collars and slightly flaring cuffs. Except for stitched bands or rows of little buttons this tailored neckwear is unadorned. But plain linen finished with narrow cluny edging, makes a set that will serve for day or sports dresses. A set of this kind with scalloped edges is pictured here. Needlewomen who can embroider, may choose to introduce color on unbleached linen sets by means of colored floss. Handwork gives a class to neckwear which ready-made pieces can't equal. The designs are usually very simple with two or three colors employed. A set of this kind appears at the upper right of the picture. Even the amateur in needlecraft can make the pretty lace sets in which wide and narrow insertions are overcast or whipped together and finished with rolled hem and narrow Irish or cluny edging, as in the set at the left. A collar and vestee set with cuffs to match is pictured, made of lace insertions and pintucked net, which comes by the yard. In this set edges are finished with narrow val lace.

Besides the distinction of handwork in making them, sets acquired in this way are less expensive than ready-made pieces. Then there is opportunity for "the personal touch," which usually comes high and the selection of attractive patterns in laces and in embroidery. —Julia Bottomley.

AN APPRECIATION.

Last April the writer, who had been away from the Hilltop a few years returned. He found a cordial welcome everywhere and the offices of S. O. Holder & Co. were unusually kind and considerate.

That office extended to the writer every courtesy possible during the period of convalescence from a severe attack of nervous trouble.

A proper sense of gratitude requires a public acknowledgment of these facts now that the writer is no longer connected with S. O. Holder & Co., and it is the particular desire of the writer that all real estate transactions begun by him in that office that are not yet concluded, be completed through the office of S. O. Holder & Co.

The writer expects to devote his time mostly to abstracting and legal matters and will make his headquarters at his residence, 58 Clarendon avenue, until an office location is selected.

KEEPING RUGS STRAIGHT ON LINE.

Here is a good way to keep rugs straight on the line while being cleaned: Stretch the clothesline the same as on washday. Tie a rug pole or clothes prop (preferably a rug pole) lengthwise on the line, using a strong string or light cord. Tie this in about three or four places. This keeps the pole perfectly taut to the line. Then put your rug over the pole and line.

LOT'S WIFE

On the island of St. Helena there is a curious and interesting rock called Lot's Wife. It stands erect on the crest of a ridge that runs across the barren and uninhabited part of the island, and it is supposed to be a mass of lava long ago forced up through a crack in the crust. It is nearly or quite 300 feet high and when seen from a distance bears a striking resemblance to a draped human figure of tremendous size.

WHENCE THE WORD "MUSLIN"

The word muslin has been in very active use for many years and it seems difficult to trace its origin, for it does not seem to bear any relation to anything, but the explanation is made that its manufacture started in Mousel and that the fabric was called "mousselign." This seems quite probable, but there is another explanation This said that the material was first worn by the Moslems and that the word muslin is a corruption of "Moslem."

The annual damage to forest and forest products by insects is estimated at $130,000,000. The United States Bureau of Entomology estimates that the damage done by tree-killing insects can be greatly reduced by an annual expenditure of less than half of one per cent of the yearly loss which the insects themselves occasion.

A certain species of South American fish is said to have double-action eyes. The upper half of the eye is adapted to air vision, and the lower half is suited to water vision. These fishes are common to tropical America, quantities of them being found in the pools left on the beach at low tide. If they are disturbed, they scurry back to their native haunts.

Overnight Bag, a dandy, 95c—Seiller's.

One of the important works of the nineteenth century was the creation of great American cities. It is now the task of the twentieth century to transform these cities into places of beauty as well as utility. New York city has recently done away with the Forty-second street spur of the elevated railroad which was not only a great eyesore but also a public nuisance.

A simple, one-story building, bearing the inscription "Mandated Territory," housed the Palestine exhibit at the Wembley British Empire exhibition. The expense was borne half by the Palestinian government and half by the Economic Board of Palestine. Such articles as pottery, glass, perfumery, needlework, embroidery, carved olive wood, olive-oil soap, silver filigree, wheat and oranges were on display.

Children's 3-piece Knit Suits, up to $6.95 values, $3.95—Seiller's.

American painting has always been regarded more or less as an art derived or built upon the art of the Old World. However, recent exhibitions showing works of the primitive and earlier American painters have shown that painting, although transplanted to this side of the Atlantic, has taken root and grown into something fine and worth while. The Union league of New York city has been an important factor in bringing American art to the front.

FAVOR PURCHASE OF NEW PARK IF PRICE IS REDUCED

Council Feels That Price Asked for Proposed Tract Is Entirely Too High.

In open meeting Monday night council considered the purchase of additional park land on the Hilltop, lying between Broad street and Sullivant avenue and adjacent to 14 acres of park lands already purchased by the city just west of the site of the proposed new High school west of Powell avenue.

The tract under discussion contains about 32½ acres and is an ideal spot for park purposes, which together with the 14 acres already purchased would make a place of sufficient magnitude to accommodate most any gathering that would be desired, something which this section of the city lacks at the present time. The largest place, west of the river, for any kind of a community gathering is Glenwood park, and it is agreed by all that this place is entirely too small, as demonstrated last summer at the picnic of the Hilltop Improvement association, when some 2000 people gathered for an outing, and could hardly find room to stand, let alone enjoy themselves.

This proposed new park would accommodate thousands of people, besides giving ample space for recreational purposes at the same time, and also has the added feature of the native timber which gives the tract a beautiful landscaping, a thing which is to be considered seriously when the purchase of park lands is under consideration.

This tract also has the added feature of being in line with the future growth of the city and is situated in a section which is building up with a good substantial class of modern homes, and would make a valuable asset to the city for the accommodation of all residents.

This land is offered to the city at the price represented to have been paid by the allotment company, which would be approximately $63,000 for the tract.

Council in considering the proposition were agreed that this land would be ideal for park purposed, but were of the opinion that the price was too high, taking the stand that this particular part of the tract was not as valuable as the acreage nearer Broad street, and went on record as favoring the purchase of the land if, what they termed, a reasonable price could be secured. On motion of Councilwoman Jones the matter was referred to the city engineering department for appraisal, several of the councilmen stating that they would be willing to go even higher than the city would appraise it.

The meeting was attended by a number of Hilltop residents and the Record feels that the members of council are to be complimented for their courteous treatment of the Hilltop residents and the fair and impartial manner in which the project was discussed.

ACTIVITIES OF HIGHLAND P.-T. A

At the last regular meeting of the Parent-Teacher association of Highland Avenue school the business meeting was preceded by a pork and kraut supper. A very appetising meal was enjoyed by a large number of parents and teachers, after which a program was given.

Rev. Barber of Glenwood M. E. church, gave a splendid talk on Lincoln. A solo was rendered by Mrs. Paul Benton, and the second grade pupils presented a play.

At the business session plans were made for a paper sale to be conducted this week. The first day's report of the sale, which began Tuesday, looked very promising at the end of the day, over three tons of paper being brought into the school building, where P.-T. A. members and pupils were weighing it. More paper was still arriving Wednesday and a good final report is expected.

Association Meeting

At the regular meeting of the Hilltop Improvement association Tuesday evening the matter of the proposed new city park, lying between Broad street and Sullivant avenue, and west of Powell avenue, was discussed at some length, and the action of city council Monday night reported by members who attended the open meeting of council.

After some discussion the directors of the association were authorized to find a new location for the meetings of the association and dispose of the club room furniture.

The next number of the Hilltop Entertainment Course will be given on March 17, in Glenwood Methodist church by the Casford Concert Co. In the program of this company are trios of violin, piano and harp; duets of harp and violin; solos of harp, violin and voice, and a great variety of readings.

One of the beauties of this company is the fact that the members thoroughly enjoy their work. It is noteworthy also that their congeniality extends even beyond the footlights, and lyceum committees and audiences are made to feel that they are being en-

REV. GEORGE W. LOSE SURPRISED ON 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF ORDINATION

After teaching the adult class in the Sunday school of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church last Sunday morning Rev. George W. Lose entered the main auditorium to arrange for the regular morning service. He was astonished to notice the altar banked with about 50 roses, and to find Rev. J. H. Schneider, an old boyhood friend, in the sacristy. He was informed that he was supposed to occupy the front pew with the congregation during the service to follow. It was a surprise, arranged by the members of the Sunday school in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of Rev. Lose's ordination, that having taken place, Feb. 28, 1875.

The Sunday school, led by C. E. Raether, followed the pastor into the church. The sermon of the visiting clergyman, a short address by Mr. Raether and special music by the choir enabled the pastor to realise that he was in the midst of warm hearted friends, all of whom showered him with sincere wishes. For this and many other manifestations of love and good will on the part of both the old and the young of St. John's, Pastor Lose hereby extends his heartiest thanks.

GAS COMPANY IS OBSTINATE AS TO MAKING GAS TAPS

Carry Case to Supreme Court in Face of Ruling of Utilities Commission.

In its decision on the complaint of a large number of Columbus residents, most of whom are Hilltop people, the public utilities commission made the following finding:

"That, since the defendant, The Federal Gas and Fuel Co., is actually serving certain inhabitants in certain proportions of the city of Columbus, Ohio, with natural gas and that its distributing lines are in close proximity to the property of each of the complainants not heretofore dismissed herefrom, and that there is no showing that the company has not sufficient supply of gas with which to supply the said complainants with said service, said Federal Gas and Fuel Co. is discriminating against the said complainants in failing, refusing and neglecting to furnish its natural gas service to said complainants, and

"That said discrimination is unreasonable, unjust and unlawful."

The commission then proceeds to order the gas company to furnish such service in 10 days from the date of the finding, which was Feb. 20, and named the following Columbus property owners, Harvey H. Carter, A. F. Elliott, Jeanette Clark, S. V. Darling, Chauncey Williams, Louis H. Mack, Will Deems, Sam Willis, T. W. Wright, H. J. Rolling, C. H. Day, Frank M. Webber, Henry Leanox, Carl Schulze, Frank R. Woodring, J. W. Murphy, Mollie Goulding, Charles W. Rucker, William H. Mann, Robert H. Russell, James Russell, Etta Kimes, Charles Larcomb, Etta Gabriel, Orrin Day, John Schroor, Mrs. F. I. Bishop, O. H. Craft, Pearl A. Everett, Mrs. B. Schoemaker and W. G. Stickel, represented by Charles E. Cranston, who with Charles A. Leach, handled the case before the commission.

The next week the gas company, through its attorneys, sought to inject this matter into the city's case against the gas company, which has been fully decided by Judge Kinkead, and Judge Kinkead in setting aside the motion of the gas company attorneys, scored the attitude of the gas company in more drastic terms than did the utilities commission, calling the methods of their fictitious organizations "old methods which had been universally condemned by unanimous judicial and legislative expression. Having chosen such methods they must be considered in the light thereof, rather than any other mode." The judge further ruled that each and all of the alleged companies were obligated to furnish the service.

The gas company's attorneys then appealed to the supreme court for a stay of execution of the public utilities commission's order, and were granted a stay until March 17 to enable them to get their case before that court.

In view of the fact that the decisions of the courts and the legislative expressions have been unanimously against the stand taken by the gas company, there is no likelihood of the decision of the utilities commission being upset.

What should be done is, begin a definite movement for the city of Columbus to take over the gas company by condemnation proceedings, and if the bond limit interferes with this, then let the 60,000 families of this company pay $1 per month each to a popular subscription fund to furnish the necessary funds to make such purchase under condemnation proceedings.

The decreased cost of gas to the consumer would be a handsome dividend on the investment, as the profit of the gas company has long ago returned all of the original investment to the investors and several times over in addition. This might relieve the gas company of several embarrasing conditions that are bound to face it sooner or later in view of the violations of both state and federal statutes by that organization.

Let it not be forgotten that over two-thirds of those who had the courage to make this fight are Hilltoppers, and that the only real co-operation the city solicitor received from any attorney came for a Hilltop attorney.

V. A. Redman, 80 South Wheatland avenue, who has been confined to his home for the last 10 days with grip is reported as much improved.

MOST PUPILS ARE NOW ON FULL TIME

With the new addition to West Broad Street school nearing completion all the children of the school will soon be put on full time. The first grade, which has been on part time since the beginning of the school in September, is now on full time and the 2A's will soon be having full day sessions.

There is much sickness among the boys and girls of this school, unfortunately.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos O. Dyer of South Hague avenue were called to Newark Saturday by the death of Mr. Dyer's sister, Mrs. Orpha Le Blanc.

Mrs. LeBlanc came to the Hilltop about two months ago, hoping to regain her health at her brother's home, but she steadily grew weaker and was taken to her home on Cedar street in Newark about two weeks ago, and entered the Newark hospital for an operation, from which she did not rally. The death came as a blow to her many Hilltop friends, for she was widely known here.

The funeral services were held at the family home in Newark Monday with interment in Evergreen at the Pine Hill cemetery Tuesday.

Besides her husband, Louis Le Blanc, she is survived by five children, Amos of Newark, Mrs. A. Ray Evans of Toronto, O., and Mrs. Marguerite Pittington, Anne and Oscar at home; also six grandchildren and five brothers.

FLORIDA LETTER

By P. W. DRUMM

Since last writing you, we have made an extensive detour of the south-west central portion of the state, passing through some of the best portions of the citric fruit belt. There is a wonderful crop of oranges and grape fruit. The growers seem to be finding a fairly good market for oranges, but the grapefruit is hanging on the trees, or lying on the ground rotting, by the car load. Large trees are loaded till their fruit touches the ground, dead ripe and wasting, apparently for lack of a market. When we consider the price we must pay in Columbus for oranges and grapefruit, knowing this fruit can be bought here for about a half cent each plus the cost of gathering and packing we wonder why.

There are some fine and well improved farms through this section of the state, and there are multiplied thousands of acres of unimproved and swampy land. One very seldom sees a farm house of any pretensions. Many acres are planted to strawberries beans and other trucks. Every new town is being boomed, and the prices are sky high. Northern capitalists are here for speculation and are the promoters of the present boom. Tourists are here in such great numbers that it is necessary to erect hotels, and many of them are large and finely equipped, and the prices are not higher than in our northern cities.

New sub-divisions, with nothing but great piles of white sand, are on the market at from $2000 to $5000 per lot, and people are buying them, all expecting to make easy money.

Last week we attended one of the sub-tropical fairs held at Orlando. It was well attended and the display of citrus fruits and poultry was very fine, but aside from that, there was absolutely no comparison to our county fairs. In making comparison with northern products, Florida is not in the game. It is a great sight to see the large fruit groves here displaying their golden crops—a sight that one cannot behold in Ohio—but we can see the peach orchard, with its great load of luscious, golden and rose-hued peaches. The great apple orchards, with their thousands of barrels of Rome beauties, winesaps, golden pippins, etc., to say nothing about the plums and pears and grapes and cherries, none of which except, possibly, grapes, are to be seen in this sunny land.

Then there are our broad acres of corn, the waving fields of ripening grain that would make a Floridian open his eyes in wonder.

Ohio's beautiful farms with their stately buildings and well kept lawns is an invaluable possession that cannot be duplicated in the sunny south.

Ohio can produce everything, except tropical fruits, that Florida has, with all the products above referred to, into the bargain.

I have not mentioned our fine stock of horses, cattle and hogs that are so successfully raised in Ohio, that are scarcely found at all in Florida. In my stay of nearly two months, and in travels of hundreds of miles, I have not seen a half dozen good horses, and very few good cattle.

What then of Florida? She is increasing rapidly in population. Some of her cities are growing by leaps and bounds. The boom is on. Her cities are beautiful more on account of the landscape beauties than of the fine buildings, although there are many of them here.

The streets are shaded with palms and camphor trees and oleander; the lawns are adorned with ever-blooming flowers, and the buildings are covered with vines and ivy, dotted with flowers, that make them marvels of beauty. Then every city has its lake, or perhaps a dozen of them, surrounded with fine driveways, which add much to the beauty of the scene.

We have just as beautiful spots in Columbus, in the summer and autumn, but in Florida this magnificent scenery is perpetual.

You ask what is the chief business in Florida? The answer is real estate. What is the chief asset? Climate.

The story is told of a man from Chicago, who was spending the winter here, became so tired of hearing the natives talk about climate, that he declared that the next man who mentioned climate to him would get a rebuke. However, the next man he met accosted him with this greeting: "Good morning Mr. C. Isn't this fine climate?" "Yes," answered our Chicago friend, "but in our city we have a building 15 stories high without a stairway or elevator." "Indeed," exclaimed our native friend, "and how do they get up to the rooms?" "Climate" (climb it) was the answer.

To say nothing about Florida's millions of acres of swamps and uncultivated land, she is making marked progress in road building, schools, churches and many other things.

But Ohio, even with her winter blasts and fickle weather, suits me better. We have had a wonderful trip and have enjoyed it all, but by the time you get this we hope to be on our way to the dear old Buckeye state.

Homeland of love; Ohio rich and free
Loveland of homes, far-famed for purity,
Rich land of peace and great prosperity,
Homeland of love blest from above;
My Ohio.

Fields harvest-wed, enriched with golden grain,
Hills cattle-spread, enrift with carbon vein,
Streams water-fed refreshed by heaven's rain,
Homeland of love blest from above
My Ohio.

BLOOD PRESSURE.

I met an old friend on a car recently. Here is some of our conversation:

Where are you living now, Mr. D? "On the Hilltop." Oh, you're not farming any more? "No." How is Mrs D? Not very well; her blood pressure is too high." What is your age "Sixty."

"Thereby hangs a tale;" and a tragical tale it is. It is the old story of retired farmers who change their habits of work, but do not change their way of living to correspond. They do not realise the importance of this, and the easiest way, for all of us is to follow the line of least resistance and do as we have always done.

The most important matter in a change like this is the food question These people had lived as most farmers do, enjoying—not "the best the market affords," but better than the market affords, for they get it at first hand, and the markets must be satisfied with what they choose to spare to them.'

The farmers' fresh air and exercise make it necessary that they have nourishing food, and they get it. The portion of their living which they get on the market is the questionable part, for, though it comes in neat packages, it lacks some of the important, life-giving elements. It is the city people, and the farmers after they go to the city, that are most affected by this.

It is not a question of nourishment, for, strange as it may seem, most of us, even the farmers, are overnourished.

Beginning in the last century, there was a great wave of importance given to the value of calories (heat and power units) which led us into the fallacy of over-valuing and choosing of the foods which contained the most nutrients. Latterly, the question of availability has been stressed, until now the world knows that beyond the point of availability (actual, needed, building and heat value), the nutrients are to be avoided. The reason for this is that the staple foods—the foods concontaining the most nutrients, such as bread, meat, eggs, cheese, etc.—that require in their digestion, more of nerve energy than do other foods, are, for that reason, considered a handicap beyond the point of actual needs.

It is important, then, that we can at all times—at every meal—estimate with reasonable accuracy, the amount of such food we should eat, supplementing it with less nutritious and more bulky food that is easier of digestion.

Here is where the retired farmer makes his mistake. When on his farm, he and his family needed the nourishing food, which, with their habits, gave them their health and physique. Now, with his sedentary habits, if he would preserve the necessary balance, he must cut down on his bread, meat, eggs, cheese, etc., and eat more of fruits and vegetables. Fruits and vegetables furnish as much nourishment as many people need, but they are not so concentrated, and so, furnish the bulk required in the mechanics of the digestion of other food.

Habits of digestion are not quickly changed. Like all other habits, they must be cultivated, and, as in other new habits, it is easy to lapse back into the old way. Gradually, there should be more of entire light-food meals, and less of meat meals. It would be well to ignore the craving that will occur occasionally for a few days, but, with a reasonable exercise of will-power, the change should be effected in a week. Students, going from the farm to school, have the same problem.

It is the continuation of the farm-habits of eating, when the exercise is eliminated or reduced, that overburdens the heart and leads, insidiously, to hardened arteries and high blood pressure. So, the rational management of these troubles means eating less of proteins, carbonhydrates and fats and more of the more bulky fats and vegetables. Then why shouldn't we all get the habit, help others to do the same and thus be of constructive help to the next generation. That's why we are here. I say, why not?

BACK TRAILING ON OLD SCHOOL DAYS

After refreshing our memory of singing the "Capitals of the States" we brought out our old McGuffey speller and in scanning the first pages we recall a former practice of singing the vowels in the word building forms, such as:

B-a, ba, B-e, be, B-i, bi, ba, be, bi,
B-o, bo, ba, be, bi, bo,
B-u, bu, ba, be, bi, bo, bu.

Silly, wasn't it, children? As I recall we used this form more for the art (?) of singing than for the help in forming words which, no doubt, the author really intended. The same method is used today, without the singing, to instill in the young minds the proper use of the vowel sounds by using these bases as word builders.

Many of the present-day methods used in teaching do not appeal to us as practical as in former years. For instance, the advanced pupil formerly was permitted to use any method which tended to shorten the labor or conserve time, such as "casting out the nines" in calculating addition and multiplication, annexing ciphers to a number and taking a fractional part of the new number in order to multiply the original numbers, e. g. if we desire to multiply 346 by 125 we simply annex 000 to the first number (346000) and take ⅛ of it (10000-8 equal 125) and the result is the same as by the other method and to our way of reasoning much simpler; or if we wish to use some form of algebraic solution by using some one of the "special rules" as finding the square of, say 44 (40 plus 4) we simply add the squares and twice their product, most of the process being mental and only the requirement of setting down the result. At any rate, this is a good mental test for the boys and girls and sometime when teacher isn't looking, try it out.

In view of the recent discussion of whether the Bible should be read in the public schools we would like to add the following selection from one of the McGuffey readers:

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS
(In verse)

Thou me God shalt have but me.
Before no idol bend the knee.
Take not the name of God in vain.
Dare not the Sabbath Day profane.
Give to thy parents honor due.
Take heed that thou no murder do.
Abstain from thoughts and deeds unclean.
Steal not for thou by God art seen.
Tell not a willful lie—nor love it.
What is thy neighbors do not covet.

The Choni Tibetans retain their individuality partly because they inhabit inaccessible mountains. At their capital, Choni, on the Tao river, lives the hereditary Chinese ruler of 48 tribes of this people. He can levy taxes, quell rebellions and administer punishment, but the Chinese say of him, "He has the pig's head, but cannot find the door of the temple." They imply that he is willing to give bribes to keep his position, but too many officials expect them, and he cannot tell which deserve the largest. A recent study of the province includes extensive botanical and zoological observations. One tree, known locally as the "red birch," is a boon to traders. It has a shining, brown, papery bark, which peels off in large thin sheets, which are used by Tibetans and Chinese for wrapping butter and other food articles.

Saturday the offices of the city auditor and city cashier were crowded when last-minute taxpayers sought to pay their street assessment bills before the "dead line" set for Saturday noon.

The office had been open for the payment of such bills since the middle of last December, but a comparative few took advantage of the opportunity, allowing the bills to remain unpaid until the last few days.

Mrs. D. E. Wells, 2306 West Broad street, entertained members of the Hilltop Embroidery club at a luncheon at her home Wednesday afternoon.

Holder's Helpful Hints

THE PHILOSOPHY OF OLD BOOTS

I heard these things when I was younger than you are now, and they came to me from a very simple source. I journeyed to this town when I was 18 years of age, with $1.60 in my pocket. My first employment was on a farm two miles north, at $15 a month. I had worked four months, and had $50 still unpaid on my wages, when one Saturday evening I stopped at Martin Metzer's shop to have a patch put on my boot. He was a wise old philosopher, and talked while he worked. He made me feel at home. For some reason, which I cannot explain, I told him of my $50 and asked what I ought to do with it. He said: "Buy a lot, my son."

"What would I do with a lot?" I asked.

"Pay it out until you own it. You will want a home some day."

He said no more, but stitched away at the patch. Well, the stitches made the patch secure on my boot, and fastened the idea of a home in my mind as well. The next Saturday I came into town with my $50 and bought this very lot and took a walnut and planted it there, where the big tree stands. The lot cost me $250. I saved $12 a month to pay on the balance. It seemed to me that I never would get this lot paid for, but I did; and the day the mortgage was lifted was the happiest day I had ever known. I was a land owner. My confidence in myself increased 100 per cent. I spent the afternoon here, and at dusk I returned to town and bought old Martin a pipe and a sack of tobacco and thanked him for his advice. While I had been paying for my lot, some houses had been built out this way, and a few weeks later I was offered $100 profit to sell. I was greatly tempted. I had never earned a dollar of brain money before; it had all been hand-money, but I saw old Martin before I decided, and he said: "Son, it has increased in value $100, it will increase another hundred soon. The best part of the town must build toward the hill where your lot lies."

Instead of selling, I tried to learn who owned this lot adjoining mine. The owner lived east. I wrote and got his price. He asked $200 cash. I worried about that lot for a month, thinking every time I came to town that someone would have certainly have bought it. I wrote again to the owner and offered him $225 if he would let me pay $50 in 60 days and $12 a month. Much to my surprise, he accepted my offer.

While my employer had raised my wages and I was getting $18 and applied $15 of it the first day of each month on my notes. Within a year I owned it also. Wise old Martin. He knew men as he knew their boots; perhaps he learned the trails men traveled from the boots they wore, for he was wise in the ways of men and of nations. He was a sweet and gentle soul, as well as my friend and counsellor, and I loved him. Martin taught me another thing in those days which has changed my views of life: that fine clothes are no standard of fine living; that a shoemaker's apron may clothe a white soul, and that gems and dress suits may clothe a black one. Now when I want to know a man's value, I do not look into his purse—I look into his eyes.

It was announced Saturday that the first class of 20 students to study radio at the central Y. M. C. A. had been fully organized and already has started in its studies, while the second class started Tuesday. Other classes will be formed as rapidly as possible. The courses now offered are primarily for the purpose of training men to enter the radio field which at the present time offers many opportunities.

The directing committee, consisting of M. A. Pixley, Prof. A. R. Brown and Gilbert L. Fuller, met Saturday noon for a discussion of equipment, faculty and future courses to be offered. It is planned later on to start classes in radio-telegraphy for operators and more advanced radio telephone courses.

Over 50 per cent of the students enrolled in the first class are men now engaged in radio work who are taking the course to become more efficient.

Among the 11 Columbus students who were elected to Pi Lambda Theta, honorary educational sorority, is the name of Miss Velma G. Currier, 45 Eldon avenue.

KNITTED OUTERWEAR COSTUMES FLANNEL IN ENSEMBLE SUITS

Behold, knitted and flannel ensemble costumes presented as a special feature in the style program for spring, 1925! From the moment of their appearance on the stage of fashion, success has attended these smart modes, which so charmingly combine flannel with knitted effects. Even now, and the vogue is only at the threshold of its career, an appreciative, style-loving audience is clamoring for more and more of these handsome combination outfits.

The swagger outfit in the picture foretells a future of intriguing sportswear wherein flannel, as combined with things knitted, is to play a leading part. This stylish sports model tops an almond-colored flannel skirt with a modish jacket knitted of white mohair. That there may be no doubt of the relationship existing between skirt and knitted coatee, the identical flannel of the former is used in a clever trimming way throughout the costume design. The kid belt adds a note of pleasing up-to-dateness.

Sometimes the order is reversed and it is the skirt which is knitted, its companion coat being of flannel or suede, for suede is quite a smart item in sportswear at this moment. Of course, the suede coat is detailed with knitted cuffs, neck finishing, hip band and other incidental trimming.

This alliance of knitted with flannel or with suede is rich in promise for the future. A galaxy of beautiful new shades in popular spring flannels finds its counterpart in yarns and mohairs which answer color to color, or, if not a perfect match, then exquisite blend or effective contrast. White with flower hues is a favorite combination. The knitted slipon or coat of narcissus yellow, pervenche blue, orchid or rose with flannel skirt and trappings all of pure white flannel is one of the forthcoming delights of the approaching season.

The knitted ensemble with woolen fabric, carried out in all-white, is very sure to make appeal to discriminating taste. White clipped wool provides most elegant fur-like collar and cuffs for a white knitted coat in an allover pattern.

Julia Bottomley.

What Is Your Opinion of God

The most important crisis in a man's life are related to the growth or impoverishment of his conception of God.

It is the birthday of the Soul when we discover that the Lord occupies the whole of life.

This most interesting subject will be the foundation for the sermon by the pastor next Sunday morning in the

HILL CREST BAPTIST CHURCH

WEST BROAD STREET AT ELDON AVENUE

The result of reasoning with God.

Does it ever occur to you how unreasonable most folks are?

Have you ever called yourself to account for the kind of a life you are living?

Do you know the secret of happiness lies in your willingness to reason with God.

Come with us next Sunday morning and evening and enjoy the services. We are trying to put over a big program that will make this a better world in which to live.

DUTY COSTS LIFE OF PATROLMAN

Fractured Skull Proves Fatal to Patrolman Harry Shaffer.

Devotion to duty cost the life of Patrolman Harry E. Shaffer, 294 Sullivant avenue, when he was struck early Monday morning at Lazelle and Broad streets by the auto of W. G. Smith, 785 Bryden road, while Shaffer was pursuing a suspected automobile thief.

As Smith was driving east in Broad street, he saw the fugitive as he dashed in front of his machine and swerved to the north in order to avoid striking him. Just then Shaffer appeared and was struck by the front bumper of Smith's machine, throwing him to the pavement.

Shaffer was taken to the hospital by Francis Higgins and L. J. Brooks, taxi driver, where it was found he has sustained a fractured skull, due to the force of the fall. He never regained consciousness and died Monday afternoon.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at the Burgess Avenue United Brethern church, Burgess and Sullivant avenues. Brother officers of the police department will join the funeral procession and escort it through the city on its way to Canal Winchester, where burial will take place. Policemen Cherry, Loos, Rupe, Shumate, Heise and Wheeler will act as pallbearers.

Patrolman Shaffer is survived by his wife, two children and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Shaffer, 338 South Warren avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Greenwood, returned recently from Ft. Myers, Florida, where they spent their vation.

Mrs. J. V. Heffner, 143 North Warren avenue, is visiting relatives at Cincinnati.

AGED COUPLE FIND HOME

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Van Houten Demonstrate Golden Rule.

Mr. and Mrs. James Allen of Orbison, Hocking county, aged couple who came to Columbus Saturday seeking a home with their son, who they learned, on their arrival, had left for Florida without leaving an address, Tuesday were rescued from the county infirmary by Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Van Houten, 114 Midland avenue.

Reading of the plight the aged couple were in, the Van Houtens, took pity on the aged couple and will provide for them until the missing son can be located and informed of his parents' plight.

Mr. Van Houten is a bookkeeper for the International Derrick and Equipment Co. and had three children.

"I am only doing what I would want someone do for me if I were placed in a similar predicament," Mrs. Van Houten said.

REV. WENRICH ACCEPTS CALL

Will Move to Stoutsville, Where He Formerly Held Pastorate.

Rev. J. M. Wenrich, pastor of the Hilltop Lutheran church, who received two calls some time ago had declined the call to the Stoutsville parish and had accepted a call as field worker for the Home Mission Board of the Lutheran church.

The Stoutsville parish, which Rev. Wenrich had served for 18 years, renewed the call with such persistency that he finally decided to accept it after being released by the mission board, and with his family will move to Stoutsville some time next week.

Rev. Wenrich came to Columbus from St. Mark's Lutheran church at Wapakoneta, Ohio, as field missionary for the district of Columbus, in February, 1916.

Glenwood Park.

Publishers Record:

I have read in your paper several times about efforts being made to purchase more acreage for the enlargement of the proposed park at the extreme west edge of the Hilltop, and of the improving of the same and making it into a fine park. Yes, this is very nice and I hope the same may be accomplished, but why not put some effort into improving the looks and accommodations of our present Glenwood park. Where is there a more unsightly condition at this freezing and thawing time of the year than that bank of mud with its dozens of scrub trees hanging to it, some with such a mass of roots protruding caused by the washing away of the yellow clay to such an extent as to make them dangerous to passersby. If one will notice, it won't be long ere two or three of the largest ones will be so undermined as to cause them to topple over, bringing with them telephone and electric wires. Then, if someone should be injured or killed, how much would the city be liable for in a damage suit? While we are having delegations wait on council in the interest of other needed improvements, why not keep that "eye-sore" on our minds, and see if something cannot be done to do away with this ever-slipping pile of yellow mud.

Then, another thought—the Hilltop is favored with an abundance of societies and clubs (both men's and women's), who have our community welfare at heart. Why not some of them take upon themselves the responsibility of seeing that the park is further beautified by the planting of shrubbery, dowers, etc.? Whether this would be practical or not, anyway, it is worth thinking about.

Glenwood is naturally a beautiful spot, but simply because the real natural beauty places have been sadly neglected, we do not seem to appreciate what we already have in our midst. Glenwood Park Booster.

Rev. Taylor Van Vleck, a college mate of Rev. Richard E. Shields, preached for Mr. Shields morning and afternoon last Sabbath. Mr. and Mrs. Van Vleck, who are visiting with Mrs. Van Vleck's sister, Mrs. Daniel Swickard, South Richardson avenue, have been for 12 years missionaries in the West Indies, especially in Santo Domingo. Mr. Shields will occupy his pulpit again Sunday, after a brief illness.

OVERCOME WHILE DRIVING MACHINE

John Davis, aged 30 years, 1447 Thomas avenue, was taken to St. Francis hospital Tuesday by Patrolmen Alkire and Womeldorf after he was overcome by fumes from the truck he was driving at Rich and Grubb streets.

The truck had a closed cab, and Davis, becoming unconscious at the wheel was at first thought dead. He was revived at the hospital, however, and was soon able to go home.

MORE COMPLAINT AGAINST GAS. CO.

It is reported that a number of Hilltop residents are joining in another complaint to be filed against the gas companies.

It is alleged that evidence has been found that the Federal Gas and Fuel Co. put in a tap to a residence after the complaint had been filed by the 32 complainants, whose case was recently decided.

If this allegation is correct, then a new and even more unreasonable, unjust and unlawful discrimination has occurred and no court will permit this.

GIRLS LEARN BREAD MAKING

All girls of the eighth grade in Columbus public schools are being given an intensive lesson in bread making this week. And while the teachers are probably only following their customary schedules, but there is added enthusiasm being put into the work because the lessons are preliminary to the annual city-wide bread making contest.

The girl from the eighth grade baking the best loaf will represent her school in the sectional trial, which is announced for Tuesday, March 31.

Girls from Highland, Mound, Barrett and Starling will meet at Mound Street school.

Prizes will be awarded Friday, April 3.

ATHLETIC CLUB REORGANIZED

Takes Over Club Room and Equipment of Hilltop Improvement Association.

The Hilltop Athletic club was reorganized Tuesday evening, taking over the clubrooms and equipment from the Hilltop Improvement association. H. G. Butler was elected president; W. H. Orebaugh, vice president, and H. J. Drye, secretary treasurer.

For a number of years the Athletic club has been an organization on the Hilltop, being composed mostly of business men of this section. About a year ago it was merged with the Hilltop Improvement association, which plan did not prove the success anticipated, some members of the Improvement association feeling that they did not care for the club facilities as provided in the merger.

At the last regular meeting of the Hilltop Improvement association it was decided by a unanimous vote of the members in attendance at the meeting to have separate organizations of the Improvement association and Athletic club, and the reorganization is a result of this action.

There is a need of such a club on the Hilltop for those who enjoy and desire a club, and with the caliber of men such as has been chosen to head the Athletic organization it is sure to be a club of which the Hilltop residents may feel justly proud.

As for the Hilltop Improvement association, there is no question in the mind of a single resident of the Hilltop as to the needs of a civic organization of this kind. There are plenty of opportunities of a civic nature which an association of this kind should get behind and boost for the welfare of this section of the city. However, in a civic organization, the work to be done cannot be left altogether to the officers, but should have the support and co-operation of each and every member of the organization, and the membership should include every resident of the Hilltop, for the mission of such an organization is to accomplish benefits for the whole section of the Hilltop, thereby benefiting each individual. So let's all be a booster.

HILLTOPLETS

While riding into town from the Big Four crossing on West Broad street just at dark a few night since and noting the great number of beautiful homes that have been built, we wondered "when will street lights be put up out here." They need 'em.

And while we're talking about lights—why not some of those new street lights like they are getting in other community centers of Columbus?

We are told that in one of our schools the room has been divided into a "sleepy side" and a "wide-awake" side. Why not carry that idea into our street cars also?

Blessings on thee, little dame,
Bareback girl with knees the same,
With thy rolled-down silken hose,
And thy short, transparent clothes,
With they red lips, reddened more,
Smeared with lipstick from the store.
Why thy makeup on thy face,
And thy bobed hairs' jounty grace,
From my heart I give thee joy,
Glad that I was born a boy.

THE HILLTOP IN 1862.

We clip the following from Tuesday's Ohio State Journal column "News Our Grandfather's Read": From the issue of March 3, 1862: "A lot numbering 730 rebel prisoners arrived here Saturday morning and passed through the city to Camp Chase under the escort of six companies from that camp. They were nearly all officers, many of them men of intelligence, some having held honorable positions under the government they were endeavoring to destroy.

The C. I. S. class will meet Friday evening, March 13, at 7:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Ernie Purdum, 200 North Warren avenue. This is an important meeting and a good attendance is desired.

In the program of the Casford Trio Company are trios of violin, piano and harp; duets of harp and violin; solos of harp, violin and voice, and a great variety of readings. One of the beauties of this company is that the members thoroughly enjoy their work. It is noteworthy that their congeniality extends even beyond the footlights, and lyceum committees and audiences are made to feel that they are being entertained by old-time friends.

HAVE YOU A HOBBY OR PET?

You May Show What It Is at the Hobby Show Friday, March 20.

Have you a Jack or Jill you would take up the hill and see what they would bring along after?

Almost every boy and girl, man and woman has some pet or hobby of which they are proud and would be glad to enter in some kind of a contest, just for the fun of showing it.

For this purpose a hobby show has been arranged for March 20 at Hoge Memorial church.

Any boy or girl (be they big or little) will want to enter their dogs, cats, mice, rabbits, birds, parrots, chickens or ducks. And here is a chance for the girls to enter their dolls and equipment, such as doll carriages and wardrobes, and dolls of the different nations.

Registration will be made at the church-house Saturday, March 14, from 2 to 4 p. m., at which time tags and numbers will be given out. Mrs. Merriman has charge of the entrance for dolls and G. W. Matson the entrance of pets and hobbies. Any information desired may be secured from them.

You may be surprised if your pet or doll are awarded the honor—who knows what it will be?.

If your Jill rolls down this hill and your Jack comes rolling after, you will have seen a pin and picked it up and then you'll have found good luck.

This is something every girl and boy will not want to miss. Further announcement will be made next week.

TRAGEDY OF TRAGEDIES.

Recently there was found floating in the Ohio river the lifeless body of an old man. The coroner took from a pocket of his well-worn coat of blue an old bill book, in which was folded a piece of paper containing these pathetic words: "I'm old now and not wanted." No accusation, no complaint, just the pitiful wail of a broken heart.

On the lapel of the coat was a little bronze button, and the note had evidently been written with trembling fingers. His silky snow-white hair was neatly trimmed and he had an intelligent forehead, a well preserved body, with no marks of dissipation or disease.

The little button bore mute testimony to an untarnished record, as a soldier at a time when our country needed him. Had our law makers forgotten and ceased to be grateful? They had voted to increase their own salaries and vast loans and appropriation had passed without a "veto," but a plea for justice for the old veterans, dying in poverty, was met by wild cries of "Economy." His wife had long since laid down life's burdens and the comrades that fought by his side had answered the last "roll call."

His neighbors of the younger generation, in their wild rush for riches and pleasure, found no time for a handshake or cheery chat with the lonely old man. Even the boys and girls, for whom he had labored and sacrificed, through the years, now in prosperous homes and with families of their own, were indifferent and neglectful to the extent that he felt he was not wanted. He had been brave, had suffered in silence, but could endure it no longer.

In that great day—the day of final reckoning—who will face the responsibility of this tragedy? We wonder. We wonder. M. M. Marshall.

COFFEE

We are all slow to admit that we are influenced by advertising in general, yet we come nearer thinking certain merchandise has been tried and found worthy, if the name has been before the public for a long time. This mild, hypnotic influence often leads us to buy, without investigation, when in fact, we know nothing of the article except its trade mark, which has been kept before our eyes, perhaps for decades.

Propaganda is far sighted, long distance, advertising. "Eat more meat" is not the personal advice of your physician, for no physician, except in rare personal cases, will give such wholesale and treacherous advice. It is well to keep in mind that the united packers appropriated half a million dollars to promote the slogan "Eat More Meat."

Your baker's "Eat More Bread" comes naturally, and perhaps innocently, for his profits are local, but he is really seconding the motion of the flour interests. From a health standpoint the people eat too much bread and meat, for it is too-much-use of these necessary foods that lays the foundations for many chronic diseases.

Good Health Magazine, published at Battle Creek (Nov. 1924) says that: "For the sum of $40,000 Dr. Samuel Prescott was persuaded to put into the hands of the coffee mungers the material from which they have coined this cunningly concocted pack of lies, with which they are fooling the American people into increased consumption of coffee to their irreparable injury."

Briefly stated, these "lies" are as follows: (1) Coffee relieves fatigue, (2) increases one's ability to work, (3) aids concentration, (4) produces no subsequent depression, (5) does not draw upon the body's physical resources, (6) is beneficially stimulating and that it (7) beneficially increases heart action.

It is expected that the coffee addict will look over these points and complacently acquiesce, for he imagines them to be verified by his daily experience, the same as a drug or liquor addict will justify his dope taking. But please lay aside your prejudice for a moment and read, carefully, Dr. Kellogg's arguments in favor of his contention that the claims are "lies." His arguments, taken in the order given above, in effect are: (1) Coffee paralyzes the fatigue center and makes one think he is rested when he is really tired. (2) He quotes Nansen, the Arctic explorer, who, when in Greenland, abandoned coffee, claiming that one does not gain by stimulating the body and mind by artificial means. (3) The only persons whose concentration is helped by coffee are those whose powers of concentration have been damaged by the use of coffee; as the drinker must have his dram to steady his nerves, the drug addict his dope, and the cigarette smoker his few puffs, which only makes them temporarily normal. (4) The morning cup of coffee simply hides the depression caused by the coffee drank the day before. Professional tea-tasters and coffee-tasters suffer from nerve exhaustion (neurasthenia). (5) When one is fatigued from work, his batteries need recharging. Rest does this. A stimulant is like a whip to a tired horse; it causes him to overdraw on his vitality, making more rest necessary. (6) Coffee, as a stimulant—like the whip to the tired horse—will get additional work done, but is not "beneficially stimulating" to the individual, as claimed, for this extra expense of vitality must be recovered by rest. Coffee is not a food—it is a drug—and cannot produce vitality. (7) Coffee does increase the heart action, but not "beneficially," as claimed. Surgeons use caffein as a heart stimulant after certain operations, and in such crises it proves very useful, but the quality which makes it useful as a drug in emergencies, makes it dangerous for habitual use. The heart specialist, in a case of high blood pressure will say "cut out your coffee." This, because of the unnatural previous stimulation, your habit, etc., will depress you. You will crave continued stimulation, but your doctor seeks to prolong your life. You have wandered away from nature and now must get back.

A cup of coffee contains about four grains of caffein and two grains is a dose as a heart stimulant in an emergency. "Another cup, thank you," and you are taking four doses of a heart stimulating drug at one meal. Then how about drinking coffee two and three times a day, as some do? If you demand this, then you are a coffee addict and must expect hardened arteries and an assortment of heart diseases.

The addict says: "I'd rather have a good time if I don't live as long." Are you having a good time? or are your latter days likely to be a veritable hell on earth? You have "enjoyed" your heart stimulation but "Whatsoever a man soweth that (the results) will he also reap."

Dr. O. E. McFaden, Osteopath, 100 W. 10th Ave. N. 7904-W. Residence calls on the Hilltop Wednesday and Saturday mornings.

TRAILING IN WITH SPRING COME LOVELY BEADED GOWNS

Now that we have our adoring eyes on spring apparel—while our budget for spring clothes resolutely stands between us and many things we desire—what shall we do about the beaded gown? If you will read society reports in the newspapers, look upon lovely ladies at social functions, or study the pages of smart fashion journals, you will soon know as much about beaded gowns as the observant fashion writer does. What she knows is that everyone, from her majesty at the head to little Lady Debutante at the foot of the class in styles, owns a beaded gown. "The bride's mother wore a crepe gown beaded in," etc., or "The bride's dress was trimmed with lace, incrusted with crystal and pearl beads," or "Many ladies at the White House reception wore beaded gowns," impress themselves by sheer force of repetition. Therefore there is but one thing to do—take our budget firmly by the hand and lead it in the direction of beaded dresses.

In the new collections there are many lovely printed crepes, including georgette, in which floral patterns are outlined or worked out with colored beads. These are quite new and very attractive. There are also many beautiful crepe de chine dresses, more or less elaborately beaded. An example of gorgeous bead embroidery appears in a novel design on the graceful dress of crepe de chine shown here in the glowing color called "burnt russet." Fine restraint in working out the pattern makes this a gown which may be worn for the most formal as well as less formal occasions.

There is great variety in beaded gowns and a good many of them are quite inexpensive. Paris sponsors them, royalty wears them and therefore we cannot go wrong in choosing one for our "dressup" wear.

Julia Bottomley.

CHOCOLATE MERINGUE PIE

Cover an inverted pie plate with pastry, turn back the edges to make it firm. Prick well with fork to prevent bubbles. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees, about 15 minutes. Then fill with chocolate cream made as follows: 2 squares from ½ lb. cake of chocolate; ¼ cup corn starch; 2 cups milk; 3 egg yolks, ¾ cup sugar; 1 tablespoon vanilla; 1 teaspoon shortening. Melt chocolate in double boiler; blend sugar, salt and corn starch; add milk; cook until thick, stirring constantly; add beaten egg yolks, melted chocolate and shortening; continue cooking a minute or two; pour into the baked shell; cover with meringue made by beating the 3 egg whites until stiff and dry and add 6 tablespoons granulated sugar. Return to slow oven, 300 degrees, for 15 minutes or until brown.

BUTTERSCOTCH TARTLETS

Take bits of dough about the size of an egg. Roll; cover the bottom of inverted muffin pans which have been greased. Prick well with a fork to prevent bubbles. Bake in hot oven about 15 minutes. When baked, slip shells off, turn pan over and put in a muffin tin. Fill with the following butterscotch filling: 1 cup brown sugar, 3 tablespoons flour, 2 egg yolks, 1 teaspoon shortening, 1 cup milk, 3 tablespoons water, 1 teaspoon vanilla, ¼ teaspoon salt. Mix sugar, salt and flour; add water; cool until thick, stirring constantly; just before removing from stove, stir in beaten egg; add shortening and vanilla; cool slightly and fill the tart shells. Cover with meringue made by beating 2 egg whites stiff and dry; add 3 tablespoons of granulated sugar; cover tarts, return to slow oven for 15 minutes or until brown. This will make 12 tarts.

NEW HOME FOR WESTWOOD LODGE

Davis Hall at Burgess and Broad Will Undergo Extensive Remodeling.

Westwood Lodge, No. 770, K. of P., has just recently signed a contract for the lease of the W. G. Davis hall, West Broad street and Burgess avenue, which has been used as a lodge room by Westgate Masonic lodge for a number of years.

The room will undergo extensive remodeling and will be made into a room suitable for public gatherings as well as for lodge purposes.

An addition of 30 feet will be built onto the south end of the room which will be used for property rooms, retiring rooms and kitchen. A new hard maple floor will be laid in the main room which will be 40x50 feet feet in dimension, exclusive of a stage, which will be approximately 10 feet wide.

The entrance to the hall will be on Burgess avenue.

Westwood lodge was founded about 10 years ago with some 70 charter members and has made a steady and healthy growth, its members including mostly Hilltop residents. The present quarters of Westwood, where they have met continuously since the installation of the lodge has grown too small for this lodge and has made necessary the securing of more commodious quarters, which will be appreciated by all members of the lodge.

USE OF STREETS FOR PLAYING IS VERY DANGEROUS

Chief French Urges Children Be Kept Off Streets While Using Skates and Coasters.

Chief of Police French Tuesday night issued a warning against children using the streets as a thoroughfare for roller skates, velocipedes and coaster wagons, following an accident Tuesday at Lechner and Sullivant avenues, in which George L. Luse, aged 11 years, 338 Lechner avenue, suffered a crushed foot.

Luse was skating Sullivant avenue, and desiring to go at a greater speed, the boy siezed hold of the end gate of the wagon of John Williams, 451 South Seventh street.

The greater speed of the wagon caused the boy to lose his balance and he fell, one foot being thrown beneath the rear wheel of the wagon. The boy was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital.

"Accidents of this type could well be avoided if parents only would realize the necessity of keeping children off the street," Chief French said. "Streets are not safe to a conservative pedestrian, with so many reckless drivers at large, and are much less safe for children who play in the streets on scooters, skates and wagons."

DEATH OF BABY

An investigation was started Wednesday by Coroner Murphy to determine the manner in which a baby girl whose body was found in a woods near Schultz avenue, Tuesday night, met death.

The nude body of the infant was found by children at play.

Across the back of the baby's head is a deep mark, as if the child had been struck a hard blow with some heavy instrument.

COLUMBUS IS MOST AMERICAN CITY

Nearly 95 per cent of the people living in Columbus were born in America. Approximately 75 per cent of the city's population are native born Ohioans.

These figures, indicating the claim of Columbus to the title of "most American city" has been strengthened during the five years since the last government census, have been established by a survey.

The survey estimated the population of Columbus at the close of 1924 to be 2,6,28,, an increase of 59,255 since the official census in 1920 which the close of 1924 to be 296,289 shrd cmf showed the population to be 237,000.

Of the 296,289, the survey shows 270,-105 were born in America and only 17,-184 are people who emigrated to the United States from foreign countries.

This last number is 5.76 per cent of the total population, making Columbus a city where 94.24 per cent of the citizens are native born Americans, a record not approached by any other large city in the country.

The 1920 census showed that of 237,031 population 21,250 were foreign born, this number being approximately 9 per cent of the population. Those who have moved to Columbus from other states number 59,869, approximately 20 per cent of the entire population.

Next to native Ohioans, residents of the city who were born in Pennsylvania are most numerous, the total being 7538. West Virginia comes next with 6534, Virginia third with 6404, Kentucky fourth with 5866, Indiana fifth with 4085, and New York sixth with 3540.

Mrs. C. F. Ditrick and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Ditrick attended the double funeral of the former's niece, Mrs. Wayne V. Tuller and her infant daughter of Westerville Tuesday afternoon.

Robert Morris Social club, O. E. S., will meet at the home of Mrs. Jennings, 2206 Summit street, Thursday, March 26, at 2 p. m. Mrs. Guy Ports, Mrs. William Bosson and Mrs. Isaiah Conrad will be assistant hostesses.

P.-T. A. MEETING WELL ATTENDED

Fine Program Given By West Broad Association Last Friday Evening.

The West Broad Parent-Teacher association held their regular monthly meeting Friday evening, March 13. Although the auditorium is being redecorated and somewhat out of the usual ..., the attendance was good.

Mr. William and the Misses William rendered some fine singing before the business meeting took up.

Mrs. Barrell, president of the association, opened the business meeting with a number of things for the good of the association, one of which was an out-door picnic for the members in the place of the annual supper at the end of the year.

She then introduced Dr. McElfresh, superintendent of the Ohio Council of Religious Education, who gave a fine talk on the schools and our boys and girls.

The St. John's Evangelical Lutheran choir, who so kindly gave up a little of their time while practicing, came across to the school and rendered some beautiful singing which was greatly appreciated by the association.

Miss O. M. Wampers, teacher in administration school of religious education, gave a short talk and told of how interested the children were in this work.

The pupils of Mrs. Mangan's room seem to be the most enthusiastic workers for the association, as their room still retains the school pennant for the month, having the largest attendance of parents at the meeting.

HILLTOP THEATER CHANGES HANDS

After 14 Years' Management H. G. Moon Leases Theater to A. J. Nelson

The Hilltop theater, 2324 West Broad street, which for 14 years has been under the management of Henry G. Moon, has been leased for a period of years, to A. J. Nelson, who, it is understood is connected with the Rivoli theater. The consideration and terms of the lease were not made public.

Mr. Moon's management of the Hilltop theater is listed as among the longest tenure of any neighborhood house in Columbus.

Mr. Moon retains the ownership of the building, which includes the room occupied by the Watts restaurant and flats on the second floor.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas: Rev. J. M. Wenrich has served us faithfully as pastor, ministering to our spiritual, moral and in some cases physical needs, having come here in July, 1916, and with a handful of men and women organized what is now known as the Hilltop Lutheran church.

The rise from a very small mission, meeting in a small shed, to a congregation such as we now have and with a $30,000 church edifice, necessarily entailed much hard labor accompanied by many trials, all of which have been borne with much patience and faith.

And Whereas: The faithful services of Mrs. Wenrich and their daughter, Jeanette, have been of such great value to the upbuilding of this congregation; Be it hereby resolved: That in recognition of these valuable services, we, as members of the church council, believing that we are voicing the sentiments of the entire congregation, beg leave to submit these resolutions of regret for the leaving of our pastor and family to enter into God's work in other fields, and may the grace of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ and the love of God go with you and bless your labors that the harvest may be abundant. Respectfully submitted,

J. W. Gronoble, vice president; C. J. Weidman, secretary; R. G. Haunts, Treasurer; C. E. Heimbrecht, Hal Adamson, M. A. Pfaltzgraf, William Weisert, John Wagner, Edward Weisenberger.

Mrs. R. A. Long, 309 Eldon avenue, entertained members of the Progressive Needle club at her home Wednesday evening, March 11. Mrs. Harry L. Brown was assistant hostess.

EARLY DECISION IS EXPECTED IN GAS LINE CASES

Supreme Court Hears Arguments on Utility Commission Order.

An early decision of the supreme court is expected on the power of the utilities commission to force the Federal Gas and Fuel Co. to serve new patrons in Columbus. Arguments were heard Tuesday on the ruling of the commission that connections must be made by the gas company.

Freeman T. Eagleson, attorney for the gas company, argued that it ceased to be a public utility when the city of Columbus failed to renew its franchise last November, and the jurisdiction of the utilities commission has ended, he said.

City Attorney Leach contended that the company is a part of the Ohio Fuel Supply Co. and the Columbus Gas and Fuel Co., and since these are under commission jurisdiction it should be also.

The hearing was placed on the docket two weeks ago when the company filed an appeal from the order of certain applicants in the city. The period of exemption from obedience to the order was extended by mutual consent until court decision has been made.

HALF-CENT STAMPS ARE TO BE ISSUED

Issued Designed to Meet Requirements of New Rates, Effective April 15.

In addition to the issuance of the 1½-cent stamp, which is designed to take care of the new third-class postal rates effective April 15, Postmaster Tibbetts of the Columbus postoffice, announced last week that he had received notice that a ½-cent stamp would be furnished to take care of existing private and postoffice stocks of one-cent stamps and envelopes, as in combination with stamps of other denominations to cover the required postage, where fractional amounts are involved.

The design and color of the new one-half-cent stamp has not been completed, according to word from postal officials at Washington. The local office has ordered 200,000 of this issue of one-half cent stamps.

These postage stamps have been designed to meet changes in the third-class postage rates designating 1½-cent charges for every two ounces or a fraction thereof.

THE ROBIN

The robin is singing,
He is singing away,
In the apple tree
Where the branches sway.

He is merrily singing,
He is singing for joy
On a small thin branch
Just like a toy.

All summer long
He sings this way.
It's not very hard
And he thinks it's just play.

But when the winter comes,
Cold and gray,
He goes to the southland
To stay.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

HYSTERIA.

Hysteria is a neurosis. A neurosis is a nervous affection without a lesion. A lesion is a structural change in tissue. Hysteria, then is wholly nervous. Is it sickness? Yes. One who is hysterical is really sick. What is the best treatment for hysteria? Bodily comfort, the presence of a valued friend and absolute quiet. But suppose the patient is hilarious, then what? Absolute quiet. Suppose one hysterical person is caring for another! It would be done with a vengeance and might be a draw game. One or the other must have nerve control. Verily, the best doctor for hysteria is one with nerve-control that is worth emulating, and he or she need not necessarily be a physician, though of course body comfort implies normal organs—especially normal glands, the nerve control of which should be watched. A proper environment is most necessary and, as in other illness, any existing causes should be removed. A doctor and the best nurse can make little progress without the co-operation of the family.

Parents may not be unduly anxious about the children, but if they manifest all the anxiety they feel—even in their normal, every day life—they may be contributing to abnormal nervous development. The mother who calls her eight-year-old boy "babe" will never make a soldier of him, and to habitually "put words into his mouth" to say, as if he were a three-year-old, is to rob him of his personality development.

The teacher who writes "Do right" on the board and says nothing, will get better results from it than will the one who has many specific rules and nags her pupils. It is her character, more than her words, that counts. We are remembered more by what we are than by what we say. Some one has said: "Your character speaks so loud that I can't hear your words." The best growth in character comes (unconsciously) from emulation of our superiors—from absorption, so to speak, of their character.

I know a 15-year-old girl—a model of grace and self-control—who can entertain and make others as comfortable as her mother can, and the mother is a most cultured and refined lady. It has come about by "absorption" from her mother and not by lecturing.

I was once in a lumber office when a 12-year-old boy drove in to get a bill of lumber. He checked the lumber as it was put into his wagon and, in the office, produced his check book, wrote a check for the amount, signed his father's name and his own name and drove off. I do not remember that he said anything. I did not know his father, but I gave him credit for trusting that boy to the boy's advantage, and I suspect that the boy was watched closely. But he was trusted and the idea of honesty and square dealing was taught him by daily practice rather than by the constant reminding of badness. It feels good to anybody to be trusted.

I knew a boy who was taken from a children's home. It was soon learned that he was untruthful. His guardians—good people—kept the boy conscious constantly that he was a liar and could not be trusted, and at this time, the boy now a grown man, is a liar and a thief and his guardians, now grown old, are loth to leave him their property.

A two-year-old baby in the apartment next mine, much of the time, indulges in a tearless, whining cry. It cares nothing for the threats it gets. It might easily be managed quietly, not for my comfort, but for the child's best good. When it finds out (truly or falsely) that nobody cares, the noise will cease for the child will find that it does not pay. But its mother is not wise and that is a reflection on her mother. This child may be hysterical and its own children, later on, will, most likely, not have complete self control. In this way, hysteria may run in families, but there is lack of wisdom in some of the links of the chain.

ROBINS-GREISER SCHOOL TO PRESENT YOLANDO MERO AT Y. M. C. A.

YOLANDO MERO

Yolanda Mero's march along the road of pianistic success has been steady and sure. From the beginning—after her graduation at the age of 14, from the Budapest Conservatory and the tutelage of Frau Professor Reenebaum, a Liszt pupil, she has moved straight to a position sought by all in her profession. She has been heard with the greatest symphony orchestras of the world and has had the advantage of association with the living master conductors.

Her grasp upon the standard pianoforte compositions of all schools, classic and modern, has been complete and her abilities to adequately interpret these works fitting to each occasion. In addition to artistic and technical development that have come as the result of serious and intelligent study, Yolanda Mero has had the further advantages accruing from experience arising from appearing before exacting audiences in concerts and recitals of broad character.

No feminine player of the pianoforte is more thoroughly equipped to be regarded as the greatest artist of her sex than Yolanda Mero. She has every quality entitling her to be so considered.

Yolanda Mero will appear here next Thursday afternoon at the new Y. M. C. A. auditorium under the auspices of the Robbins-Greiser School of Music.

Holder's Helpful Hints

A BANQUET FOR TWO

Well, a few years went by, and I met your mother one day on the street. She was the sweetest girl in all the world to me then as she has been ever since. I did not know who she was, but I knew why I had kept these lots and how much I wanted them for a home of my own. I had bought other property from time to time, and had sold as I received a satisfactory profit; but these I had kept, and, after the first offer, was never tempted to part with them. It was not easy for me, a hand from the farm, to win your mother, the daughter of a college professor, for she had many to choose from; but I won her at last and brought her here to the three rooms which are now the back of the house.

That day God gave me His blessing beyond measure, and it has been perennial and perpetual ever since. The house was very simple and unpretentious, but it was ours, we owned it. It was about half paid for. We were young, but we meant to have our own home, free from all debt. Your mother was as eager as I. We saved every dollar possible and sacrificed our pleasures until the last cent was paid. That evening we went to the hotel and gave ourselves a banquet. It was a celebration of our first achievement, and while we have done some things since which have brought us pleasure, we have never done anything so fundamentally wise or which has contributed so fully to our success and contentment as when we determined to have and to hold our own home, with no man to say when we should come or go.

Our lives have been expressed here. Every tree has significance for us, and most of them are mementoes of of some sentiment or achievement which has cost a sacrifice. The vines and flowers have the fragrance of romance, and when we built the large house we knew that we should live here to the end of our days. I have traveled over most of the civilized countries of the earth, and always my dreams—by day and by night—have been of this quiet spot. It is the most sacred place in the world to me—this tranquil home where love abides. The preacher tells us that there are homes in heaven; there may be, but we shall have to live a long time before we shall feel about them as we do about this

Your Uncle George married about the time I did. In our early days he always made more money than I. When I was getting $40 a month he was receiving $125. When I was making $1000 a year, he was making $2500. When I was making $2000 per year, he was making $6000. Your mother and I often tried to persuade him and his wife to buy, but they seemed always to think that they hadn't money enough; and they were in society. They held receptions and parties, went often to the opera, had many servants, and costly raiment. They bought everything they wanted but a home. Finally the panic came on and George lost his position. He had a few hundred dollars in the bank, which soon disappeared. They were in desperate straits and were in actual want before he wrote me. We felt the panic here, to, but—but—well, you see I had married a girl who worshiped babies and loved cats, and we had our home. We were anxious not to use our cash on hand or to lose any of our investments. I was working for a wholesale hardware store at the time, and I know our firm would suffer, so I went to the manager and told him that I understood how the panic must effect his business and that until the financial situation changed he could reduce my salary from $2000 to $1000 per year, on condition that other employes of the firm should not know and that my act should not influence the attitude of the firm toward them. In some way or other the firm weathered the storm. At our house who had a living income, we did not have to pay rent and we lost none of our investments. We sent for George and his wife and kept them here more than a year in our little three-room house. When conditions changed he secured a position at $1800. When he started for the train he turned and looked at our cottage, and said, with all reverance: "God bless the little home; we are going to buy one, too, with the first money I make."

Then I knew how astray a family is when it has no home to anchor it. But George didn't buy. His tastes had become too extravagant—he didn't save. He has never made over $3000 a year since, and over a year ago he broke down with nervous prostration, and came here. We have been glad to have him and Laura, and we could make them comfortable in the large house.

Today they have gone back to Chicago, but not to their own home. They will live on the third floor of a flat which houses nine other families. They haven't a tree or a vine, nor a flower, not a blade of grass to go to in all God's outdoors. Did you see the tears in their eyes as they rode away? Those tears were not for us, but were tears of homesickness for the home they might have had.

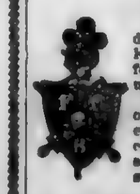
KNITTED JUMPER SUIT IDEAL FOR SCHOOL AND SPORTS

Fashion has swung around the circle and here we are back again to our first love—the two-piece dress, consisting of separate skirt and blouse. Already the jumper frock is one of the most talked-of vogues of the season.

When it comes to the costume which consists of skirt with blouse to match, knitted outerwear is right in its element. The idea of an ensemble wherein the skirt is knitted to match one's sweater, slipover or jumper is making instantaneous appeal to the woman who appreciates practicality expressed in smart fashion.

For sports, school or general utility wear what more ideal than a knitted two-piece suit such as is shown in the picture? It is knitted of brown fiber and mohair, using fiber stripings of orange and sand. The T-neck slipover is youthful and new.

Points of interest in regard to the new knitted jumper suits are: Sleeves range in [illegible] length from more shoulder cap to elbow and wrist; skirts are very short, colors stress gra, copper, browns, the new bleu pervenche greens, including artichoke, sea and emerald; yellow and orange, orchid and many black and white combinations. For the more elaborate knitted two-piece modes, fancy stitch is employed, the shellstitch being a favorite. Very interesting are the composite knitted suits which use cloth, preferably flannel, for the skirt, with border matching the knitted blouse.



There is no end to the clever trickeries of stitch, color and unique design which enter with the creation of these knitted two-piece ensembles.

A charming dressy jumper suit boasts knitted plaits for the skirt which has a front panel done in jacquard patterning. There are borderings of gay color applied in that striking way for which knitted sports apparel is noted.

It can easily be foreseen that the temptation is going to be to own several blouses so that one may revel in the delights of interchangeable costumes. Julia Bottomley.

The greatest book in the world. It is the treasure house of God's truth. The book contains the mind of God—the state of man—the way of life. It gives light to direct you—food to support you—comfort to cheer you. It should fill memory—rule the heart—and guide the feet.

WILL HOLD OPEN HOUSE SUNDAY

Public Invited to Inspect New Westgate Masonic Temple.

That the general public may have an opportunity to inspect the new Westgate Masonic temple, which is just completed, Westgate Masonic lodge will hold open house Sunday afternoon from 1 to 4 o'clock.

The temple is a structure of beauty and one of which the Masonic organization may well be proud and well suited to the needs of the lodge.

Besides the social room, which is approximately 48x54 feet in dimensions, with a stage at the south end for entertainment and speaking purposes, the first floor has two rest rooms, cloak rooms and lavatory.

The lodge room is on the second floor and is about the same size as the social room on the first floor with a stage at the south end. The north part of the second floor is given over to a balcony overlooking the lodge room and will be used by the Westgate chorus in the work of the lodge. This floor also contains a tyler's room, preparation room, waiting room and paraphernalia rooms.

The basement contains a large dining hall, about 46 feet square; a kitchen, which will be moderaly equipped, and the heating plant.

Dedicatory services of the new temple will be held Monday and will be in charge of the Grand Lodge of Ohio. The Knight Templar band and Westgate chorus will participate in the ceremonies. The dedicatory services is open only to members of the Masonic order.

Bonnie Ramsey of Charleston, W. Va., was a visitor a few days during the past week at the home of his uncle, O. H. Ramsey, 196 North Ogden avenue.

Bitten By Mad Dog

Mrs. Edward Volta, 42 North Burgess avenue, was bitten last week by dog, which had been a pet in the family. The dog was killed and a post mortem held, developing the fact that the dog was afflicted with rabies.

Mrs. Volta has been taking Pasteur treatments and is convalescing at her home.

GIRL ON SKATES IS RUN DOWN BY AUTO

Mabel Pope, aged 9 years, of 330 Clarendon avenue, suffered a sprained foot and lacerations about the head Saturday night when she was struck by the automobile of J. W. Thrush, 305 Cypress avenue, while she was roller skating at Sullivant and Highland avenue. Her injuries were not of a serious nature.

The annual congregational meeting of Hope Memorial Presbyterian church will be held Thursday evening, April 2, at 7:30 to hear reports of all organizations, to elect elders, deacons and trustees and to transact important items of business. Every communicant member of the church is urged to attend.

HENRY SCHULTZ FRACTURES RIB

As a result of a fall last Friday afternoon, while wiring a house on North Powell avenue, Henry W. Schultz, of the Schultz Electric Co., residing at 66 Wheatland avenue, suffered a fractured rib.

Mr. Schultz was wiring the front porch of a residence when the ladder on which he was standing, slipped, allowing him to fall between the joists of the porch floor. He was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital, where his injuries were dressed, and was removed to his home Saturday, where he is slowly convalescing.

Little Mabel Irene Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Green, 227 North Ogden avenue, underwent an operation for mastoids at Grant hospital, Saturday, March 21. She is improving as well as could be expected.

Mrs. Elton Spring, who was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital last Friday, is slowly improving from the effects of an operation.

Mrs. C. E. Price, 219 North Park avenue, received word Sunday of the death of her sister, Mrs. Della Davis, Pontiac, Mich.

Friday, March 27, the monthly union service of the Church of God will be held at the Hilltop Church of God on South Park at Olive street. Mayor Thomas will be the speaker and there will be special music.

The season's building program on the Hilltop is getting a good start. Already scores of homes are in process of erection. The greatest number of new residences now being built in any one locality is on the Hilltop in the Broadview and Westgate additions. The building program in that locality, infact has not let up all winter, as between 30 and 40 homes have been built in these additions during the winter.

All over the Hilltop, on all streets, can be seen either the excavating for the foundation or laying the foundation or perhaps the framework going up on scores of new homes.

It is predicted that this year will not be far behind two years ago, if not surpass it in the building line.

Then there are several new business blocks contemplated for this year's building program on the Hilltop.

Let them come. "The more the merrier."

For the most part the copper and tin mines in Cornwall, England, which have been world famous since the time of Julius Caesar, have gone so deep that they are no longer profitable.

A new method of advertising comes from France—a machine for printing advertisements on sidewalks. The machine consists of a revolving cylinder on which type is set, inked with various colored paints. The machine is rolled over the pavements, leaving the merchants message brightly displayed.

HOBBY SHOW AN UNIQUE AFFAIR

Cats, Dogs, Parrots, Ponies, Curios and Heirlooms Attract Attention.

The Hobby Show held at Hope Memorial church last Friday evening and sponsored by the Young Married People's Bible class proved to be a very interesting and unique affair.

The show consisted of displays of hobbies and pets of many residents of the Hilltop which were on display and ranged from a live alligator to the most unique of curios. One of the unique displays was the dog Tommy and cat Billie, of the family of Rev. Shields, and displayed how amicably a family may get along when properly trained.

In the curio and heirloom booth was displayed many articles of genuine interest, among them a coasting sled which was built in the 70's, proving that our fathers and grandfathers enjoyed coasting as much as the youngster of today, even if they were not bothered by automobiles. There were also displayed old books, papers of the date, bearing the announcement of Lincoln death, fancy work years old, a collection of stamps wathered years ago, and guns and pistols of ancient date.

The ponies attracted the attention of the children as did the alligator which was scheduled to be fed a 4 o'clock in the afternoon, but refused to eat.

Perhaps the most original and unique part of the show was the organ grinder and monkey, "Big" George Matson dressed up as an Italian organ grinder and had all of them guessing, while "Little" George took the part of the monkey and played the part so well that it was remarked that "he could put a real monkey to shame."

BROKEN PIPE CAUSES SCARE

What was thought to be smoke filling the basement at the state hospital Friday night caused the attendants to call the fire department. A teacher in Milton Academy, near Boston, Massachusetts, has conceived of a novel method of stimulating an increased interest in the dead languages. He constructed a cross-word puzzle in Latin which he presented to his pupils for solution. The success of the idea was so marked that it was copied in other departments of the school, and the pupils themselves began to devise cross-word puzzles in Latin.

The United States, Sweden, Canada, Holland and Switzerland are the only countries in the world whose standards in gold and silver currency have not been destroyed by the conditions brought about by the World war. England, Norway, Denmark and Japan may in time restore their standards, but the other countries have a circulating mass of paper money which will probably never be brought to its par value in metal.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. B. McFADON

The word "complex" is used a great deal of late as a noun. It is to be found in the big booktionaries already, followed by "n," and if we use it more as a noun they will all have it, sooner or later—that's the business of the lexicons.

Webster says "A complex (n) is an assemblage of related things—a whole made up of complicated or interrelated parts." Your personality complex is what you are and appear to be up to date and it is changing every day. Mine is different from yours. Two people may graduate at the same school and make the same grades, but their educational complexes differ as do their faces. They hear the same lecture; their impressions from it are different; each, instinctively adds his impression to his complex, and so they differ and disagree and always will.

Public questions—taxation, for instance—are forced upon us. You and I have our own opinions; others have theirs. The people, as a whole may have some beliefs in common; that is public opinion—a complex. Legislators modify that with their own ideas, and after duly wrangling over the matter, make laws which are a state or national complex by which we must abide. And so national minds are formed that even world wars can't change.

Christianity is thought to be very simple by those who keep close to its essentials. It is our human nature, environment, etc., that form our individual complexes, and it is the business of the Christian ministry to whip us into line. Every church (denomination) is a complex, and as fast as they place less value on non-essentials, the number of denominations will decrease. Many churches would unite today if it were not for their economic and property complexes. After a few centuries there will be only one Protestant church. Then after a few more centuries there will be only one Christian church. (The people that are sitting up nights to see the world come to an end have a different complex.)

But what has complexes to do with health? Let us see:

Our individual health complexes are widely variant. They are composite—composed largely of our food plus our habits, modified by environment. The most important of these is the food complex, and to most people it is a complex complex.

The chemists say there are 500 kinds of food, and they prove it by their chemical analysis. They also make the general classification into base-forming and acid-forming foods. Then it is up to the individual to decide upon his what, when, how and how much to eat, which makes our individual problems as never ending in foods as in our conduct—we have decisions to make constantly.

In these columns, I have chosen to simplify by confining to the general classification—base-forming and acid-forming foods. There are dieticians who would agree with this, and yet would have us think there is really only one kind of real food—natural food. That when the food is denatured (as in the case of white flour and white sugar) the best food elements are taken away, and, the remaining part poisons—not because of what we eat but because of the deficiency. Hence, we have "deficiency diseases," such as beri-beri, pellagra, scurvy, infantile paralysis, etc.

Dietitians differ, and who is right? Shall we follow the one who recommends two good meals a day or the one that eats five lunches. If in doubt, give each a 30-day tryout and then do as I do—eat one meal and two lunches. But "a" little knowledge is a dangerous thing." Sometimes we think "The more we find out the more we don't know," but, don't get discouraged—read them all and you will find them a unit on many important points, which the individual can well afford to adopt, at least to the point of satisfactory investigation. Not sporadic, one-meal trials, but good, thorough tests.

A BANQUET FOR TWO.

We all have a fear of leaving our wives poor with a family to bring up when we are gone, for death is always lurking near. We try to interest it by insurance and savings, but nothing can be a real substitute for a home a woman may have. Without anything else in the world; but if she has a home her love finds food and clothing for the children; she keeps them together; she sends them to school; she teaches them industry and independance, and they will grow up to be good citizens. But if she must rent and find the money to pay it each month, she moves from place to place, and every time she moves, the home sentiment is weakened; the children scatter, and when they try to think of home, there is not a house in the world which holds for them the memories of childhood or the ideals of youth.

You will make mistakes as you develope in life, and you may learn wisdom as the years go by; you may become famous in your chosen profession, but you will never do any big thing so important to yourselves; your posterity and your nation as establishing a happy home, and you will never do anything that will give you so much contentment and satisfaction. You may succeed in your chosen vocations until you have many symbols of honor before your names and a dozen degrees after it, but when you are sick, which one will bring you comfort? When you are weary, which one will bring you rest? When storms break, which degree will shelter or protect you? Boys with all thy learning, learn wisdom; for what doth it profit a man if he hath seen the castles of many kingdoms, and hath not a cottage of his own?

After awhile your fortunes begin to improve, but we didn't shift our friendship for old Martin. As we prospered, we made it possible for him to prosper, too, and we became even faster friends than before. When we had finished the larger part of the home, just as it stands today, we had Martin and his wife out to supper (You boys would call it dinner, but it tasted just like supper to us) and afterwards we sat right here and discussed investments. I remember his first sentence as he began to talk: "Well, David," he said, "there's just one crop of free land, and it's about harvested. People everywhere are growing hungry for homes, and they have been taking up the free claims the Government offers. You probably couldn't take a claim because the law requires the homesteader to live on the land in good faith to make it a home, but there are always people who will move. As soon as they can get a little cash they sell cheaply and move on. These lands are nearly always sold under real value; and when the free land is taken, the Government will drain great tracts in wet districts and irrigate the desert. Private tracts will be opened up, and the great ranches will be divided into farms. There will be opportunities during your life to buy land cheap. If I were you, David, I'd take a trip and look the whole new country over."

K. OF P.'S TO STAGE "THE FUN REVUE"

Proceeds to Send Winning Team to Cleveland to Compete With That District.

At a meeting of the Franklin County Pythian association held last week, it was voted to produce the musical comedy, "The Fun Revue," under the direction of Oscar R. Shore.

The production will be staged at Memorial hall Tuesday evening, April 16. It is expected to use at least one hundred girls in the show and anyone desiring to take part can see Mr. Shore at the K. of P. hall, 24 West Goodale.

Rehearsals will start Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The proceeds will be used to defray the expenses of the winning Knight rank team to Cleveland, where they will compete with the winning team from that district.

The Knight rank teams of all the lodges of Franklin county have been participating in a contest this winter, each team putting on the work in the Knight rank on some floor other than their home lodge. Ellenwood will put on the work at Westwood lodge, Thursday evening, April 9, at which time the county deputy will pay the lodge an official visit.

BACK TRAILING ON OLD SCHOOL DAYS

RECOLLECTIONS

By W. S.

The approach of spring is probably bringing to the minds of the school boys and girls the time of final examinations and the summer vacation. And I suppose final examinations do not gain much in favor with school pupils as the years ago by. But then there's the bright side following.

I believe the pupils have more tests (or examinations) during the school year than we used to have 40 or 50 years ago. We had one final examination in June of each year, which was the basis of promotion in the grades. The result of each pupil's examination was marked on his or her paper by the teacher, after she had gone over it, and it was returned to the writer. Instead of the letters "P," "F," "G" and "E," as are now indicated in grading, figures were used to denote the standing. Seventy was the minimum allowed for passing in any one study.

At the end of the school year the teacher would arrange for an annual picnic with the pupils of her room. A day was set—generally a Friday. On that morning each boy and girl as they went to school took along from home a nicely prepared picnic lunch. Then excitement run high as they gathered in their school room. Presently the teacher would be spied coming, when about a dozen of the girls would rush out to meet her, showing her what a nice lunch of picnic dinner each had. About a dozen girlish arms would try to get around her and she'd try and get her arms around the bunch, then they would escort her into the room, all girls talking at once; while some boys would be either tormenting some girls by sneaking their lunches from them or making funny chalk pictures on the blackboard about the girls.

School takes up, but with about as much order as a family of kiddies on Christmas morning. A Bible chapter is probably read, a prayer offered, a song sung, and a few other preliminaries gone through, and then a get-ready for the big event. The faithful teacher gives all orders about all staying together and obeying her, etc., and they start with lunches, footing it to a not-far-away woods that has been chosen as the place, and after reaching it the eats are all placed safely in a cool shady spot, and the games start—"London Bridge is Falling Down," "King William," "Prisoner's Base," etc.—besides one or two rope swings made with a board thrown between the rails of a near-by fence. Some of the games played were, of course, "kissing games," and as our teacher was generally a good-looker she got her share of being chosen." Then it was fun when she would happen to choose some boy who was somewhat shy or bashful. There would generally be a foot race till some boy caught him and they would carry him back into the crowd, then "unfold" him and hold his arms and feet while the teacher would plant a big kiss on his cheek, accompanied by the shouts and handclaps of the rest of the boys and girls, after which he would blushingly get up, and with his sleeve or the back of his hand wipe the side of his face.

But the teacher announces that it is time to get ready for dinner, and chooses a committee of girls to assist getting the lunches ready and a couple of boys to go to the nearby spring after a big bucket of cold water. Table cloths are spread on the ground in the shade of a couple of big trees, upon which the lunches are spread, then all set themselves around it in a big circle. Enjoy it? Say, if I recollect right, a meal from the finest hotel in Columbus would not taste better—good home-made bread spread with fresh country butter, hard boiled eggs, fresh cherry pie, jellies, jams, home boiled ham, or maybe some chicken, etc. Then eating out there on a bright June day in the woods midst the chirping and songs of the spring birds, and the scampering of numerous squirrels and chipmunks, was enough to make a fellow eat, eat, eat—well, till 'twas all gone, and want more.

Then, after that, more games, together with stories told by the teacher and the singing of school songs took up the afternoon till it was time to go home.

Yes, I suppose those affairs, to the average one of today might seem to be a little "tame" or uninteresting, but I'll venture to say that if one could ask some of the grandparents of today about their old-time school picnics their faces would brighten up and they would class such events as bright spots in their school day memories.

HAND EMBROIDERY ENRICHES INFORMAL AFTERNOON FROCKS

It is not that embroidery is a new decorative theme, but it is its unique placement which gives it unusual prestige in the scheme of things fashionable. Just as the poet clothes old and familiar truths in language different, so is the stylist leading a new and distinctive appeal to hand embroidery by positioning it in novel ways.

The informal afternoon frock shown in the picture owes much of its charm to the fact that the embroidered border is not merely a stereotyped border but is designed so as to panel high at one side. One recognizes at a glance that only hand-stitchery can carry out such charming vagaries, and this fact in itself stamps the frock with that indefinite something called "atmosphere" which bespeaks the exclusive.

Another pretty caprice of skilled fingers and artistic insight is to embroider a bouquet at some unexpected vantage point on the frock. For instance, a cluster of flowers worked in nature true colors may find lodgment somewhere on the front bodice as if it were a corsage bouquet. From it drop pedals and half-blown flowerets in a shower which is of realistic aspect, accomplished, of course, all in embroidery stitch. This imparts the exclusive touch, for only the better gowns show individual treatment of this sort.

Very handsome is a black satin straightline frock carrying embroidery done in white silk floss, the same patterning unconventional daisies, roses and foliage in the form of a border down the side fastening of the gown.

It is also the fashion to embroider in tones related to the gown itself. For instance, the original of the frock pictured uses bluette-colored flat crepe as its medium, with the floral pattern in darker shades of blue.

The long streaming necktie which adds so much grace to this one-piece frock invites special mention for it is a distinguishing characteristic of a majority of the newest gowns. These ties become a part of the gown itself and not an accessory for they are made of the same fabric as the frock.

Julia Bottomley.

HILLTOP STREETS ARE LISTED ON PAVING PROGRAM

One Thousand Men to Be Employed in Street Improvement Work.

The city paving program during the coming summer is the most comprehensive ever undertaken by the city, according to estimates prepared by City Engineer Simpson, and will amount to about 35 miles of new streets and alleys, costing approximately $3,000,000. It is said that 1000 men will be employed on the 232 different jobs. They will constitute different streets in all parts of the city, the largest of which will be the Nelson Road contract running from Broad street to Leonard avenue, at a cost of $160,423.

Following are the Hilltop streets that are on the contemplated season's program, together with the estimated

Besides these streets the new sewers that are to be commenced on the Hilltop in a short time together with the extreme building program, should make the Hilltop a pretty busy place this summer.

HOW TO INVEST YOUR MONEY

First of a Series of Financial Articles Being Written for The Record.

In writing a series of articles on "How to Invest Your Money" it would seem best to begin with a few thoughts on how to save money so that you can reach the point where you will have the problem of how to invest your money. Saving money involves wise spending, intelligent saving and finally, safe investment.

Taking these in their order—Wise Spending means thrift. A thrifty man plans carefully, manages economically and saves consistently. It means looking forward to tomorrow and spending in such a way that something may be left for tomorrow.

Intelligent savings consists in foregoing ill considered or foolish expenditures today in order to be able to secure in the future either necessities or the more substantial luxuries.

A thrifty person is not a miser. He is one who spends money just as freely as the extravagant man, but he spends it wisely instead of unwisely. He spends it for durable things instead of transient things. Most people who succeed in saving money are those who have a purpose in mind and who consistently and regularly save a certain portion of their income. One of the secrets of saving money, according to those who have been the most successful at it, is to save first and spend afterward. In other words, out of each pay check you first lay aside a certain percentage in the savings bank and then spend the rest for the necessities or the luxuries of life.

The rules of saving money are to spend wisely, save regularly and consistently have a purpose for saving, and save first before spending.

LEAGUE PLAYERS ARE BANQUETED

Trophies Awarded to Winning Teams of West Side Church League.

The close of a most successful season of basketball in the West Church league was brought to an official close Tuesday evening when the members of the various teams composing the league were banqueted at Hoge Memorial church and the trophies awarded to the winning teams.

The ceremonies and speaking following the banquet were in charge of C. F. Bigham, who has been president of the West Church league for the past three years, and under whose regime the league has been built up until it now includes 22 teams representing the various churches of the West Side. Prospects for next season point to the addition of more teams for the league.

Holy Family Senior team won the West Side Board of Trade cup, a city trophy, in the elimination series.

The Hilltop Civic Association cup was won by the West Park Intermediate team.

The West Park Seniors won the Ray G. Haunts cup and will have it in their possession the coming year.

The latter three cups are West Side trophies and must be won three consecutive years by a team before it becomes the permanent possession of that particular organization.

After the presentation of the cups to the various winning teams by Chairman Bigham, a very able address was made by Mayor Thomas. Councilmen Zimpfer, Worley, Lewis and Webb were also present and make short addresses to the boys. Councilwoman Jones, sent her regrets at being unable to be present. Short talks were also made by a number of other guests who are interested in the recreations of the boys and girls.

WEST SIDE TROOPS WIN HONORS AT THE SCOUT SHOW

Troop 21 Takes Second in Signaling and Troop 9 Wins Barrel Tilting Contest.

The most spectacular exhibition of scouting ever put on in Columbus was demonstrated at the fourth annual Scout show at the Coliseum last Saturday evening.

The West Side, and especially the Hilltop, was well represented in the show. There are about 90 active troops of Boy Scouts in Columbus. Of this number, Troop 14 of Indianola District won first place in inspection and Troop 21 of Hoge Memorial, second place. Troop 11, of West Park M. E. church, another west side troop, stood fourth.

The signalling team of Troop 21, consisting of Kenneth Kidd, sender; Gerald Wilson, receiver, and Lawrence Tracy, recorder, completed a perfect message in less than one-half second behind the team of Troop 31, which gave them second place in the signalling contest.

Hugh Stewart of Troop 9, St. Aloysius church, proved city champion in the barrel tilting contest.

Troop 11 demonstrated the building of a Dan Beard pioneer bridge, while Troop 9 constructed a lean-to shelter as used in the forests, and Troop 21 set up a "Lone Troop" camp, using the modern method trek cart equipment.

After all the events were over and the final score counted up, Troop 21 stood third in the show championship.

UNION SERVICE GOOD FRIDAY

A union Good Friday service for all Hilltop churches will be held at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church from 2 to 3 o'clock Friday afternoon.

All Christians are invited to attend this service for an hour of worship and quiet meditation as the scriptural account of our Lord's suffering upon the cross is read by the various ministers of the Hilltop. Familiar hymns will be used to illustrate the story.

It is hoped that the fine spirit of cooperation which was manifested in the large union Thanksgiving service will be repeated in this Good Friday service.

Action was taken by the Hilltop Ministers' association last week inviting all business houses in the Hilltop district to close their doors during that hour that all business people and their customers may attend the services.

There will be no sermon, no announcements, no offering. Everybody is welcome.

WESTGATE PARK ADDITION OPENS

New Allotment Extends From Broad Street to Sullivant Avenue.

The Pavey-Johnson Company announce that they will open for public inspection and sale, Saturday, April 4, the beautiful new home site to be known as Westgate Park, which comprises approximately 190 acres, and lies directly west of Westgate, and is bounded by West Broad street, Tyler street, Sullivant avenue and Westgate.

In interviewing Mr. Ernest W. Pavey and Mr. Herman H. Johnson recently, they made the point that the terrific demand on the Hilltop for higher restrictions, better built homes, and more home sites forced the company to purchase this additional acreage and offer it for public sale.

It is announced that all improvement will be installed and that no lots will be under 50 feet in width.

The 33 acres the city has been considering purchasing for a park site immediately adjoins Westgate Park in Westgate.

On Thursday evening Miss Edith Robbins and Miss Ethel Greiser, 67 Midland avenue, entertained at dinner at the Deshler hotel, Madame Yolando Mero, who presented a program for the Robbins-Greiser School of Music on Thursday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, and Mr. Frederick J. Hoffman of the Cincinnati College of Music. Madame Mero and Mr. Hoffman remained in Columbus for the Detroit Symphony concert Thursday evening at Memorial hall.

ALL PUPILS NOW ON FULL TIME

For the first time since the opening of school last September, all pupils of the school are on full time, the last marking in this week.

The painters have completed their work of redecorating the building and as soon as a few minor improvements are made the building will be in first-class shape.

The new addition has made a great improvement in the school, the rooms are light and airy and an additional stairway and exit are helping very greatly in the entrance to and exit from the building.

It is a great pity, however, that all people cannot realize that a modern school, with well cared for grounds, is an asset to any community—that they should assist by protecting lawns, trees and shrubbery—by keeping the building from damage in every way. One of the best ways of preparing for good citizenship is to respect public, as well as private property.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

ARE YOU GAINING IN WEIGHT?

I believe that 90 per cent of the people eat beyond their needs. Fifty per cent of those charged with the habit will deny the charge and substantiate their claim (in their own minds) by the presence of hunger, not realizing that hunger and appetite are often habits, insidiously formed.

Habits of appetite are easily changed. Dinner may be an hour later than usual, and, of course, we are more hungry when we get it. The same delay may occur the next day, and we don't mind it at all. The appetite or hunger habit is changed.

If, on that first day, when so disturbed, one eats a heavier meal (which he ought not to do) he will, most likely do the same next day, and the next, and by that time he has a habit of eating a heavy dinner. In the formation of this unnecessary habit, he has not reasoned that he has added unnecessarily, to his daily intake of food. The breaking of this heavy dinner habit is another three day's undertaking, implying will power and self denial. The chances are that it will not be done, for the urge of taste and a perverted appetite are present, and the support of the eat-to-keep-up-your-strength argument settles it that the heavy dinner habit will be continued. Reason isn't in it. Taste and perverted appetite win.

Imagine a mechanic—and most of us need not imagine, for we know them—who does more or less of manual labor. He has his breakfast of eggs, rolls and coffee and a good lunch, as he should have. Then after his day's work he gives the gas a little extra push, for he knows that his good wife, who is a fine cook, is preparing form him, a dinner which—as Colonel Wilson would say—will make him able to "look the sun out of countenance and criticise the preacher for heresy."

"Well," you say, "what's wrong with that?" That's all right. That is most likely an ideal dinner, and that man deserves it. He feels goods, sleeps well and enjoys his meals, but— That man and his good wife are in their forties and are gaining in weight. One could spare 30 pounds of fat and the other 20 and their children may be developing too rapidly. If those people apply for life insurance, they will find their rates extra high and will be told that weight gaining in the forties and later is a disease. And the life insurance people know what they are talking about. They are the authority behind the medical profession for they specialise in statistics.

Our friends, the mechanic and his wife, are fairly comfortable now, but at the rate they are gaining, what will they be and how will they feel if perchance they should live 20 years yet? Their "excess baggage" at this time amounts to about the weight of one pail of water. (Imagine yourself carrying a pail of water, always and everywhere you go, and the weight constantly increasing.) It will either increase or diminish and it is for each one to decide which it will be. It can be diminished by the food method and it is generally agreed that that is the only way.

To eat until you have a sense of fullness, even once a day, is over-eating and a very few days of it makes a habit, the breaking of which is not so easy, for the suggestions of the good housewife and the importunities and gibes of friends are usually too strong for a will power already weakened by a perverted taste and appetite.

Most families eat too heavily of staple foods, such as bread, meat, potatoes, eggs, cheese, fried foods and fats, and not enough fruits and vegetables. If the fruit has been 2 to 1 in favor of staples, then change (slowly but surely) until the vegetables and fruits become parts to the staple 3 part. A change for a day against the habit of year will amount to nothing—hardly a beginning, for it will prove something of a fight; a week's exercise of will power (and won't power) may perceptibly start the new habit; a month's determined persistence ought to fix the habit and reduce the weight somewhere from one pound should be encouraging; six months of it will amount to real conversion, better sleeping, a better feeling of well-being, and a steady reduction in weight. White flour bread and other products and white sugar should be reduced to a maximum, and all excesses avoided.

To follow a regime like this, with care as to the quantity eaten, is the best and surest prevention of such diseases as rheumatism, paralysis, apoplexy, heart failure, hardened arteries, etc., and the best insurance of a longer and more comfortable and useful after life. The average span of life is being lengthened by public health methods and private effort and you who read this should join the ranks and plan to live 90 or 100 years instead of 60 or 70, and "then call your departure "God's will." God does not will it so. We take too much pride in "good living," by which we develop the children too rapidly, shorten our own lives and cause ourselves much of hell while yet on earth. Yea, we are all guilty. The simple life pays.

Holder's Helpful Hints

BETTER THAN GOLD

Well, boys, your mother and I discussed it and then made the journey. We went Northwest, and into Canada, then Southwest, and then over the Southern States. Everywhere it was the same—people clamoring for land. People from cities and towns trying to get a home where they could escape the nerve-destroying drudgery of the office and the factory and the mill.

Investing our money away from home was new to us, and we were a little timid. We decided to buy a small tract in each locality and then try them out. We could learn, in that way, which district paid us best in the shortest time, and it was not long until we knew. I was not going to tell you where it was because when you come to invest, conditions may have changed, and what was best for us might be worse for you; and this business a man must invest on his own judgement, he must study lands and soils, water and drainage, winds and climate, the trend of civilization, and, above all, where a man is buying a farm to work it, can make the most money with the least labor and expense. I didn't want to be ignorant of the business I was investing in. A doctor must know medicine, a lawyer must know law, a carpenter must know lumber and hard, ware, and a man investing money ought to make a profession of it. Anyway, I thought so. I went to the Agricultural College and took lectures. I learned to analyze soils and water and to breed up seeds and live-stock, and to use a level and transit; and then I studied the immigration question, in Washington, to learn what peoples were coming to this country and where they preferred to settle. A man ought to know nature—especially human nature—and if he knows men and land, he can easily get them together. Land is no good without a man, and not many men are much good without a home—and that means land. Of course I had to study other phases of business and investments, too, and I found these things to be true, that:

FUR-BEDECKED COATS INDORSED FOR SPRINGTIME

Yes, fashion heartily indorses fur as a trimming on spring coats, especially for the more formal dressy types. However, this approval is given on condition that fur embellishment be confined to the hemline as a border. There it may swish and swirl as lib ifum on the new sweep around coats. "For gardening purposes," he declared, "if they are not used, these vacant lots will be covered with weeds, injuring the appearance of the city.

The effectiveness of absorbing all fur from the collarline is apparent in the lovely coat pictured. This is a model of exotic charm, even unto the slight est detail. Seraglio is the name of the exquisite cloth and the color is referred to by the designer as nouveau blue. It is embroidered in silver and trimmed with gray fur. Give particular notice, if you please to the woodrose dispersed, white jabot trailing down the front of this distinguished-looking wrap. A frock, a coat, a blouse without a jabot of lace is an exception this season. Undoubtedly, we are entering upon an era wherein the the jabot will play a most important part throughout costume design—but this is digressing from our original subject, fur on spring wraps, a theme in itself of endless suggestion among the newer modes.

The border of fur is an almost invariable rule on the dressiest wraps and it also appears on some of the higher-grade sport coats. For the most part long-haired pelts, especially fox, are used. Light kasha coats, blonde shades and gray, are among the fascinating offerings.

There is a trend also to use fur furs in a novelty way. Gazelle, caracul and unspotted ermine are used as narrow bandings.

BUSINESS BLOCK TO BE ERECTED

Will Also Contain Office Suites and Apartments—To Be Steam Heated.

Work was begun Monday preparatory to the erection of a modern two-story business, office and apartment building at the corner of West Broad street and South Park avenue by O. E. Melvin.

This corner has been occupied by a brick dwelling, which will be moved to the rear of the lot, the new building starting at the front on Broad street and extending back to the dwelling. The building will have an eight-foot basement throughout, which may be used for business purposes. On the first floor will be a large business room, 51x62 feet dimensions, and four smaller business rooms facing on Park street. The second floor will contain two suites of office rooms and three apartments. The building will be steam heated throughout.

Victim of Sneak Thief

Monday night a sneak thief entered the engine house of No. 6 company, Broad and Mill streets, ransacked the bedrooms and stole $32 from the trouser pockets of Fireman Walter Miller, 91 North Ogden avenue.

FORMER HILLTOP RESIDENT IS DEAD

C. S. Buckley, whose sudden death occurred in a realty office on East State street on last Thursday, was a former resident of the Hilltop. He, in partnership with others, platted Buckingham Heights addition, a section of the Hilltop extending east of Lochner avenue to the state feeble minded institution grounds, and from Doren avenue to Sullivant avenue. While a resident of the Hilltop he was a member of the Glenwood M. E. church and resided at 95 South Ogden avenue. He was also a brother-in-law of H. O. Schoonover, 168 North Warren avenue.

BROAD ST. FILLING STATION ROBBED

Monday night was a busy time for filling station bandits, they striking twice within an hour's time and obtaining $70.

Employes of the Standard Oil filling station at Powell avenue and West Broad street were the victims of the first holdup. The bandits drove up to the station, leaped out and menaced J. E. Allers, of Grove City, the attendant, with a revolver and rifled the cash drawer, securing $50.

Several motorists who witnessed the holdup gave chase to the bandit, but he eluded them in the heavy traffic on West Broad street.

While police were searching the vicinity of the robbery for the bandit, the same one or one of identical description held up the Standard Oil station at Long and Water streets, securing $20.

Police headquarters have the license number of the bandit car on file at headquarters.

HOW TO INVEST YOUR MONEY

Regular Savings Properly Invested Soon Grow Into Large Sums.

Small savings that are properly invested with the accumulation of interest, or regularly reinvested, soon grow into large sums. Twenty-five per cent of your income saved at 4% will enable you to retire on full pay at the end of 41 years. If you will save one-third of your income each month you can retire on half income in 24 years. To save, to invest and to reinvest is the ambition of a great many people whose means grow to substantial amounts over a period of years.

Investing wisely is one of the great problems of the saving man. Millions upon millions of dollars have been saved by hard work and an earnest accumulation by people all over Ohio which they lost in the last four or five years because they did not know how to invest wisely. There were reasons on all sides of investigating the companies in which so many people lost their money.

I do not believe there were a dozen banks in the state of Ohio that recommended the stock of these companies in which millions were lost. Many a man took the savings of a life time and handed it over to a glib salesman whom he had never seen before. He might have gone two squares to the bank where he had saved his money over a period of years and had the information that would have kept him from this great loss.

Therefore one of the first principles of investing is to investigate the character of the proposition that is presented to you for investment and to take all the time that is necessary to ascertain the facts before putting good money into a prospect to be sure of getting it back.

ISSUE BONDS FOR HILLTOP SEWER

Monday night city council authorized a $70,500 bond issue to pay the cost of laying the third section of the West Side storm sewer extension on the Hilltop south of Sullivant avenue. Also voted $10,000 to pay the cost of laying 10 other smaller sewers.

UNION GOOD FRIDAY SERVICES

The churches of the Hilltop will hold a union Good Friday service at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church from 2 to 3 o'clock. The crucifixion story will be read by the Hilltop ministers and illustrated by songs by the congregation. There will be no sermon, no announcements and no offering. All Christians are most cordially invited to attend.

GROCERS PICNIC SET FOR JUNE 17

The Columbus Retail Grocers' association has selected Wednesday, June 17, as the date for its annual picnic, and the place probably will be Olentangy park where the outing has been held for a number of years.

Land is the only safe investment a man can make away from home without watching it. Land is the only investment that will increase in value ten per cent per year without expense. Land is the only investment that is safe without any consideration of the honesty of the manager. Land is the only investment that is stable through wars and panics and national disasters. Lands cannot be stolen. Lands never blow away. Lands never burn up. Lands have to increase in value. A fortune in land is a fortune in hand. And while the world stands solid, the land stands safe.

I have watched other industries. Every other business I know of must depend upon the honesty, intelligence and experience of the men who control it. I have seen many factories start and thrive for a season, and fail. I have seen merchants rise to colossal business eminence, then fail. I have seen bankers the great financial leaders of their community today, and bankrupt tomorrow. I have watched the human trail of commerce and of all the "professions." It is strewn with failures, bankrupts, diseases, sickness crimes, convictions, suicides and oblivion. And in contrast, I have seen the men who have been friendly with the land, who have bought it, and sold it, and tilled it, and held it. Among them I have seen the happiest homes in this nation; the clearest minds; the strongest bodies; the fullest health; the best appetites; the truest citizenship and the loftiest patriotism.

In every other business or profession you are like the man in the airship—you are trying to keep afloat, but sooner or later disaster is certain. You have no foundation under you. You depend upon skill or genius or endurance, but the man who is loyal to the land will find the land loyal to him. It is the source of food, clothing, health and wealth. It is God's one store house for the children of men. Besides these things, you can go all over the western country and you will find that the foundation of nearly every legitimate fortune has been laid in land.

Boys, there is only one crop of land, but an endless crop of babies, and every baby born anywhere on the round earth, adds to the value of every acre of your land.

Boys, buy land.

If you have children teach them to hold land. If you have friends, help them to find land. If you want prosperity in youth, peace in middle life, and contentment in old age, own your own home and buy land, own land—just land, good land.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

SOME HOMELY REMEDIES.

How's your wind? You are still breathing—but how? Are you getting your allotment of life giving oxygen? Or are you satisfied with just enough to take you one more step and trusting to future acquirement for further power? I heard of a backwoodsman who would not prepare his fire kindlings at night, lest he might die that night and there'd be so much work done unnecessarily.

It might be well to remind you that your power comes from the quality of your blood, and the oxygen you breath is as much a factor in your blood as is your food. Moreover, it is more easily acquired, requires no complicated digestion, helps the digestion of food and is, altogether, as necessary to life as is food.

The food question is one of the big problems of life, about which the scientists have given us no end of theories and books; and the service we demand in connection with our supply makes it one of our major expenses, always to be reckoned with. On the other hand, the oxygen, which is so constantly necessary to us, is absolutely free and therefore not appreciated.

It is a sad fact that we humans do not appreciate the things that cost us nothing. And the air we breath is so plenteous and free, and the method of intake so natural, that we give it no study and very little supervision. Then we often wonder why we have so little reserve power, physical or mental, in emergencies. But, you say, "why should I be concerned about my breathing if nature has already made such provision that it goes on, automatically, even while I sleep?"

The important point is: we are all too much like the man and his kindlings—we might, with a little more effort, have a much larger supply of oxygen, and, accordingly, greater power. What then would I suggest, more than you are already doing? Nothing new, but think over these points and make them a part of your life by acting upon them.

Have you made it so much a part of your walking habit that your measured breathing commences with your walking? namely, inhale during 4 steps and exhale during 4 steps? No little habit, when formed, can pay you better than this.

When at rest, do you often note your rate of breathing, then double the length of each and keep it up? That can be and should be made a habit—so much a habit that it will continue automatically.

In your well ventilated sleeping room do you practice this slow, measured breathing when you retire at night, and encourage a continuance of the same while you sleep? That insures the most refreshing sleep and is often a good cure for insomnia.

It is confidently claimed by good authority that, in health, all the blood in your body passes through your lungs every minute. It goes there for no idle purpose. It is eager to exchange it poisons for the oxygen it meets there, and which element it must have or you cannot have health. The rational reasoning is, then: the more the oxygen the better the blood, and therefore the better the health. How foolish to imagine that you can get this from a bottle; and if you could, how much easier and simpler it is to help yourself to more of God's free oxygen.

Here is an awful fact that should make us all ashamed: Most of us exercise only about one-tenth of our lungs in breathing. But with a very little attention to these simple exercises till habits are formed, the active area in the lungs may be greatly augmented.

Weak lunged people are often sent to another state for their health, supposedly, because they will have purer air to breathe. The air may be purer, but the thing that benefits the patient as much is that the higher altitude makes deeper breathing necessary. The deep breathing of purer air does the work.

In lung tests, if the difference between forced inspiration and forced expiration is shown by the tape line to be three inches it is pronounced good, but players upon wind instruments often acquire seven inches. So, if you need lung development and can't go to Arizona, then play a wind instrument and build up your health at home. If you aren't really under the doctor's care, do the simple things here recommended and improve your health and consequently your powers and, best of all, your resistance to disease.

Dr. O. E. McFadon, Osteopath, 106 W. 10th Ave. M. 7904-W. Residence calls on the Hilltop Wednesday and Saturday mornings.

WRECKING OF OLD LANDMARK

The olden days when the saloon and livery stable were in vogue, long before Volstead became famous or Henry Ford had crowded the highways with his flivvers, are being recalled by old residents of the Hilltop in witnessing the wrecking of the old frame business building situated just west of Voss Bros. salesroom on West Broad street, and which in its time has housed enterprises ranging from a saloon to a church.

This building is one of the oldest business rooms on the [illegible] is being wrecked by its owners, Voss Bros., that they may convert the lot on which it is situated into a used car market.

Years ago the lower room of the building was used as the "First and Last Chance Saloon," which went out of business when this section of the city "went dry" under local option.

However, in later years, the building served many other purposes, housing more legitimate enterprises. It was in this building that the foundation was laid, by a small group of people for, one of the most prosperous churches of the Hilltop and from it has grown the present Hoge Memorial church.

In still later years the building was used a furniture repair shop and was also the home of the Hilltop Athletic club in the early days of its organization.

California Letter

Porterville, Calif., March 18

Hilltop Record:

Have so many times thot of writing a letter to your paper, we used to take it when we lived on the Hilltop, on Highland avenue and West Broad street. We have had it sent to us by two different friends and it always seems like hearing from an old friend, altho I realize a great many changes have taken place in the three and one-half years since we left.

We are located 14 miles east of Porterville on the road leading to higher mountain resorts, and might say the only way to Mt. Whitney, the highest peak in U. S. They claim in time they will have a road leading by our place to Inyo Co. in Nevada and this will go by Mt. Whitney. Wonderful roads in the mountain to go by auto, when only a few years ago all was by pack train.

The country looks grand now, grass as green and oak trees coming out, oranges are almost ready to bloom. Deciduous trees are blooming and some are in leaf and for weeks the most beautiful wild flowers, all colors; I think I never saw the like before. Beautiful poppies, too.

We have one of the most beautiful scenes from our front porch, just a big valley below us as our bungalow sits on a hill and surrounded by mountains on all sides. Beautiful elevation about 1600 ft., climate grand, has been like good old summer time.

Last week we had a rain and could see the snow falling on the mountain east of us. The snow and ice froze on the big pine trees and when the weather cleared up and the sun going down in the west, there was one grand picture of the trees which lasted for several days.

Wonderful gardens can be had in winter and then summer gardens also. For winter plant anything that frost will not hurt. Around our house it hardly ever frosts, and we have beautiful roses, bridal wreaths, iris, lilac, verbenias, geraniums etc.

Do not get the idea that because we are living in the mountains we are lonely. In the summer time from Saturday evening to Sunday evening the road is lined with machines going to or coming from the mountains. Many have summer homes at Camp Wilson and Camp Wishon, about 20 miles farther on. We have a month school and church close by and about 20 families in sight, some fresh from Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Missouri.

Porterville has a population of between six and seven thousand. The Southern Pacific and Santa Fe trains go thru. It is about 204 miles by motor from Los Angeles. Porterville has fine schools and churches. One of the high school busses goes by our place.

On this highway one can go to Los Angeles or San Francisco and need never leave the highway, fine roads.

The mountains are grand. Only about two hours drive takes you to see the largest, oldest living thing, the grand, big redwoods. Some are 300 ft. high and 33 ft. in diameter. There is wonderful hunting in season—deer and bear—and plenty of fish.

We have only a small place, between six and seven acres in oranges, apricots, plums, pears, figs, apples, peaches, quinces, pomegranits and three kinds of grapes. Did have lemon and grapefruit trees. A flock of white leghorn chickens. A five-room bungalow, modern, except electricity.

We love the country. It is such a healthy place to live. Would be glad to have any of our old friends hunt us up if they come to California.

With best regards for the Hilltop Record. Respectfully,

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wilson.

HOW TO INVEST YOUR MONEY

Responsible Financial Institution Should Be Consulted By Prospective Investors.

In seeking an investment a person should first go to a recognized, responsible institution that deals in investments and ask for their recommendation, laying out all of the facts concerning his or her financial position. Some people should buy nothing but Liberty bonds or municipal bonds, or other bonds that are paid out of taxes collected from the people, and there are many others who can afford to own railroad, utility and industrial bonds. Each person has his or her own particular investment problem that may be determined wisely only by carefully setting forth all the details to a reputable banking firm and then asking for advice as to the selection of an investment. Banking institutions are particularly fitted in making recommendations because the major problem of any banking institution is to safely invest the money of its depositors, at a profit.

It is impossible to over emphasize the advisability of consulting a reputable financial institution before making an investment even though you may be thoroughly familiar with the investment you wish to make and know just what you want to do, because many times the banker can save you money by his ability to direct you where the security can be purchased at the best possible price.

CELEBRATES WITH BIRTHDAY PARTY

Robert Morris Chapter Moves Into New Home on Eleventh Anniversary.

Just as folks look forward to getting into a new home so did the Robert Morris family of Eastern Stars await with great joy coming into their new home. It all happened April 7, the eleventh anniversary of the chapter. The organized pot-luck dinner might justly be called a banquet, tasty beyond words and in great abundance.

From the dining hall folks moved up to the chapter room, where a capacity house greeted the officers.

Chapter opened in short form. Guests escorted to the East were Emil W. Grob, past grand patron; Bessie F. Boice, past grand matron and present grand secretary; Grand Representatives Mrs. Grob, Mrs. Ely, Mrs. Sherman and Mrs. Andres. Robert Morris Chapter's own past matrons and past patrons were presented and a lovely recognition service was extended them for their untiring interest in the chapter and its welfare. Greetings to these past officers by Rachel Dry, worthy matron, truly expressed the sentiment and regard of every chapter member. Two past matrons of other chapters, who came into Robert Morris by affiliation, were presented, and words of praise from their respective chapters were read. They are Minnie Jones, past matron of Hilliards, and Emma Dennis, past matron of West Mansfield chapter.

Annis Tanner surely holds the honors in this chapter if for no other reason than that she has missed no meeting of the chapter in the past five years, was seated with the aforementioned in the Distinguished East.

Greetings from the guests heretofore named brought congratulation for past good fortune and sincere hope for a still greater future. Robert Morris Chapter was instituted during the year. Mrs. Boice was grand matron and her interest in the chapter is greater than words can express. Fannie Ogg spoke in behalf of the past matrons and William Hughes for the past patrons.

Clarence Williams gave an interesting account of gifts to the chapter for its new home and to the donors we would give "nine rahs."

After chapter closed the regular entertainment committee presented an enjoyable program. "Open the Gates of the Temple" was so beautifully sung by Amaranth chorus that we shall never forget it. Brother Grob's inspirational talk admonished the chapter to ever remember the principles on which it was founded, ever upholding the high standards of Masonry. A duet by Helen and Rosalind Grob; a description by the Rev. Bro. E. S. Matheny of the wonderful paintings, mosaics, frescos and statues in the various cathedrals in Germany, Italy and France; another selection by the Amaranth chorus; solo by Rosalind Grob; two readings by Grace Bell Day brought the enjoyable evening to a close.

There will be initiatory work at the next meeting, April 21, and we love to have company. Inspection by the district deputy grand matron, Mrs. Phoebe Moore, May 5.—N. I. P.

GOV. DONAHEY AT BROADVIEW

"If I had taken Mrs. Donahey's advice 10 years ago and bought around the edge of Columbus I would have been wealthy today," Governor Donahey said Monday as he drove a gold spade deep in the dirt on a lot in Heed & Holton's Broadview addition.

"Columbus is destined for a marvelous growth during the coming 25 years," the governor continued. "The capital of a great state, centrally located and with unexcelled transportation will increase with rapid strides."

Mr. Heed was restrained with difficulty from attempting to sell the governor a lot, but before he could be silenced he managed to tell Mrs. Donahey of the two schools that will be built at the edge of the addition, of the Westgate Masonic Temple, of the churches and of the 50 acres under improvement.

As the governor's party drove away, Heed fell into a reminiscent mood and recalled early days in Hilltop development.

"When I first started building here on the Hilltop there were only eight houses west of the hill and when Harry Holton and I began to open additions out this way they said we'd never get many more. But the Hilltop was then, as now, a section of home owners. The Hilltop's percentage of home owners and American-born citizens is higher than any section of the entire state, I believe, of any section of any city of the state."

G. A. Henry, 1987 North Fifteenth avenue, was in Delaware Monday on account of the death of Charles Krack, conductor, who was killed in the C., S. & M. wreck last week.

FEW SEEK JOBS IN SERVICE OF STATE

Working Conditions Better According to Chairman of Civil Service Commission.

Either there is less desire to enter the state service or working conditions are proving easier, according to officials of the state civil service commission, who, during the past week conducted examinations for 21 positions in the various state departments. In no case was the list of applicants up to the usual number.

For some of the tests only two or three applicants appeared. In the clerical group of examinations, the class applicants was about the usual number, but in all others the last was much smaller.

This indicates that better working conditions prevail, and that it is easier to get a position, states Chairman Rollin Swisher. "The state offers exceptional opportunities for advancement, and under the system created by this commission this advancement comes in the regular course of events to all giving faithful service to the state.

"Examinations to be conducted during the next two or three months will offer some unusual opportunities for good positions in the state service, and as the tenure is for life or during good behavior and proper attention to one's duties, they should attract large classes."

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

HOW TO EAT STARCH FOODS

Horace Fletcher was probably taught the theory of the mastication of his food when he was a boy in the grade school. But, it was necessary that he be refused life insurance at 50 before he really took it seriously. Then, when health, by way of the doctors, proved hopeless for him, he took his case into his own hands and actually did the thing he had always known he should do, namely: Masticate his food thoroughly. In this reform, he was so extreme as to allow no food to pass into his stomach until, by chewing and insalivation, it had lost its identity as solid food. By his intensive practice of this well known theory, Mr. Fletcher regained his health late in life, secured the life insurance which had been refused him, and triumphantly lived out his allotted three score years and ten.

Horace Fletcher's personal influence, by reason of his education, travels, lectures and writings, was sufficient to leave us the legitimate dictionary words, "Fletcherize" and "Fletcherism," which mean, not only extensive chewing and mastication—as is superficially thought—but insalivation, which has a much deeper meaning.

This thorough insalivation is more necessary for starchy foods (potatoes, bread and all cereals) than for other foods. In fact, a very important part of the digestion of starch will take place in the mouth, if it be given proper treatment there. The question is, do we know the best treatment to give it, and do we do the best we know? We do not. How so?

Starch food, to get the full benefit of the saliva should be taken thoroughly dry; otherwise, it is sure to be wholly or partly washed down by liquid or other moist food. But, you say, I don't drink while I eat. That does not mean much. You may drink at your meals, if you do it rightly.

We are easily deceived, herein, for many foods which we may imagine to be dry are not dry. Bread, for instance, when fresh, is half water. The water does not disqualify it for food, but it does promote the swallowing before the mouth digestion can take place. Easy swallowing is no evidence of insalivation for the half-water content of the bread is deceiving us. We (the average American) are impatient in masticating dry toast or zwieback because we miss the moisture of the fresh bread, so, unthoughtedly, mix other moister foods with it and hurry it on to its doom and to our distress.

Mashed potatoes, when ready to serve, are 75 per cent water, and so are swallowed, usually without insalivation. Baked potatoes have less of water, but being heavy with starch, should be kept in the mouth, far beyond the point of easy swallowing. Bananas, usually eaten quickly, should be eaten very slowly, for the same reason.

The cream which is eaten with cereal foods, is good food, but we do not realize how it washes the starch food away so quickly that the abundant saliva has no chance at it; then follows stomach and intestinal troubles and we wonder why. The fault is not necessarily in the kind of food eaten, but is often in the careless manner of eating. Milk toast is most excellent food, but 19 twentieths of the toast so eaten gets no saliva; that's the real reason why dry toast is best. Bread pudding slips down without insalivation. Verily, the how to eat is as important as the what to eat. The treatment which Horace Fletcher gave to all his food with such good results, we can well afford to give to our starch food, but it must be given attention until fixed habits are formed.

The economic progress of Porto Rico since the American occupation in 1898 has been so marvelous as to justify Ponce de Leon's name for this island, "The Gate of Riches." Statistics show that in 1922 the exports of Porto Rico were 12 times as great as in 1901. "A striking testimonial to the fertility of this island and the triumph of its agriculture," says the National Geographic Magazine, "is the fact that, with no manufactures to swell its exports, a balance of trade appears in its favor proportionately as high as that of continental United States."

OBITUARY AND TRIBUTE

Samantha (stone) Shoemaker was born at South Perry, Hocking county, Ohio, July 7, 1858, and passed to her reward from Columbus, Ohio, April 9, 1925, aged 71 years, nine months and two days.

She was united in marriage to Salem Shoemaker October 13, 1874. To this union were born six children, three having preceded her in death. Her husband departed this life February 15, 1917.

She became a member of the Methodist church at South Perry, Ohio, in her early girlhood days and remained a steadfast adherent to the Methodist faith throughout the remainder of her life.

She spent the greater part of her life in the immediate vicinity of her birthplace, but form more than five years she has made her home in Columbus, Ohio, with her daughter, Mrs. Chester F. Bigham.

One of her strong characteristics was that of making friends. It became the custom of her friends, regardless of age, to lovingly address her as "Grandma."

Why her relatives, her friends and neighbors should at this time be deprived of her companionship we do not undertake to answer; but are reminded that God knoweth and doeth all things best, therefore, we must bow in humble submission to His will.

Mrs. Shoemaker lived and died, in conformity to the admonition expressed in the closing lines of Thanatopsis, which are as follows:

"So live, that when thy summons come to join the innumerable caravan which moves to that mysterious realm where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death, thou go not like the quarry slave; at night scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

She became seriously ill in January of this year and was confined to her room until death relieved her of her pain. For more than a week just prior to her death, she prayed almost incessantly that the Holy Father might take her to her great reward.

She leaves to mourn their loss, two daughters and one son. Mrs. Frank Lantas and Mrs. Chester F. Bigham, both of Columbus, Ohio; Edward Shoemaker of Groveport, Ohio; a foster son, Alvah M. Bigham of Lancaster, Ohio; seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild; also many, many friends.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to our friends and neighbors who so graciously extended the hand of helpfulness and sympathy during the illness and death of our mother, Mrs. Samantha Shoemaker. We feel a deep sense of appreciation for the services rendered by Rev. Wallin Reibel of the Burgess Ave. U. B. church; Rev. William E. Seesholtz, of the St. Paul's United Evangelical church; Rev. J. N. Johnston, of the Hilltop Church of Christ; Mr. Ivan Reed, Mrs. J. N. Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frost Bratt for their singing, and our friends and neighbors for the beautiful floral offerings.

Mrs. Chester F. Bigham.
Mrs. Frank Lantz
Edward B. Shoemaker.

Miss Folsome E. Dague, 423 Hamilton avenue, and Mr. Dewey G. Foerster, 146 South Wheatland avenue, were married Wednesday, April 8, Rev. George F. Barber, pastor of Glenwood Methodist church, officiating. Mrs. Chloe Thompson, mother of the bride; Mrs. Anna Foerster, the bridegroom's mother, and Mr. Edward Chambers were present as witnesses. Mr. Foerster and his bride will reside at 2280½ West Broad street.

ORIENT BRANCH TO BE SEPARATE UNIT

Orient Hospital and London Farm Will Be Under Own Management.

The Orient branch of the Columbus state hospital for the feeble minded and the London prison farm will become separate state institutions under a bill signed last week by Governor Donahey, and these institutions will be under their own management.

farm will become separate state institutions under a bill signed last week by Governor Donahey, and these institutions will be under their own management.

Since the establishment of the Orient institution it has been under the management of the main hospital on West Broad street. Dr. J. J. McCloud, chief assistant to Dr. L. F. Keiser, has been in direct charge of the Orient branch and now that it is to come under its own management, it is said to be certain that he will be appointed superintendent.

At the London farm W. F. Amrine has been superintendent for the past four years, and has been in active charge of the building program at this institution, and it is expected that he will be made superintendent under the new arrangement.

Both appointments will be made by Welfare Director Harper.

At last the "unicycle" has been invented by David Gislaghi, an officer in the motorcycle police corps of Milan, Italy. The unicycle consists of a large steel hoop and an outer revolving wheel fitted with a pneumatic tire. The engine, steering wheel, and driver's seat are constructed within the circumference of the stationary steel hoop, to which the revolving wheel is attached by rollers. The driver balances the machine with his body as it whirls onward, and uses his feet as effective "brakes" whenever he desires to stop.

ELECTRIC LIGHT IN EARLY DAYS

The following article dealing with the electric light in its earlier days, was brought to our attention by the D. O. Sites Electric Co., and was printed in the Lancet in November, 1882. The article says in part:

"Before the electric light becomes, as it must soon become, the common illuminating agent of the period, a determined effort should be made to devise some mode of mitigating its peculiarly unpleasant intensity. The vibratile impulse of the electric force is obviously stronger than the delicate terminal elements of the optic nerve in the retina can bear without injury. We are wont to apply the adjectives 'hard' and 'soft' to light, and their significance makes them peculiarly appropriate. The electric light is too hard; it needs to be softened. * * * Certainly there is a considerable sacrifice of power in the use of the opaline globe—so much, indeed, that some of the districts lighted by electricity displayed through this medium do not present any very obvious superiority over gas. We throw out the suggestion for what it is worth. Something must be done, for, as it is, the electric light is 'trying to the eyes,' which means that it is in danger of injuring them, and already there is reason to believe mischief has been wrought by its use. For true comfort there is nothing like the light given by the old-fashioned pure wax candle."

Europeans and Americans no longer consider insects as a special treat for dinner, but in Asia, Africa and South America they are still eaten with relish. Natives of the French colonies in North Africa eat grasshoppers raw, boiled or fried. Some Chinese communities greatly favor the larve of caterpillars and silkworms fried in a mixture of butter, oil, and the yolk of eggs. Native Australians delight in night moths, which they hunt with the aid of torches, while in Mexico an excellent bread is made of the eggs of water bugs.

MILLION OHIO SCHOOL YOUTH WILL HEAR ARBOR DAY RADIO PROGRAM

The largest audience of Ohio school youth ever assembled in the history of the State will hear the Arbor Day Radio program that is to be broadcast from Columbus station Friday afternoon, April 17, between two and three o'clock eastern standard time.

The program is being sponsored by the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs under the direction of Mrs. W. W. Milar, Akron, chairman of the division of conservation of National and State federations. Through the local organizations, in every county, affiliated with the State organizations arrangements are being made to have radio receiving sets placed in all the public and parochial schools of Ohio. It is expected that more than 1,000,000 Ohio school children will hear the program.

Governor A. V. Donahey will broadcast his Arbor Day proclamation. Hon. Martin L. Davey, member of Congress from the Fourteenth Ohio district, and the leading exponent in Congress of reforestration and a government policy of conservation, will deliver an address on conservation. Short talks will be made by President W. O. Thompson, of Ohio State University, Vernon M. Reigel, State superintendent of instruction, Edmund Secrest, State forester, and officers of the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs. Musical organizations of Ohio State university and Columbus schools will furnish music.

The program will be broadcast from WBAV, 294 meters, the Ernst & Hopkins station in Columbus. It is the first time in the history of the State that a radio program of such magnitude has been prepared for broadcasting to the public and parochial schools. The Ohio Federation of Women's clubs has a membership of 300,000 and has organizations in every county of the State.

Reshingle Once—For Your Lifetime

You can do that if you will use
"CREO-DIPT" STAINED SHINGLES

Quality of shingles. Each shingle is sawed from selected cedar logs—not from forest waste; all parallel widths—no wedge shapes; thoroughly seasoned—not baked to death in dry kilns. Better shingles are not to be found in any market.

Quality of stain. Each shingle is thoroughly stained by a special factory process. Pure pigments are ground twice in pure linseed oil and carried deep in the fibre of the wood with creosote oil. The result is preservation of wood as well as soft-toned colors that do not fade or wash out in streaks.

They cost less than staining on the job.

Ask for quotation on "Creo-Dipt" Stained Shingles for side walls as well as roof. Come in and choose your colors from our attractive stock, or phone and we will call with samples.

ATHLETIC CLUB MEMBERS GUESTS

Ed Stauch and W. H. Orebaugh Provide a Fine Time for the Bunch.

At the reorganization of the Hilltop Athletic club several weeks ago, W. H. Orebaugh and Ed Stauch promised the members of the association a banquet, with Ed displaying his ability as a chef and W. H. acting as head waiter.

Recently each member received a card requesting his presence at the club rooms at 6:30 Friday evening, April 17, at which time the two gentlemen promised to fulfill their obligation. Of course every member of the club reported at the clubrooms on time. However they were dismayed to find that no preparations were in progress for feeding the bunch of men who had obeyed the admonition next out, requesting them not to eat anything for several days that they might be in condition to do justice to the good things to be served by Ed and Bill, and a near riot ensued when these two worthy gentlemen appeared at the clubrooms.

However, order prevailed and the gentlemen told the guests to play "Follow Their Leader," which took them to Hoge Memorial church where a three-course dinner had been prepared by the members of the Married People's Bible class, and which indeed put the hosts in the good graces of their guests again.

Not being satisfied with banqueting the "bunch" the hosts provided entertainment in the form of readings and singing.

The West Side Lumber Co. quartet, consisting of W. H. Jones, H. G. Downs, J. M. Young and Orrin Jenkins, gave several songs, and Miss Nell Orebaugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Orebaugh and Grace Bell Day, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Day, delightfully entertained with readings. D. B. Ulrey gave a short address and short talks were given by several members of the club—in fact some of them were very short.

Grocers Half Holiday

Monday evening members of the Retail Grocers association voted to close their stores each Wednesday afternoon during June, July and August. The same action was taken by local chain stores some weeks ago.

About six or seven more weeks of school—and we know how the kids will feel, 'cause we were there "onst."

HOW TO INVEST YOUR MONEY

Safety of Principal Is First Consideration When Seeking Investments.

Any stock or bond to be worth considering, should possess three qualities: First, safety of principal. Second, a satisfactory income. Third, ready salability.

Safety of principal is, of course, the primary object of investing money. The interest return is secondary always, because it requires many years to get back in interest the principal of an investment. Many people jeopardize the savings of a life time trying to get $80 per thousand dollars invested per annum instead of $60, the difference being only $20 a year, and they risk the entire principal trying to get the extra $20 a year. The same individuals would not gamble one thousand dollars for the sake of earning $20, but that is what they do when they endeavor to secure an unreasonable interest rate.

There have been times of course during the ups and downs of business or world conditions when an 8% rate was obtainable with safety, just as we all know there was a time when Liberty bonds sold at eighty-five cents on the dollar. This was not because Liberty bonds were not safe, but because everyone wanted money and no one wanted Liberty bonds.

It may be said generally, that absolute safety, insofar as the word absolute can be used, may be obtained only from those investments that are paid from taxes collected from the people, namely, Liberty bonds and bonds issued by states, municipalities and so forth.

However, there is another class of bonds, namely, real estate bonds, which when properly secured by a first mortgage at not to exceed 60% of the value, are also considered first-class securities. In our next article we will describe the various forms of investments.

Hauntz Grocers Win

Hauntz Grocers baseball team walloped the Diamond Kings by the score of 23 to 7. The superior pitching of Oliver and the defensive work of Neff were the outstanding features. For games call at the store any afternoon.

Mrs. Harvey Koontz and son, Louis, 155 North Harris avenue, returned home last Friday evening from Kentucky.

HILLTOP BAND TO REORGANIZE

The reorganization of the Hilltop band under the efficient direction of Prof. George W. Shockey will be held at Dollison's music store, corner of Eureka avenue and West Broad street, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. All band men, amateurs, semi-professionals and others interested in the organization of a band for the Hilltop are urged to be present. The summer season is here and the Hilltop needs such an organization. Let the public spirited citizens of the Hilltop get behind this organization. Let's boost the Hilltop band.

MACHINES COLLIDE ON WEST BROAD ST.

Two machines being driven west on Broad street collided at the corner of South Ogden avenue and West Broad street, Tuesday evening, when one attempted to turn into Ogden avenue.

One of the machine, driven by a lady going after her husband, who is employed in the Broadview addition, was upset and considerably damaged. The other machine driven by Edward Kaufman, 179 South Ogden avenue, was only slightly damaged. Neither of the occupants were seriously injured, it is thought.

NEW MEMBERS OF EXCELSIOR

Highland Junior High Society Awards Pins at Meeting Last Friday.

Highland Junior High school Excelsior society has selected its new members for the second semester of the school year, membership in the society being based on two chief considerations, scholarship and quality of character.

The membership chosen this year includes the following pupils: David Ballard, Rebecca Carey, Leota Ferrel, John Graham, Wanda Harper, Frank Howard, Mary Krajci, Lawrence Marshall, Olive Munro, Lucille Raether, Enid Samson, Elmer Smith, Daisy Stansbury, Herbert Sayre and Margaret Weaver.

At a general chapel exercise held Friday afternoon the Excelsior pins were awarded, at which time R. N. Littleton, vice principal of the school, spoke of the meaning of the society and of the things which the Excelsior pin stands for—superiority and a constant striving toward a certain goal. In behalf of those receiving the pins Elmer Smith and Olive Munro responded to Mr. Littleton.

The school orchestra, the Boys' Glee club and Dwight Frasure presented several musical selections.

At this meeting Physical Director Layman awarded letters to boys who had earned them in the various sports, including:

Basketball: David Ballard, Lawrence Tracy, Earl Mansfield, George Walker and William Oliver.

Swimming: Lawrence Tracy, Ray Dooley, Robert Trott and Dana Deahl.

Population Increasing

According to an estimated report of the census bureau at Washington, Columbus should have on July 1 a population of approximately 271,465.

These figures were arrived at by considering the increase between 1910 and 1920 and assuming the same average has taken place since the latter date, when the city's population was given as 237,031. To this amount 4000, the number estimated to have been taken in by annexation since the 1920 census was added. However, these figures do not include adjacent territory, which is really a part of Columbus, but not under the city government.

PETITIONS FOR STREET PAVING

Petitions to pave seven more streets on the Hilltop were filed with council Tuesday, and include the following: Girard street, Brinker avenue to Tyler road; Algonquin avenue, Broad street to Girard street; Letchworth avenue, alley north of Olive street to Girard street; Demorest avenue, broad street to Sullivant avenue; Sylvia avenue, Broad street to Girard street; Powhatan avenue from the alley north of Olive street to Girard street, and Southampton avenue, Broad street to Girard street.

FUTURE IS BRIGHT FOR THE HILLTOP

With this week we end volume eight of the Hilltop Record. Next week beginning with Volume 9 will be the eighth anniversary of the Record.

The paper, like our Hilltop community, has changed a great deal in the past eight years, and we are wondering what the change will be within the next eight years in the Hilltop development.

It is predicted by many that Columbus will in the next few years extend to the west as rapidly as it has to the north in the past five years and that it will not be many years till Rome will be knocking at the doors to be admitted into the corporation limits of the city of Columbus. Then to the south of the Hilltop, West Mound street, that is now a mere county highway, will be built up as much as Sullivant avenue is at present.

It does seem that investment in Columbus real estate most anywhere in the city and especially on the Hilltop is a good buy and well worth the effort of going after.

Most anyone can remember the time—and that not many years ago—when scores of good lots could be purchased in many localities between Broad street and Sullivant avenue for $300 and up. The same lots today could not be touched for probably four or five times that amount. The Hilltop is known as Columbus' first locality in home ownership. Let's keep up the reputation. "Buy on the Hilltop."

WORK ON SEWERS IS IN PROGRESS

Work on the new large storm sewer that is to give relief to a large part of the Hilltop's flooding troubles, is being rapidly pushed forward. It is to take care of all the storm water from as far west as the Westgate addition south of Broad street, and all the new territory south of Sullivant avenue as far as Mound street. In some places it is nine feet in height, which will, it is hoped, take care of the Hilltop's storm sewer conditions in that locality for a number of years to come.

The sewer north of Broad street, which is a smaller one, is expected to be in course of construction before long.

It is hoped, after the completing of these storm sewers, adequate improvement in the condition of our sanitary sewers will become a fact, thus doing away eventually with our flooding menace of the past few years.

Mrs. Harry Waugh, 208 North Harris avenue, has announced the engagement of her sister, Miss Edith Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar S. Gray of Greenfield, Ohio, to George LeCrae of Cleveland.

Thirty-two psychology students from Wittenberg college at Springfield, visited the Columbus State hospital, the Institution for Feeble Minded and the Bureau of Juvenile Research Wednesday.

Funeral services for Mrs. Helen Sterterger, aged 60 years, who died from paralysis Monday night at the Columbus State hospital, were held Wednesday afternoon. Burial was made in Green Lawn cemetery.

Hershel L. Hagerty, aged 66 years, of Peoria, Ill., died Sunday night at St. Carmel hospital, from nephritis. The body was sent to Peoria for funeral and burial. He was a nephew of J. R. Hagerty, 186 Eldon avenue.

SALE OF SCHOOL CANDY TO BE CUT

A move is under way discourage the sale of candies and sweets in school lunch rooms, it was announced Tuesday by Miss Mabel Stiffey, in charge of school cafeterias.

The move is the result of statements made last week before the Columbus Women's club that consumption of candies by children is injurious to their teeth, not directly, but through their blood.

Regulations governing the cafeterias provide for the sale of candies, but Miss Stiffey said an effort will be made to cut down the sale of sweets as much as possible.

HILLTOP LIBRARY BOARD ORGANIZES

Committee Appointed to Plan for Financial Canvass in Near Future.

At an organization meeting of the newly elected trustees of the Holmes Hilltop Library, Rev. Richard B. Shields was chosen chairman of the board; S. C. Michal, vice chairman; Mrs. Lafayette Woodruff, secretary, and Mrs. O. J. Linville, treasurer. The other trustees are Dr. Howard Whitehead, Rev. G. L. Barber, Mrs. Sharp, Mrs. Mangan of West Broad Street school, and R. D. Hastings, and Mr. Holmes, perpetual trustee.

In addition to the routine matters of business it was decided to hold another financial canvass in the very near future and the following committee was appointed to make plans for the conduct of this canvass: M. W. Seiller, O. H. Kraft, R. D. Hastings, Mr. Sharp and Mrs. O. J. Linville, and Rev. R. B. Shields, ex-officio member.

The Amity Embroidery club met at the home of Mrs. E. C. Hammond. The afternoon was spent in fancy work and a contest. Mrs. Loomis, Mrs. Ditrick and Mrs. Shields won prizes. Mrs. Fellers was present as a guest of the club. A delicious luncheon was served by the hostess, after which the club adjourned to meet in two weeks at the home of Mrs. Loomis, 151 N. Park avenue.

The new brick building of the Hilltop Building & Loan is rapidly shaping up and will be a big improvement in the appearance of the block between Oakley and South Park.

Bert Morgan, 32 North Burgess avenue, received a telegram Tuesday informing him of the death of his brother, Eugene Morgan, aged 55 years, at Los Angeles, Calif., following a nervous breakdown.

MORE HOMELY REMINDERS

Last week the printer made me say "Homely Remedies" which I meant "Homely Reminders." I hope he has it right this time for I have some more of the same sort. And what if I should make the same suggestions again!

Sometimes I feel that in the past two-and-a-half years I have given Record readers nothing but preachments on their behavior in relation to food and air; and while some of you have kindly manifested your tolerance, I wonder what real progress has been made.

Referring to last week's "reminder," I wonder how many are taking my sermons on the treatment of starch food seriously enough to make "insalivation" a habit. Personally, I know it to be a difficult matter, because of the exercise of will power it requires, and which is increased, rather than diminished by our so-called "advanced civilization."

As a boy, in the wheat fields, or near the stacks of grain which was waiting for threshers, I rubbed out heads of wheat and chewed up the grains. I did not think of it in terms of "gluten," "starch," "vitamines," etc., and did not realize that I was eating one of the best of foods and in the best way. I truly enjoyed it as I would enjoy "chawin' wax." Those who have had the same experience will recall how the starchy pulp was most thoroughly masticated and insalivated and that it anished against the will—the swallowing was involuntary, as it should be. If all our wheat food were as raw, uncooked, masticated and insalivated as was the wheat I ate in the field, and if other foods were treated as rationally, there would be no indigestion, appendicitis, gastro-duodenal ulcers, colitis or constipation.

What should this mean to us? Such facts, when demonstrated, should prove conclusively that the higher up we get in our boasted civilization—the farther away from nature we allow ourselves to go, the greater our health complex and therefore, the greater necessity for doctors. Millers and food manufacturers are not in the business for their health nor for yours, but they create a demand for their products so they can supply the demand and thereby make money. It is up to us as individuals not to get so far away from nature that we can't get back.

Thirty years ago when I lived in Minneapolis I took pride in showing my friends the "Pillsbury A" mill—the largest mill in the world." There we were told of 13 different processes of manufacture and shown the corresponding approaches to pure whiteness. I suppose that if the Washburn-Crosby Co. had been using their "Eventually, why not now?" label at that time, my path might have been to their "Washburn B" mill, where they do it the same way. We are all victims of slogans, and in the case of flour the whiteness is a wonderful asset for "whiteness" and "purity" are supposed to be synonymous. Its hold upon you and me and the people generally is "octopusital," for who is it that can get away from it entirely?

Personally, my own lost health has been regained more by dietetic reforms than by medical methods and just now I am getting "Whole Grain Wheat" in cans and eat it at my only starch meal each day, as nearly as possible as I did in the wheat field, and as I eat it and enjoy it, I know I am getting the vitamines and that their virtue has not been impaired by too much milling, so-called "refining" and over cooking, all of which is now known to destroy them and thereby create the deadly deficiency diseases. I have said much against white bread and you may expect further "reminders," for I regard it as diabolical, deadly, damnable.

Dr. O. E. McFadon, Osteopath, 106 W. 10th Ave. N. 7904-W. Residence calls on the Hilltop Wednesday and Saturday mornings.

You'll do better at Seiller's after all.

Men Attending Initiation Ceremony Requested to Be Vaccinated

All persons who attended the Scottish Rite Consistory meeting last week are being urged by Dr. James A. Beer, city health commissioner, to be vaccinated. This request follows a report be received from Health Commissioner Rhoten of Hocking county to the effect that a member of the class was quarantined when he returned to Logan, because of small pox.

NOT WHAT YOU THOUGHT

A business man in a neighboring town did put his advertising on the plaque show screen, and did some of the local paper. His daughter got married. There was a big home wedding, and half a hundred guests were present. It was an elaborate affair. The next day the father—this same business man that didn't believe in newspaper advertising—wrote up a lengthy article about the wedding and took it to the poor, hungry editor and asked him to print it in his paper. Haw! Haw! Haw! You thought we were going to say that the editor told him to take it to the picture show man and have it thrown on the screen, didn't you? No; editors, be they ever so hungry, are not cruel. The poor chap took the copy, and the article was printed on the front page of the local paper. The last paragraph of the wedding write-up stated that the bride was the daughter of Mr. So and So, one of the town's most enterprising and progressive citizens. —Altoona (Kans.) Enterprise.

The marriage of Miss Marie Six to Mr. Charles M. Lesley of Mt. Sterling, was solemnized at the home of the bride and bridegroom in Rome, Ohio, on April 15th by Rev. P. W. Drumm, a minister of the M. E. church. The bride's gown was of white crepe, ribbon and lace, and her veil of tulle, held by a circle of pearls, which her mother had worn at her marriage 25 years ago. Sweet peas were the flowers in the bridal bouquet. Miss Georgia Robinson, the maid of honor, wore a white crepe gown, trimmed with beads and ribbon, and her corsage was formed of sweet peas. Mr. Parker Morgan was best man. These were guests: Mr William Six, father of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Six, Goldie Six, Mary Virginia Six and Mrs. Duel of Columbus; Mrs. T. A. Zimmer, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Zimmer, Lloyd Zimmer and Emma Marie Zimmer, of Galena; Mr. and Mrs. A. Seely, Clarence Seely, Mrs. George Robinson and Thomas Robinson, of Camp Chase.

WASHINGTON—Unofficial figures completed here by arithmetical calculation indicate that the population of the United States will be 113,500,000 by July. This represents an 8,000,000 increase since the 1920 census, when 105,810,620 persons were living in this country. Of this growth in population, nearly 2,000,000 are credited as immigrants, the remaining 6,000,000 being native born.

SIMPLICITY MARKS STYLISH TOUCH IN JUNIOR COATS OF CLOTH

Just because one happens to have not yet reached her teens is no sign that one is not tremendously interested in latest fashions. Indeed, juniors have an all-enthusiastic, convincing way of announcing to mother that "everybody's wearing so and so, and I want one just exactly like it."

Keen perception, when it comes to observing details, is one of childhood's chief accomplishments. When little daughter looks over your shoulder as you are reading these words she will no doubt point to this picture calling your attention to such subtle details as the slit side pockets, not "set on" ones. Perhaps she will remind you that the coat is single-breasted, and that stitching and round buttons are the only trimming. However, as to color, Little Miss may have to draw upon her imagination unless mother reads to her the latest fashion report which says tan, reindeer, brown, copen, are all in the list of favorites and oh, joy of joys, bright red coats are just as stylish as they can be. Plaid coats, strictly tailored, are also very popular this spring. So prospects are for colorful coats.

There are some fascinating models of tweed in rose, tan, lavender and pastel blue shades, which have deep revers faced with contrasting flannel. Tweeds flannels and cheviots are all featured for children's wraps. Some of the older girls' coats have flat velvet collars.

In general lines and finish of coats for Miss Ten and Miss Twelve there is a disposition to stimulate grown-up modes. The flare so fashionable in coats for older folks, is noted in quite a few junior wraps. Julia Bottomley

Mrs. Reed Maetzler spoke at the meeting of the Hilltop Circle of the Child Conservation League, Monday afternoon, at the Friends' Rescue Home in N. Hague avenue. Music and readings were presented by Mrs. O. G. Geil and family, Mrs. W. H. Rankin, Miss Mary Virginia Hewitt and Miss Blanche Rings.

Come to Glenwood church next Sunday and be one of the 1501 at Sunday school.

Mrs. Rebecca Spannagel, aged 58 years, 246 East Mound street, and Charles Hines, one-year-old, son of Mrs. Eva Hines, 780 Gilbert street, were killed Wednesday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock when the machine [illegible] which they were riding skidded on [illegible] cellar excavation at West Broad [illegible] and Powell avenue and overturned.

health, all the blood in our bodies passes through the lungs every five minutes. It goes there for no idle purpose. It is eager to exchange its poisons for the oxygen of the breath. Oxygen is life and air is 21 % oxygen. The in-going breath is supposed to be pure air, and we all know that the exhaled air is very impure—and the exchange is made quickly. Shallow breathing means the giving out of a little poison at each breath, and deep breathing, of correspondingly more; and the process is going on during our natural life. Twenty breaths per minute will give exercise to, an develop, a small part of our lungs, but 12 per minute will reach a great deal more. When the lungs are diseased (flue or pneumonia) the affected parts are the unused parts. Deep breathing will develop greater resistance—immunity.

The breathing must carry away fully one-third of the poison that must go out, and imagine the difference in the aggregate of exhaled poison, between shallow breathing and deep breathing in 24 hours. There is nothing that pays better than deep breathing, and it can be made so habitual as not to require special attention.

But this is "old stuff." Yes, call it "dried tongue" if you like, but what are you doing? Do you double the length of your breaths 20 times a day, or as often as you forget it? And do you inhale while you take 4 steps as you walk, and exhale during 4 steps? That's the only way to get any good from it, and you can do that on the cars. You can always have a job, with good pay, if you'll only work at it. Note your breath rate now, and double it, and keep it up. Go to the ant, thou "sluggard," consider his ways and be wise.

HEALTH HINTS.

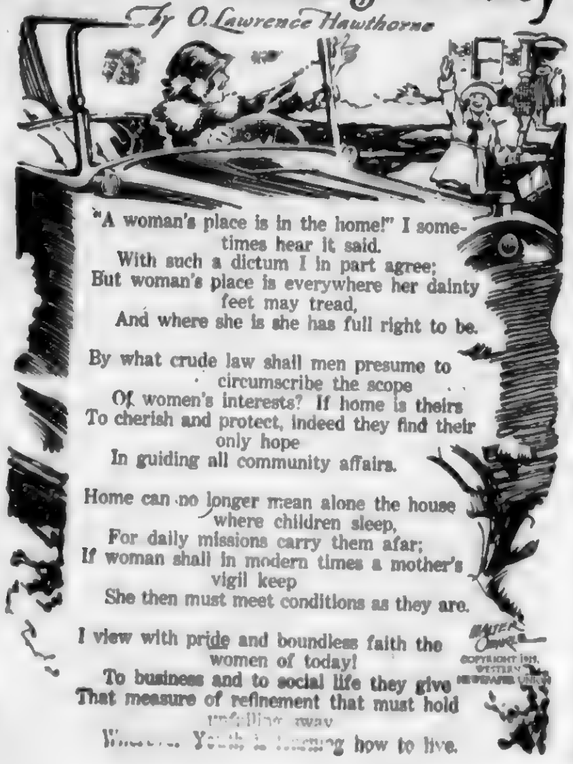
AIR

Just to avoid the possibility of the danger of repeating old stuff, we'll call it "air" this time—free air.

Food, water, air, light, exercise and rest—that's our daily, physical program. We can live without food for 30 days, without water only a few days, and without air only a few minutes. We find light very useful and convenient, but we treat it too lightly; most of us have to work, and we rest on slight provocation.

Breathing is the first thing we did on earth, and it will be the last. Instinctively we knew better how to breathe when we were babies than we know now, with all our clothes-habits and other perversions from nature.

The quantity and quality of the air we breathe are as important to our blood as is the food we eat. This makes deep breathing a duty we owe to ourselves. We cannot store air, but we can build physical strength with air and store the strength, and there is no saving that pays better than surplus energy. Vigor is of prime importance as a basis for learning, money-getting and achievement generally.



We cannot regain what we have lost by carelessness, but we can add to the length, breadth and depth of our lives by habitual deeper breathing of good air—and nothing is cheaper. As our ordinary short breaths are to the deepest breaths we ever take, so is the short life we are choosing to live, compared with the long life we are entitled to, if we habitually breathe deeply.

It is a sad fact that we use, actively, only about one-tenth of our lung capacity. Shall we be satisfied to bury the other nine talents, when the air we breathe is so plenteous and free, and the method of intake so natural, that we give it no study and very little supervision. Then we wonder why we have so little resistance to disease, and physical or mental reserve power for emergencies.

It is confidently claimed that, in

The Woman of Today

By O. Lawrence Hawthorne

"A woman's place is in the home!" I sometimes hear it said.
With such a dictum I in part agree;
But woman's place is everywhere her dainty feet may tread,
And where she is she has full right to be.

By what crude law shall men presume to circumscribe the scope
Of women's interests? If home is theirs
To cherish and protect, indeed they find their only hope
In guiding all community affairs.

Home can no longer mean alone the house where children sleep,
For daily missions carry them afar;
If woman shall in modern times a mother's vigil keep
She then must meet conditions as they are.

I view with pride and boundless faith the women of today!
To business and to social life they give
That measure of refinement that must hold
[illegible] away
Whatever Youth is learning how to live.

A Trip to Niagara
REV. P. W. DRUMM

Last Monday in company with Mrs. Drumm, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Speckman and Carl Speckman, jr., we left Columbus for a few days' outing via automobile route, our main objective being Niagara Falls. This is a distance of about 365 miles. Our route lay through Westerville, Mt. Vernon, Cleveland, Conneaut, Erie, Pa. and Buffalo, N. Y. The first day we drove to Painesvilles, a beautiful little city, the seat of Erie College for Women, and the second day we reached Niagara early in the evening. The roads are well nigh perfect, and the drive was immensely enjoyed by all of us.

Tuesday evening was the time for the big demonstration of the industrial growth and prosperity of Niagara Falls.

The parade consisted mainly of floats representing the enterprise of the city. It was headed, however, by the fire department, police on foot and several orders and organizations of men and women. They all made a fine appearance and the floats, many of them were simply beautiful.

This demonstration was significant of two things, the wonderful growth and manufacturing enterprises of the city, and the climax of the week of celebration, on account of the illumination of the falls. The search lights, which are said to be 1,440,000 candle power strength, are located on the Canadian side and when thrown upon the water, the effect is wonderful, and exceedingly beautiful. One must view it from both sides of the river to get the full effect.

No one has ever been able to fully describe the beauties of this cataract. The magnificent natural splendor; the exquisite colorings, produced by the light exhibiting all the colors and shades of the rainbow; the ever rising and falling spray, and the never ceasing roar of the falling waters, combine to make the magnificence, wonder and beauty of the great Niagara indescribable.

"Rising and leaping,
Sinking and creeping,
Swelling and sweeping,
And quivering and shivering,
And hurrying and skurrying,
And thundering and flounde-ring;
And so never ending, but always descending,
Sounds and motions, forever and ever are blending!"

The above quotation from Southey's "How Does the Water Come Down at Lodore," is somewhat descriptive of this American natural wonder of the world. The falls are about 600 feet in width and 154 feet high.

Turning aside from this rapturous scenery we took some time to explore "Luna Park," "Goat Island," the little "Three Sisters" and other points of interest. We were impressed by the wonderful improvements on the grounds, made since our visit there about 19 years ago.

Much of Goat Island is well kept and makes a beautiful appearance. The improvements on the Canadian side are just as great.

We also explored a part of the King's dominion. The country is beautiful and the highways are fine and about all we missed on that round was Old Glory, but the "Union Jack" was much in evidence. A few miles down the river is the death-dealing whirlpool, which is interesting indeed. One can cross this place now on a cable car and return, if the cables do not break, for 75 cents, but none of our party cared for the ride. A few miles farther is the famous Brock Monument, with the finely kept park surrounding it. One can ascend to the top of the dome, 227 steps, for 15 cents. We, however, preferred our 15 cents to the ascension in that narrow rotunda.

There are many points of interest in and around the city of Niagara Falls, which claims a population of more than 50,000, but there is one place the visitor should not fail to see, and that is "The Home of Shredded Wheat." There are two large factories here, one employing about 800 and the other about 550 women and men. The guides are very courteous and seem to enjoy having visitors come. The buildings are clean and sanitary. The machinery is something wonderful to behold. After the wheat, of which they use about 1½ million bushels a year, is put into the hopper and prepared for the shredding machine, it is shredded and discharged in one continuous chain of shreds, carried to another machine that weaves it and folds it into biscuits and drops them out at the rate of 400 per minute. These are are baked in great ovens at a temperature of about 400 degrees. These are carried by means of elevators along the line, where they are put into the cartons by women and girls. They produce between four and five millions of these cakes daily. This plant manufactures all of its cartons, cutting, folding and gluing them to the astonishing number of 125 per minute. The whole enterprise is marvelous in our eyes. Every time you eat a cake of shredded wheat, remember that there have been more than 400 people contributing their labor to produce it, to say nothing about the production of the wheat.

"Behind the loaf is the snowy flour,
Behind the flour is the mill,
Behind the mill is the sun and shower,
the grain and the Master's will."

A. R. FISHER'S HOME DAMAGED

After Being Struck by Lightning Upper Floor of Dwelling Is Burned.

Lightning, which accompanied the heavy rain on the Hilltop Wednesday afternoon, started four fires in the city.

Much damage was done at the home of A. R. Fisher, 134 North Harris avenue, where a bolt which struck the roof of the dwelling, near the chimney, was followed by fire. The second floor of the house was completely demolished, and much damage was done to the lower floor by water. Damage to the building was estimated at $500.

The Fisher family were away from home at the time of the fire, Mrs. Fisher and daughter being at Buckeye Lake.

H. T. Business Men Talk Organization

At Meeting Tuesday Evening—Another Meeting called for Evening of Aug. 18.

At a meeting Tuesday evening at Hillcrest Baptist church, the advisability of organizing a Hilltop Business Man's organization was discussed at some length. Discussion brought out the work that could be done by such a club for the benefit of the Hilltop.

A committee was appointed to canvass business men of the community and report at a meeting to be held at the Hillcrest Baptist church Tuesday evening, Aug. 18, at 8 o'clock. It is desired to have as many present at this meeting as possible and all business men are urged to attend the meeting.

Glenwood Young People Attend League Institute

At Lancaster Camp Grounds—Enthusiastic Over Work Accomplished.

About 22 young people from Glenwood church attended the Epworth League institute at Lancaster camp grounds last week. Bible study, Methodism and general methods were required classes, while junior methods, religious education, fourth department work, missions and evangelism were some of the elective classes chosen by the Glenwood people.

The most impressive service of all was the morning watch held at six o'clock each morning, closing on Sunday with a consecration service.

It was not all work, the young people having loads of fun and came home planning to go back again next year, but with a great desire in the meantime to work for the church and league and to win other young people for Christ.

Longer Vacation

Late arrival of Labor Day this year will give students of Columbus public schools almost a week more vacation than a year ago.

The custom to reopen schools on the Tuesday following Labor Day will be followed this year. As Labor Day falls on Sept. 7, the first day of school will be Sept. 8.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Adams and son Junior and daughter Geraldine, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller, 204 South Richardson avenue, motored to Green Lake, Mich., this week, for a two week's fishing trip.

Rev. J. N. Johnston, 90 Eldon avenue, pastor of Hilltop Church of Christ, has returned from a week's stay at Lakeside, Ohio, attending the Bible conference.

The Ladies' Aid and Missionary society of the Hilltop Lutheran church will meet Wednesday afternoon, Aug 12, at the home of Mrs. Conrad Grener, 168 Eldon avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Addison announce the birth of a daughter, Betty Alice, at their home, 15 Belvidere avenue, Wednesday, July 29.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Seitz and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Schofield and children of Sullivant avenue, attended the Stoutsville United Brethren camp meeting last Sunday.

Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Riebel of the Burgess Avenue United Brethren church attended camp meeting at Stoutsville, Tuesday.

Miss Marguerite Huston of 57 North Warren avenue, and niece, Miss Charlotte Huston of Woodrow avenue, are spending the week with friends at Indian Lake.

City council last Monday night ordered plans for boulevard lighting in Brinker avenue, Broad street to Palmetto street; Ellis Place, from Westgate avenue to Brinker avenue, and of Westgate avenue, from Broad street to Palmetto street.

Contractors began work this week grading North Charles avenue, preparatory to paving this street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Founderschmidt, 160 Clarendon avenue, are entertaining their son-in-law, Mr. C. E. Moore of New York city.

SANITARY SEWER NEAR COMPLETION

Improvements in the Broadview, Westgate and Westgate Park additions are at their height, and contractors are busy as bees constructing the new sanitary and storm sewers for these new additions.

The new storm sewer, which is to carry off the surface water of all the territory south of Broad street and east of the Durr road, and running from Olive street in the Westgate Park addition to Mound street is nearing completion.

This sewer is of immense size, being nine feet in diameter at its outlet and gradually diminishing in size to four feet in diameter at the beginning. The contractors are now working on the four-foot section, and it will not be many weeks before this project is finished and ready to turn over to the city.

Besides the storm sewer now under construction there are many sanitary mains being built, assuring residents and prospective builders in this section adequate sewerage disposal.

O. S. U. CLASSES TO OPEN SEPT. 29

First classes for the autumn quarter at Ohio State University will begin at 8 a. m. Tuesday, Sept. 29. Registration cards now are being distributed at the registrar's office and the cards of all former students of the university must be returned by Sept. 1, or a fine of $1 a day will be assessed. Physical examinations for all new students will be held from Sept. 24 to Oct. 2, and the latest day for registration and payment of fees, without penalty, has been set for Sept. 28.

WEATHER HELPS HIGHWAY WORK

Contracts Make Unusual Progress, Due to Dry Weather Conditions.

Robert Beightley, chief of the bureau of construction, state highway department, says that work on Ohio highways is progressing better than usual this year, because of the unusually favorable weather conditions for construction work.

Contractors have been taking advantage of the comparatively dry summer throughout most of the state and most of the work is up to schedule. A number of construction jobs cannot be finished this winter.

There is still one more small letting of contracts to be made this year. Most of the money appropriated by the general assembly for road construction during the next two years has been allotted and contracts let for it. Funds for federal aid are not due again until next July 1. In the meantime the departments will carry on the work in hand without much further awarding of contracts.

There will be some awards made from time to time, but not large contracts, such as have been recorded in the last few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Dahlen, 219 South Warren avenue, announce the birth of a son Tuesday at Mt. Carmel hospital.

Smallpox Cases Are All Released

For the first time since Jan. 1 of this year, Columbus was entirely free from smallpox Tuesday, City Health Director Beer announced. All cases quarantined have been released and no new ones were reported.

FRUIT CROP IS BELOW NORMAL

Northern Ohio's peach crop will be 35 per cent of normal, with two-thirds of a normal apple crop, as well, C. J. Weed, state-federal crop statistician, reported Tuesday. Grapes also will produce a 50 per cent crop in northern Ohio and on the islands, he predicted.

GLENWOOD TOURIST CAMP

Is Being Well Patronized This Year By Tourists From All Over the Country

We paid a visit to Glenwood tourist camp one evening the first of the week, about the time tourists were coming in for the night. On wandering around the camp one could see machines from all parts of the country—Michigan, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Kentucky, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, California, etc.

It is interesting to talk to the tourists, who, by the way, are nearly always courteous and ready to tell of experiences.

It's a pretty sure thing though what kind of an answer one is going to get when you ask about the roads through Missouri. One tourist— a Mr. O'Brien of Oilton, Oklahoma, told us that a big part of his driving through Missouri was over detours, and one road was mostly made up of rocks from the size of his first up.

We came to about a dozen small "umbrella" tents pitched in horseshoe shape at the west end of the camp at the foot of the hill and wondered what they were for. Upon inquiry we learned that they belonged to the Parkhill Bros. of Champaign, Ill., who are conducting a touring party from that city by way of Wheeling and Cumberland to Washington, New York, Niagara Falls and Cleveland. The trip is being made in two large buses and the party consists of 40 school teachers and women clerks. This tour is the third of the season, and is expected to be made in two weeks at a cost of $115 to each person.

A cook and supply tent goes on ahead and gets settled at a camp, and has the tents up and meals ready for the tourists when they arrive at camp. After getting their breakfasts, the cook outfit is packed up and goes on to the next camp. The party made over 300 miles the first day.

One machine bearing a Connecticut license tag and a camping outfit was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Bower and child of Pasadena, Calif. Mr. Bower has been spending the past year in Paris, working on the largest telescope in the world, to be located at the University of California. Mr. Bower was joined in Paris last spring by his wife and child, who made the trip on an ocean liner by way of the Panama canal. They left Paris July 4, arriving at Hartford, Conn., where they stayed a couple of weeks, then bought a machine and are on their way to their home in California.

Like all other American tourists they say "No place like America," and that people over here do not know what poverty and hardships are. They report that skilled, educated workmen get what is equivalent to $50 of our money per month and that must support the family, and they are taxed nearly half of that by the government.

Food prices, they say, are pretty much the same as here. Clothing prices are cheaper, but rents are very high. They also report that women work on the streets as well as men and that 12-year-old boys put in full time the same as the men do.

Mr. Bower states that statistics report American tourists have spent $300,000,000 in France during the past year. A motorist entering Paris must have a driver's license, which costs $3; also a card of identification with photo on it.

Gasoline is cheaper outside of Paris than inside. But on going outside the gates one's gasoline supply is measured and checked up, then when he returns and enters the city gates the difference he has paid in price is charged against him and he has it to pay for after all.

On boarding the steamer for home they said one Frenchman offered a passenger $300 for his passport for America and said he'd take his chances on getting across.

NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM WANTED

For Entire Length of Broad and High Streets and Main Street East From Front St.

In council session Monday night much attention was given to a proposal that boulevard lighting system be installed the full length of High and Broad streets within the city limits and on Main street from Front street to the east corporation line.

This proposition is sponsored by the South Side Civic association, who proposed that the city meet the entire cost of such lights, the cost of which is estimated as between $200,000 and $350,000. These streets are main thoroughfares and used chiefly for business purposes and arteries of traffic.

Worley, Weiss and Miss Jones were appointed members of a committee to survey the proposition and report to council when it reconvenes after vacation. If the proposition is to be voted on at the November election, it must be approved by council before Sept. 15.

Service Director Duffy estimates the cost of boulevard lighting at $7300 a mile, or about $1.38 per front foot. About 15 miles of streets would be affected by the proposal.

Boulevard lighting for West Broad street and especially the Hilltop section has been under discussion at various times in the Hilltop civic bodies, but the plan considered has been for the property owners to share a part of the expense. This proposition seems to be one which will be a great benefit to the city as well as the Hilltop, as travelers coming into Columbus from the west get their first impression of the city in our territory. Here is an excellent opportunity for the Hilltop civic bodies to co-operate with the organizations from other parts of the city in securing this needed improvement.

A Little Story That's True

E. S. Hoiz, tailor at 2358 West Broad street, told us this one:

In my kid days, father would never let me go in swimming (having the usual parental fear). But like other boys, the swimming hole pulled awfully hard on me.

Each day I had to go to the woods, find the cows and drive 'em home—generally finding them on the far side midst the tall grass and brush near the swimming hole, and nearly always my gang was in swimming, so father's admonition faded away easily then and I'd join the bunch, eventually learning to swim.

On each side of the road along our farm was a deep ditch. One day after a hard rain and the ditch was full (about four feet deep) I got one of our old-fashioned tubs having a stave handle projecting above the others on each side, and put it in the water in the ditch, then ran a board across it for a seat and persuaded my brother Gus to get in it and take a ride. My father stood on a little board foot bridge running across the ditch to our gate and watched us. As soon as Gus got seated in the tub I let loose and ran down and stood on the bridge beside father. The tub tipped to one side and started whirling 'round and 'round, all the while going down stream. Father and I both stood there laughing and watching, till Gus, floating to our board reached out and shoved me in, souring me from head to foot with the brown muddy water. I immediately struck out to swim. Then when I had gotten out and stood on the bank, father pointed his finger at me and said: "Haven't I forbid you going in swimming?" "Yes, sir." And you have been disobeying me?" "No, sir." "Then how is it you started out swimming today?"

It was all off and I had to fess up.

As soon as bids can be advertised and contracts let, almost a mile of new cement sidewalks will be constructed in three parks. Council Monday night authorized Service Director Duffy to take such action.

Included in the three parks to be improved is Glenwood park, which will have 380 square feet of new sidewalk and 675 lineal feet of steps constructed.

Lincoln park will have 700 square yards of new pavement, and Sunshine park is to have 267 square yards.

The total cost of the improvement in the three parks is estimated at $8000.

At the coming November election voters will have the opportunity to vote on the proposed bond issue of $800,000 to pay for the purchase of additional land in the city hall site.

The issue will be in the form of notes, to be retired in batches of $32,000 each, the first notes to be retired Jan. 1, 1928, and the remaining 24 at the rate of one batch yearly. The notes will be in denominations of $100 each.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

HOW TO BREATHE

To "breathe deeply" is imperfectly understood and very much neglected. Most of us use only about one-tenth of our lung capacity in ordinary breathing. It can be better appreciated by studying and practicing the following:

If you "breathe" the tune "Onward Christian Soldier," you would most likely do it like this (Think the tune rythmically, as follows):

Inhale Exhale Inhale Exhale
Onward Christian sol dier
Marching as to war etc.

with very short breaths.

Or, you might think better of it and do it this way:

Inhale Hold Exhale Hold
Onward Christian sol dier
etc., or, still better:

Inhale Inhale Exhale Exhale
Onward Christian sol dier
etc., pulling in as much air on "Christian" and "dier" as on "Onward" and "sold." In other words, filling the lungs while yut in the measure; then exhale thoroughly, emptying the lungs, etc., throughout the tune. Then having practically learned to do it thoroughly, the lips should be kept closed and the exercise may be continued indefinitely while sitting, lying, walking or working, and will soon become a habit. Always do it with closed lips, breathing through the nostrils.

Practice this tune today, all day and until you sleep. Then having been religious today, be patriotic tomorrow and breathe "America" as follows:

Inhale, inhale, inhale Exhale, exhale

My (inhale) coun (inhale) try (inhale; 'tis (exhale) of (exhale) thee (exhale), etc., filling the lungs in the first measure and emptying in the second. Continue during the day. Then on the following day "breathe:"

Sand up (inhale) stand up for (inhale); Je (exhale) sus (exhale), as thoroughly.

In this way, make a sort of game of your deep breathing and you will enjoy it and you may know that by so doing you are cultivating vitality as you can do in no other way. This, if followed up, will make you immune to many diseases. It is a most useful and pleasant exercise while walking. Always practice it with lips closed. "Keep your mouth shut."

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

GEESE AND WEATHER

That tame ducks and geese flying about in a marked manner foretell rain is a common saying in the United States and Canada. This is an extremely ancient superstition which has become somewhat "twisted" as it has descended down the ages. In some sections, however, we find variations which clearly indicate the line of descent of the superstition and approximate the modern to the ancient version more closely than does the commoner saying. Thus in some sections they say that tame geese always fly toward the point of the compass from which the wind is going to blow; and in others that ducks and geese, swimming, when they dip their heads under water and raise them again very quickly, indicate that it is going to rain. In the south they are said to be "pleading for rain."

This shows that the widespread superstition regarding the connection between ducks and geese and the weather is but an echo of the old Greek superstition as recorded by Theapharastus who, writing about three hundred years B. C., said, "Divers and ducks, both wild and tame, indicate rain by diving; but wind by fluttering their wings." And the superstition was old even in the days of the Greek philosopher. It is based on sympathetic magic. The duck dipping her head and shaking the water from it imitates rain and, therefore, produces rain. By fluttering her wings she sets air in motion, imitating a blowing of wind, and by sympathy creates a breeze—like produces like; primitive man's firm conviction with regard to cause and effect.

OLD THEORY SHATTERED

Prof. Franz Wuts of Germany has collected what he calls newly found facts about the Hebrew Bible. He has with his claims shattered the old theory that the Greek-Alexandrian translation of the Old Testament known as the Septuaginta, is derived from original Hebrew text. He says the Septuaginta is largely a reproduction of Hebrew words written with Greek letters and that as early as 200 B. C. Jewish scholars utilized Greek-Hebrew texts for their translations into Greek. His claim opens up an entirely new vista on old Biblical literature.

After a visit of two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor More, 253 North avenue, Mrs. C. C. Tillman and daughter, Julia Loraine, of Norwood, left Sunday for Cincinnati. Mrs. Tillman is a sister of Mrs. More.

Speeding us Lightly Away
O. Lawrence Hawthorne

Over the hills to the heart of the woodland,
Out to the nooks where the brooks gaily call,
Down to the farm with its orchards and meadows,
Back to the pool when the cool shadows fall—
Over the landscape of hillside and valley,
Eager to view where the beauty-spots are,
Bound for retreats of romantic enchantment—
Glad is the day when we play in our car.

Life has become so intensely delightful
Now that the world is unfurled at our door;
Friendship has made a companion of distance,
Bringing those dear to us nearer once more.
Open today is the pathway to freedom,
Calling us out with a shout gladly heard;
Laughter has caught a new cadence of rapture—
Notes that belong in the song of a bird.

Happiness comes on the wings of the morning,
Speeding us lightly and brightly away,
Off to the portals of lasting contentment
There to begin and continue the day.
Learning the wonderful secrets of nature,
Reading her glorious story afar,
Freely we join in a carol of praises—
Spirits are gay when we play in our car!

YOUR Last Name

IS IT WYCLIFFE?

This name, either spelled Wycliffe, Wycliff or Wyclife, is from the name of a parish in the North Riding of Yorkshire, England. It was here that the famous reformer John de Wycliffe, was born in 1324.

David Wycliffe was the first male white child born in the state of Maryland of Protestant parents. His father reached Maryland in the year 1638, where he died in 1642. He left a wife, Jane, who married a Mr. Brook, for a second husband. He left, also, a son David, who migrated to Virginia, where he married Mary Mary Nicholas and made a contract to bring up her children by two former husbands, "to farpe at schoole as to write and reade." These sons were Nathanial Pope and Lewis Nicholas.

David had a brother Robert, who married Margaret, stepdaughter of Col. William Pierce, son of Capt. William Pierce of Virginia Council, whose daughter Jane was the third wife of John Rolfe.

MERRITT—This name Merritt is from the parish of Merriott, in Somersetshire.

The name is from Pierre or Peter. Prince Edward used to call the favorite, Pierce or Peter de Gaveston, Perot.

LUMLEY—This is an old Anglo-Saxon name. The family have lived in England in the county of Durham from the time of the Conquest. In 1603 King James I visited Lumley castle, and the bishop of Durham, talking to the king there, wanted to do honor to his friend Lord Lumley, so he gave a long account of the family. "Oh, man," said the bored king, "gang no further. Let me digest what I have. I did as ken Adam was named Lumley!"

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

CONSUELLA

A name that belongs almost outright to literature is Consuella. It is generally regarded as French, though in popular usage it has a distinctive English flavor. Very few etymologists list it among feminine names, and it is not possible to trace its evolution.

Consuella first gained fame in the time of George Sands (Madame Budevant). In her novels "Consuella" and "La Comtesse de Rudolstadt," the heroine was a Spanish singer whose noble purity was sustained amidst temptations and disillusions. Consuella was swept along on the wave of popularity which accompanied literary names in England.

In this country it achieved no great vogue until the time of the lovely Consuella Vanderbilt, who married the duke of Marlborough, and became chatelaine of one of the noblest houses of Great Britain. The wiespread use of Consuella was apparent immediately throughout the country.

The pearl is Consuella's talismanic gem and is said to preserve her charm and bring her friends and admirers. Monday is her lucky day, and 7 her lucky number.

COLUMBUS WATER SUPPLY ADEQUATE

Two and One-half Billion Gallons Stored Behind the Dams.

At present Columbus has the largest water supply in its history at this time of year, according to Waterworks Superintendent Hoover, who estimates that there are over two and one-half billions of gallons of water stored behind the Griggs and O'Shaughnessy dams.

Basing his estimates on a daily average consumption of 28,000,000 gallons of water a day, Superintendent Hoover declares Columbus could withstand a drought of 90 days and still have an adequate supply of water. One billion gallons of water are stored behind the O'Shaughnessy dam and one and one-half billions behind the Griggs dam.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

At no period of our existence does the pleasing voice with its musical intonations and lucid articulations fail to win an audience and respect.

There is a compelling charm in its accent, its deliberate sweetness and enunciation which is well-night irresistible, whether it praises or condemns—a carrying, impressive quality which sways the hearers at will.

And yet with all the subtle power invested in the organs of speech, men and women in their oral intercourse with one another are habitually careless.

They have a few set words and phrases which go round and round their dial of conversation like the hands of the clock, incapable of doing anything else, or of stirring a single new pleasurable emotion.

Such voices harrow and dampen the spirit of expectant hearers until they wish they could go suddenly deaf or vanish in the air.

Whether the rasping discords come from the lips of vestals or scullions, the effect produced is always "creepy" and depressing to the refined.

And this would seem to show the importance of a pleasing voice at the fireside, the desk, behind the counter, everywhere, in fact where tired ears are pausing on tip-toe for a soothing sound to assuage their pent-up nervousness.

If you would succeed beyond the mediocre, you will find that it behooves you to cultivate the pleasing voice, not one that is harked by affection, but by sweet soul-strains attuned to discriminating and delicately adjusted ears accustomed to pure accent and undue emphasis.

Nothing is more destructive to a salesman's success than a loud, coarse and brazen enunciation, with a touch of authoritative command in every vowel and aspirate.

And this applies not only to the salesman but to every man and woman in all walks of life, and especially to those who are dependent on others for a livelihood.

The discriminating employer naturally gives preference to him or her who habitually uses a pleasing voice in company with a kindly smile and courteous manners, in all kinds of weather and in all sorts of business.

194 DWELLING PERMITS ISSUED

During July, Setting New Record for Contruction for That Month

Permits for the erection of 194 dwellings were issued during July by the building and regulation department of the city, according to figures given out by W. H. German, chief clerk of the department, last week.

The previous high July mark for dwellings was in 1923, when 180 permits were issued. In July, 1924, 118 dwellings were erected. In June, 1925, which surpassed all June records, a total of 267 dwelling permits were issued.

CONTROL OF PRISON FARM IS CHANGED

London Institution and Ohio Penitentiary Now Separate Units.

After Aug. 1 supervision of the London prison farm will be entirely separate from the Ohio penitentiary, and will be under the direct charge of W. F. Amrine, superintendent of the farm.

The change probably will involve additional clerical work, as prisoners, after entering the penitentiary, and later transferred to the state farm, before their discharge may have to be transferred back to the penitentiary officials.

Hard Winter Promised

According to deductions made by the astronomer-priest, Father Gabriel, and which Professor Guillianme Biurdan, director of the Paris observatory, has described to the Academy of Science, next winter will be long and hard.

Father Gabriel has discovered that the lunar solar cycle of 744 years is divided in two periods of 372 years and four periods of 286 years. He says that the weather follows these periods, and that this winter will be as severe as were the winters of the years 1658 and 1740. His observations are based on researches into the works of historians, poets and writers which were likely to give weather indications.

The noted French astronomer Argo had already remarked on this recurrence of hard winters, without, however, indicating the periods between them.

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Stotts, 97 North Warren avenue; Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Hughes and son Edward, 2743 Sutton avenue; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Johnson, 65 Euclid avenue; Miss Kaderly of Galloway and Miss Traphagen of McArthur left last week for a fishing trip and outing at Sand Lake, Mich.

The Misses Helen and Harriet Lewis had as their guest last week, Miss Elisabeth Dounais of Chillicothe, who motored to Columbus with the Misses Lewis and Mr. Gordon Lewis, who had spent the previous week-end in Chillicothe.

Mrs. Margaret L. Jones and daughters, Miss Olwen and Miss M. Edith Jones, 34 Midland avenue, left last week for New York city where they will spend a month with Mr. and Mrs. Mostyn L. Jones, son-in-law and daughter of Mrs. Margaret L. Jones.

Among the NOTABLES

CHARLES DANA GIBSON

Charles Dana Gibson is probably the most popular black and white illustrator in America. He has several other distinctions—among them, that of having created a type of girl that stood for all American young womanhood, and of having received more money for a single pen and ink sketch than any other American artist.

He was born Sept. 14, 1867, in Roxbury, Mass. His taste ran more to light, humorous illustrations, than to the producing of immortal works of art. So he began his career by contributing some drawings to Life. He became a favorite almost at once. The "Gibson Girl" was all the rage; the Gibson shirt-waist and skirt were worn by everyone; and people tried to look like the pictures. His type was an attractive, healthy sort, square-shouldered well-developed arms and a slim boyish grace—the sort of girl that is a delightful chum.

So much in demand were his drawings, that a large weekly magazine gave him $50,000 a year for a double-page drawing every week. A series of them, the "Adventures of Mr. Pipp," created so much amusement, that they were made into a play. They showed the trials of a hard-working father of a family whose wife and daughters tried to make him live the same life their society friends led.

Mr. Gibson made one attempt at more serious painting and went abroad at the height of his popularity to study color and oil work, but found his old medium the best, so gave up the painting.

TWO MONTHS TO MAKE A MAT.

Cabo Rojo, near the southwestern corner of Porto Rico, is a straw-hat weaving center. In that place rain never falls and the weavers may spend the available working hours of two full months to fashion one of the fashionable high-grade Porto Rican panamas, which the weaver may sell at his doorstep for as much as $40. The threads of fine straw are laid on the grass to absorb the dew in early morning and late afternoon to make them pliable. They are not worked when the moisture has left the straw.

LIKE AMERICAN BUNGALOWS

American films have popularized the American bungalow, with its built-in furniture and many modern living conveniences, to the people of Brazil. Forty-five per cent of the new dwellings going up in Sao Paulo, Brazil, at the present time, are copied from the California product. The only difficulty encountered is the general absence of a servant's room; all middle-class Brazilians have servants, due to the cheapness of labor.

The Gospel

Is the Subject for the Sermon in the

Hillcrest Baptist Church

Next Sunday Morning.

THE POWER OF AN ENDLESS LIFE

Will Be the Topic for the Evening Service.

Are you getting the most out of life?

What does life mean to you? Do you need a friend? The Gospel tells about one that understands you better than you understand yourself.

Do you enjoy that life that is eternal? For it not only blesses you when you are through with the activities of this world but it has to do with the life you live in the flesh here and now.

COME

Next Sunday and hear this subject discussed.

Others are coming and are being helped, Spiritually, Morally, and in a very fine Business Way.

Some very fine business connections have developed between men who have become acquainted by attending this church.

HELEN URTON STRUCK BY AUTO

Dragged 18 Feet—Wounds Not Serious—Machine Fails to Stop.

Helen, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. U. J. Urton, 241 Clarendon avenue, while playing in company with other children of the neighborhood in front of her home last Tuesday evening about 7:30 o'clock, was struck by an automobile, said to have been driven by George Nye, 51½ Price avenue., and dragged about 18 feet.

The machine, it is said, was wiggling from one side of the street to the other in a northbound direction, and Helen, starting across the street, but seeing the machine, turned and ran back but the auto seemed to wiggle right over toward her. After hitting the child the driver failed to stop, it is said, and turned off his tail light, turning east on Ong street. A neighbor in another machine pursued him and by the aid of a flash light secured the number of the license tag.

Helen was taken into her home and Dr. Wolf was called, when it was found that she had sustained a four-inch wound on the back of her head, a large bruise on her right hip and other minor wounds on her thighs and body. Aside from the shock she appears to be convalescing nicely.

Mr. Urton, father of Helen, is a painter and paper hanger.

After looking up the record of license tags, Nye was located and arrested.

Swift and severe punishment by the law should be dealt out, if he or she is apprehended, to the motorist whose machine hits or injures a person and then fails to stop. Accidents will happen sometimes to the most cautious, and perhaps the driver may not be to blame, but there is no excuse whatever for anyone knowingly hitting a person and then not stopping to investigate and give assistance to the victim if needed.

It seems that a person doing such an inhuman act surely is devoid of the necessary mental qualifications that any automobile driver should have, and is therefore not fit to be allowed to make any public thoroughfare unsafe with his presence on it driving an automobile.

A Little Story That's True

Not all our Hilltop business men have did stunts like this, but some (?) have, and here is one instance:

It was our church's confirmation day and I was one of the bunch to be confirmed. My parents bought me a new suit of clothes for the occasion.

After it was all over, in company with other boys, we started out into the suburbs, "accidentally" passing a hazelnut patch that had a high board fence surrounding it. The inclination to "go over the top" was hitting strong, and coincidentally we had some sacks along, which of course had not been premeditated ?. In a jiffy we were over the fence and busy filling our sacks, when the sudden appearance of the "boss" put a kink in our program, and the whole bunch made a bee line for the fence, first throwing the sacks over, and then going over themselves. My sack went over all right and I reached the top of the fence, but as I started to go down on the outside, a leg of my new pants caught on a nail and I could not get it loose. To hang there was a sure catch by the "boss," and to drop was a sure chance on tearing my pants. I dropped, however, with the result that a tear took place in one pants leg from the bottom to the knee.

I knew the jig was up when I went home and faced my father, and was not disappointed. Say, boy, were you over there? New suit—just confirmed—stealing hazelnuts—caught—ruined pants—guilty conscience—storm ahead—ouch!

Oh the memory of that 'spression on father's face I still can see,
When he took me by the neckband; swiftly laid me on his knee!
I can still recall the feeling as my flesh in fancy itches
From the patter, patter, patter of that strap upon my breeches.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Ogg, 135 North Warren avenue, visited over the week-end with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, at Athens. They were accompanied home by their granddaughter, Miss Helen Hayes.

80 YEARS OLD NEXT SUNDAY

J. C. Blackwood Spent 52 Years as Railroad Fireman and Engineer.

Rounding out four score years, Mr. J. C. Blackwood, 61 Eldon avenue, will celebrate his eightieth birthday anniversary next Sunday, Aug. 16.

Mr. Blackwood is a native of Pennsylvania, being born at Erie, Pa., in 1845. For 52 years he rode the cab of a locomotive as fireman and engineer, and in that time has seen many changes in railroading and railroad equipment.

During the Civil war Mr. Blackwood joined the Great Lakes Merchant Marine, and was present at Johnson's Island in Sandusky bay, a northern prison camp, at the time the rebel forces, coming across the lake from Canada, together with a few southern sympathisers in the north, attempted to take the island to liberate a number of confederate officers imprisoned there.

At the close of the Civil war, in 1865, Mr. Blackwood began firing an engine on the Pennsylvania railroad out of Erie, Pa., remaining with this company until 1877, when he left this railroad at the time of a strike, going with the Atlantic and Great Western, now the Erie railroad, out of Cleveland. At this time this railroad had a six-foot gauge, but was narrowed to a standard gauge road in 1882.

In 1886 Mr. Blackwood entered the employ of the T. & O. C. Railroad, running the construction train building the road from Kenton to Columbus, and on completion of the work he was given an engine on the fast train out of Columbus running north. For 17 years he was engineer on the passenger train running between Columbus and St. Marys, leaving Columbus in the morning and returning in the evening.

Mr. Blackwood has a clear record as a railroader, never having been in a wreck for which he could be blamed, nor was any person ever injured on a train of which he was the engineer. However, this does not mean that he has never been in a wreck. In February, 1872, a bandit gang had planned to derail a passenger train by driving a wedge in a switch and splitting the rail. The passenger train, which was carrying a large sum of money, happened to be two hours late, and a freight, of which Mr. Blackwood was engineer, was sent out ahead of the passenger. The freight engine hit the split switch, was derailed and rolled over the embankment, turning over one and one-half times. However, Mr. Blackwood escaped injury.

For 45 years he has been a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. He was retired from active railroad service eight years ago at the age of 72 years, being pensioned by both the New York Central Lines and the Brotherhood.

He is also a member of the West Broad Street Presbyterian church, he with his family uniting with this church soon after his removal to Columbus in 1894.

Mr. Blackwood's one hobby is fishing, and he spends much time in the summer and early fall at the St. Mary's reservoir angling for bass, and in the winter he fishes in Indian River, Florida.

His family consists of his wife, one daughter in Minneapolis, one daughter residing in Columbus, and two sons and a daughter living in Cleveland.

Through his long career as a railroader Mr. Blackwood has made many fast friends who, together with the Record, extend to him congratulations and best wishes for continued good health.

Mrs. Edith Close of Salineville was a guest at the home of Mrs. Isabel Burnside, 92 North Powell avenue, several days the past week.

PAUL CHURTON BITTEN BY DOG

Examination of Carcass Showed Animal Had Well Developed Case of Rabies.

Paul Churton, 3½-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Churton of Huntington, W. Va., who has been visiting at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Isabel Burnside, 92 North Powell avenue, was severely bitten on the face by a dog while playing on the walk in front of his grandmother's residence Friday morning of last week.

Without the brave and timely assistance of one of the neighbor ladies, who witnessed the attack and drove the dog off by kicking him, the child might have been fatally injured.

Police were immediately notified and the dog was followed by women who were near and was killed by officers Winget and Womeldorf.

Dr. L. D. Wolf dressed the wounds, which numbered four, and were very deep. Later in the day the child was taken to the Pasteur institute on North High street and given treatment.

The carcass of the dog was taken by the board of health and after thorough examination was found to have had a well developed case of rabies.

AND THERE IS NO DOUBT THAT JULIUS IS DEAD

"When you step on your starter think of your motor," is the suggestion urged upon our autocrazy by a firm of advertisers.

It seems to me the advertisers give a lot of unwarranted credit to those whom they address. The admonition to think presupposes possession of wherewithal.

Granting, however, for the sake of argument, that the United States of A-mania is not entirely bereft of inherent ability to reason, I should imagine an advertiser with an eye to preserving a few customers for the future might suggest:

"When you step on your starter think of Caesar!"

There may have been no motor in Caesar's chariot, but—he refused to believe in signs.

You guessed it—Julius is dead.—Stuart N. Lake in the Saturday Evening post.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

RYTHMIC BREATHING

We had a starter on the game of "Onward Christian Soldiers" last week, but lets keep it up till about Christmas, and get something in the way of lung developement out of it.

It is not a singing exercise, but a breathing of the tune, with a method. It may be practiced while walking, working, sitting or lying, and formula II should be encouraged to continue while we sleep.

Here are three formulae. Inhalations in black type, exhalations in light:

I

II

III

The first formula is not recommended—except to avoid. When off our guard, asleep or awake, we may find ourselves breathing as short as that; then we should double the length of each breath. This result will agree with the second formula, which is a good rate of breathing for general use.

Always the inhalation should continue strong to the time when exhalation is to commence; likewise the exhalation its proper time. Inhale as much air, and exhale as much air as possible in the time.

There is a two-fold object in these exercises: (1) to get the most oxygen into the lungs, to make good blood, and they may create more strength and (2) to give exercise to the lungs that resistance—immunity from disease.

Simply reading this over will benefit nobody. It is to be practiced continually until right breathing becomes as automatic as walking, and as "matter of course" as our gait.

As usual, many are called to this and comparatively few will choose to be chosen. Some will learn the formula practically and be ready for further advice next week. Better get on. "There's millions in it."

Everybody knows the tune of "Onward Christian Soldiers," and can estimate its proper speed. The formula simply suggests the beginning of the tune which should be continued indefinitely.

Onward and Upward

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

I wish more men somehow would learn
The value of a great ideal.
I wish that all of us could feel
The earnestness and faith that burn
Within the heart of him who holds
A worthy purpose for his guide.
For him the gates of joy stand wide
And genuine success unfolds.

To him there is but one demand
Upon his labor and his thought;
He counts that progress dearly bought
Which values most the gain at hand,
And so obscures all higher goals.
He knows that only as men climb
Toward things exalted and sublime
Will fortune richly bless their souls.

Park Conservation Council Organizes

Six organizations and state departments were represented at the first meeting of the committee of the newly organized Ohio State Park Conservation Council, last Thursday afternoon. The committee announced that invitations to join the new organization would be extended to the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs, Ohio State Grange, Ohio Farm Federation, League of Ohio Sportsmen, Ohio League of Municipalities, the Ohio State Automobile association and other organizations that would be interested in this new work. The next meeting is to be held, Sept. 9, when a permanent organization will be perfected. At the meeting, Thursday, Dr. J. E. Monger, state director of health, reviewed the work that is being done by his department to make all state owned parks healthy places to go. He said that he was handicapped because he had little funds for inspectors, but next year hoped that sufficient funds would be made available by the board of control to employ such deputy inspectors as he might need to carry on this work successfully. These parks at the present time present a menace to health in Ohio, Dr. Monger said, because the water supply in all is dangerous. He included Buckeye Lake, Indian Lake, Portage Lake and St. Marys, and said that with the exception of Indian Lake no effort is being made to elimate the existing dangers.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

COMFORT AND HAPPINESS

As the days round out into years and the years begin to fall about us like ripened fruit, we give, without knowing why, more serious thought to comfort and happiness.

The dream of content when the cheeks are faded, when the hair is silvered and the strength of the bone and the blood is slowly ebbing away, is the common dream of mankind the world over.

In early life, it spreads out before us like a glorious vision, then it wanes and narrows, causing us to wonder what we have done with all the precious time of the past, ticked away right under our eyes by the friendly family clock, still ticking and faithfully performing its monotonous duty.

We have worshiped gold and found it but a mocker.

We have bowed down to Momus, and after wearing out our souls and bodies, have turned away with aching, vacant hearts, disappointed with experiences which have brought us little more than a vial of bitterness.

We have flirted with fickle Fame and been rebuffed. And so all through the heated chase we have been bruised, hurt and undergone at various stages of our careers a fatty degeneration of our moral being, never quite sure of our standing, or our prospect of comfort and happiness in the gray evening haze settling now on purple hills.

In all that concerns art, intellect, position and human existence itself, the thing to do in order to find the average measure of comfort and happiness is to keep in the right channel.

This is the secret of comfort and happiness, worth more to him or her who will accept and practice it than the wealth of the Indies.

THE QUARRELSOME TRIO

As you list to his hammer fall,
Remember the fact
That the knocking act
Requires no brains at all.

When you list to the growl of the growler,
As you hark to his ceaseless growl,
You will please recall
That a dog is all
It takes for an endless howl.

As you watch for the kick of the kicker,
As you notice his strenuous kick,
You'll observe the rule
That a stubborn mule
Is great at the same old trick.

The knocker, the growler, the kicker,
Fault-finder, large and small,
What do they need
For each day's deed?
No brains, no sense—just gall.

Resources of Banks

Aggregate resources of the 356 national banks in the state on June 30 was $913,367,000, an increase of $20,002,000 since June 30, 1924. Total deposits this year are $710,381,000, compared with $687,010,000 a year ago. This is an increase of more than $23,000,000. Practicaly all of the increase was in savings deposits. Time deposits were $237,582,000 on June 30, 1924. They had increased to $260,964,000 on June 30 this year. Further evidence that the people of the state are prosperous, is seen in the slight decrease of loans and discounts. At present the borrowings total $488,252,000, compared with $476,376,000 a year ago. "These figures indicate a healthy condition of business and personal prosperity thruout Ohio," says Roach. "The big increase in time deposits show that people are living within their incomes, and are putting by something for a rainy day, and, at the same time, are reducing their prior debts. The increase in the resources of the banks indicates that there is plenty of money available for the demands of legitimate business, a condition which will make for a continuance of the safe and sane prosperity we now are enjoying."

LAFAYETTE

Lafayette's birthday should, and will rank in the hearts of Americans along with the birthdays of Washington and Lincoln. For we have owed a debt to Lafayette and France for our freedom, which we have never forgotten and which we are just beginning to repay. Pershing, at the tomb of this great Frenchman, said simply, "Lafayette, we are here" and expressed the feeling of all America.

Marie Joseph Paul Yves Roch Gilbert Du Motier, Marquis de Lafayette, was born in Auvergne, France, September 6, 1757. At thirteen he was left an orphan with a princely fortune; at sixteen he married a young girl from one of the country's most noted families; at nineteen, he wanted to help America fight for freedom.

He came to America first with a few comrades, enlisted as a volunteer without pay, but was made a major general. He proved his value as a commander at once. He was obliged to return to France for six months, really as a champion of America at the court of Louis XVI. He returned, used his own money to provide for his men, and took a distinguished part all through our revolution.

His history, after that, is almost the history of France. He worked for the liberty of his own country, but tried to stop the frenzy of the revolting people who threw French politics into such a chaotic state towards the end of the century. He even suffered five years' imprisonment, in spite of America's plea for him. After alternate periods of political activity and of quiet, he died in Paris in 1834.

Your Health

By ANDREW F. CURRIER, M.D.

This is an intestinal parasite which is nourished by the nutrient fluids in which it is bathed.

It is present not only in man, but in the hog, cow, rat, dog, numerous varieties of fish and other animals.

Two varieties are common in man. Taenias and Bothriocephali. A tapeworm suggests a strip of tape, being composed of oblong segments, averaging about an inch in length.

He has a small head, a thread like neck, and on the lower surface of the head are suckers and rows of booklets by which he attaches himself to the intestinal mucous membrane.

Unless the head and its nearest segments are expelled, he will reproduce himself within three or four months.

The segments are passed with the intestinal evacuations, single or in strings which may be several feet long.

The common form, Taenias solium, is seven to ten feet long and, when mature, has from 200 to 450 segments.

His head is as large as a good-sized pin's head; his neck one-half inch long; the segments near the head contain both male and female generative organs and they produce enormous numbers of eggs.

The eggs are taken up by the hog and developed in his stomach or intestine, a minute head growing out of a minute cyst.

This larva is carried by the blood to the brain, eye, liver, muscles or skin, pork which contains it being known as measly pork.

When eaten raw or slightly cooked, or in sausage, it is followed by the development of the tape-worm if the juices of the stomach or intestine, of the person eating it, are not efficient in destroying it.

Children suffer from intestinal worms, but seldom from tape-worms. One may have tape-worm and be entirely unconscious of it, so far as symptoms are concerned, or there may be symptoms of a pronounced character.

These may be anaemia, emaciation, convulsion, St. Vitus' dance, dizziness, neuralgia, ringing in the ears, or some other form of nervous disturbance.

The appetite may fail, or it may be voracious; constipation may alternate with diarrhea; and there may be colic with nausea and vomiting; also itching in various parts of the body.

To prevent tape-worm, avoid raw or imperfectly cooked food, and water that is in any way suspicious.

If tape-worm is present, the segments will always be found at some time or other in the intestinal evacuations.

To get rid of tape-worm, fast several days, taking castor oil at night, and enemata of cold water in the morning, preceding the latter with suitable doses of epsom salts or phosphate of soda.

If this does not suffice, some form of vermifuge, or teniacide, must be taken, your physician deciding.

COURTSHIP AMONG LOWER CREATURES

Methods of love-making are just as varied among animals, birds and insects as the methods used by human beings. According to a well-known scientist, the male spider, a diminutive creature compared with the female, attracts the attention of his mate by vibrating one of the fibers of her web, thus transmitting a message of love along the "wires."

The chirp of the cricket, caused by the male rubbing leg and wing together, appeals to his mate's sense of hearing, and was the first known example of instrumental music being applied to courtship. The frog also exploits the sense of hearing, the male emitting that very resonant sound so often apt to interfere with one's sleep. The croak of the frog was the first known instance of vocal music being applied to courtship.—Grit.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

ANNIE

THIS quaint but charming and undeniably popular name has no etymological right to existence. Though it signifies grace and is of course closely related to Anne and Anna, it has no scientific excuse for being. It seems rather to be the natural endearment rising out of the chill dignity of Anne.

It is barely possible that Annie may have come to us by a more direct route than colloquialism. A favorite name in early Gaelic times was Anni, signifying joy. The pronunciation of this name is very similar to Annie. In England, however, there has arisen a fashion of christening Annie, probably from some confusion as to the spelling of Ann or Anne.

With the exception of Anna, the quaint name of Annie is the most popular of all forms in this country. Anne is piquant and Anna slightly forbidding, but Annie appeals to the popular taste and Yankee love of endearment.

Amber is Annie's talismanic stone. It will bring her health and guard her from disease. Tuesday is her lucky day and 4 her lucky number.

A LINE O' CHEER

By John Kendrick Bangs.

GOLD AND CHEER

THE thorns he found upon his way,
All fit to pierce more bubbles with,
He plucked and on each passing day
He used to prick his troubles with.

And every stone he found thereon,
Stones rough beyond the telling of,
He seized and shaped, and then anon
He built a cheery dwelling of.

Indeed, the obstacles he met,
The very ones I'm rhyming on,
He turned into a ladder, set
For him to keep on climbing on!

CHAMPIONS OF WEST LEAGUE

Girls' Ball Team of Glenwood Playground Will Compete in City Championship.

The Girls' Baseball team of Glenwood park are champions of the West League, which is composed of teams from Holton, King Avenue, Sunshine, Goodale and Glenwood playgrounds.

This championship was firmly established by the defeat Monday of Goodale with a score of 23 to 7.

The next step for Glenwood's team will be to compete with Weinland, Washington and Beatty teams, winners of their divisions, for the city playground championship. The girls representing Glenwood are:

Rose Mahoney, pitcher.
Edith Murray, catcher.
Florence Mathews, short stop.
Anna Baesman, first base.
Frances McCrae, second base.
Dorothy Baesman, third base.
Louise Compton, right field.

Mothers are especially invited to Glenwood park playground Tuesday, Aug. 25, at 1 p. m. to inspect the work of the sewing and health classes held during the summer. This is an especially good opportunity for the mothers to see what their children have been doing and watch them play under playground supervision.

The boys' ball team lost another game last week to Washington park, the score being 9 to 6. However, the game was not decided until the last man was out. The feature of the game was a running catch in deep left field by Al Sweeny.

Friday afternoon the Glenwood boys play the Schoenthal team.

In a hard-fought match for the right to enter the city tennis finals, Allen Sweeny bested George McCrae two out of three sets in the 16 years and under class. The boys were very evenly matched and only the coolness of Sweeny in the pinches enabled him to win.

In the 17-year-and-over class were C. Sparks and Gene Scott, the latter winning two out of three. This set was not so hard fought as the first one, but nevertheless furnished plenty of thrills.

Sweeny and McCrae will be the double team for the 16-and-under class and Sparks and Scott will try for the honors in the 16-and-over class in the city championships.

CUT ON HEAD BY ELEVATOR

While working as water boy at the new Neil House, Charles Smith, aged 18, was waiting for an elevator Tuesday morning, and while he stood with his head through a broken glass in one of the doors looking up for the "lift," it descended on him, causing cuts about the head and neck.

Smith was removed to Grant hospital by workmen, where it was said his injuries were not serious. He resides at 196 Hayden avenue.

Rev. A. C. Baughman Installed as Pastor

At the morning service last Sunday Rev. A. C. Baughman was installed as pastor of the Hilltop Lutheran church by Rev. Dr. Paul Koller, of Mansfield, president of the Ohio synod.

In his sermon Rev. Dr. Koller outlined the duties of a pastor to his community, and told the congregation that a pastor must always keep in mind that he is a representative of God in a community, that he must represent only the church, and that he must live to confrom to that religion.

Rev. Mr. Baughman came to the Hilltop several weeks ago from Hartford, Wis., where he had a charge. He was a former resident of Columbus, having resided on the East Side.

BURGLARS ENTER DOCTOR'S HOME

Ransack House and Turn Things Topsy Turvy— Auto Is Missing.

Monday night burglars entered the home of Dr. C. W. Burns, 2089½ West Broad street and ransacked the apartment, police were informed Tuesday.

Dr. Burns and his family have just recently moved into the building, a double duplex, and are at present in Chicago.

H. G. Dupler, contractor, went to the building Tuesday to work and found a tool box belonging to one of the workmen had been broken open. Tools from the chest had been used to remove the lock from the door of the durns apartment by boring a hole around it.

The apartment was thoroughly ransacked and everything turned upside down, but police were unable to determine whether anything was missing.

The physician's medicines were scattered about the apartment, police believing the intruders were seeking narcotics. The doctor's roadster was missing from the garage and neighbors told police that a man was seen driving the machine from that place between 7 and 8 o'clock Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Hilliard, 215 North Park avenue, have just returned from a delightful trip east, stopping at Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York City and Atlantic City.

The Bethany Bible class will meet at the home of Mrs. J. H. Cussins, 29 North Burgess avenue, Friday afternoon, Aug. 21, from 2 to 4 o'clock. A review of the last four chapters of Genesis will be the study.

WATER RESERVE ON INCREASE

Daily Consumption Now Around 27,000,000 Gallons, Says Hoover.

That Columbus has more than a billion more gallons of water available now than it had at this time last year was shown by a check-up of Superintendent C. B. Hoover this week.

Last year at this time there were 1,450,000,000 gallons of water behind the Griggs dam, while this year there are 40,000,000 gallons more, and besides there are more than a billion gallons stored behind the new O'Shaughnessy dam.

Hilltop Dollar Day

Friday, August 21st

Friday, Aug. 21, many merchants of the Hilltop are putting forth special inducements to residents of this section in the way of a one-day sale—Dollar Day.

The Record of this week contains six pages, filled with advertising of Hilltop merchants offering to the Hilltop public and vicinity many bargains for One Dollar. In each instance every advertiser has listed a number of articles and combinations of articles which they are putting forth as a special inducement and at prices which will save the Hilltop shopper many dollars.

These merchants believe they can offer as good or better good for less money than the down town stores and are taking this method of demonstrating to their logical patrons that they can get goods of equal quality at less price in their Hilltop stores than any place in the city.

Readers of the Record should read these ads carefully and note the many opportunities to save—then act and profit by these Offerings.

A Little Story That's True

Four young fellows from this locality passed up Columbus swimming holes, bathing beaches, etc., and for some reason or other went out to Big Run, about six miles west of the Hilltop. Having no bathing costumes (which probably accounts for their selecting that place) they plunged into the water in nature's garb. They had not been in long until, to their surprise, they saw three other young fellows fumbling at their clothes, which were lying on the bank a short distance away. They yelled at them, but they each grabbed up a bunch of clothes and started to run down the road. One young man paddled out of the water and rushed to the bank after them, but two of the boys were tearing down the road as hard as they could go with the clothes under their arms and the third (probably purposely) dropped a suit of underwear, and looking back, yelled to our boys that they would find their clothes down the road about half a mile.

After a council of war was held one of our boys had to slip out and get the abandoned underwear suit, put it on, and then hike down the road for half a mile and recover and return the rest of the clothes while his companions anxiously waited behind trees near the swimming hole.

OLD PIONEER DAYS

STORIES OF THE EARLY DAYS OF THE PIONEERS OF THIS SECTION, LUCAS SULLIVANT AND PARTY

It is generally known that in the early days, a century ago, the territory comprising the Hilltop and West Side of Columbus, and for miles to the west of us, belonged at one time to Lucas Sullivant and afterward to his heirs. We have had the privilege of perusing the pages of an interesting volume written by Joseph Sullivant (deceased), one of the sons of Lucas Sullivant.

This book is filled with wonderfully interesting incidents of the experiences and hardships encountered by this old pioneer and his band of helpers, and told by Mr. Sullivant in a very interesting way, and we are sure that republishing some of them in the columns of the Record will be read with much interest by our people.

Beginning with this week we expect to publish each week for several issues some of these little stories and hope our readers will be interested in them.

Lucas Sullivant was born in September, 1765, in Mecklenburg county, Virginia, and when about 16 years of age volunteered and went with an expedition destined for Augusta and other western counties which were threatened with an Indian invasion. His courage and good conduct received public commendation from his commanding officer.

His parents dead, he was left to make his own way in the world. Having by diligence and hard work mastered the science and practice of surveying, he adopted it for a profession and having established a reputation for enterprise and capacity, found plenty of employment in the neighboring counties.

When a young man he worked in the outlying counties of Virginia now comprising the state of Kentucky. At that time Virginia owned all the vast region of the present states of Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan and parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin, and when afterwards Virginia gave this territory as a common inheritance to the states of the Union, she reserved but a small portion of the magnificent domain in that part of the Northwest Territory which afterward became the state of Ohio.

This reservation was bounded on the north by the Ohio river, west by the Little Miami, east by the Scioto and north by a line uniting the heads of these two rivers and was intended by way of a land bounty to recompense the services of her own citizens who had fought in the war for independence.

The officers and soldiers of the regular Continental army from Virginia, being empowered by the state legislature at that time, chose Col. Richard C. Anderson, a distinguished officer of the Revolution, as surveyor general, to have charge of the surveying of these lands.

Colonel Anderson appointed Lucas Sullivant a deputy surveyor and he was one of the band of bold and hardy adventurers who at a very early day penetrated the unbroken wilderness which then covered the present state of Ohio.

This land district was opened in 1787 and soon afterward the surveyors, Massie, Sullivant, Beasley, O'Bannion, McArthur and others, commenced their adventurous and dangerous career between the Scioto and Miami rivers in the "Virginia Military Land District."

In some of his attempts he was driven back by the Indians, but finally having formed and equipped a large surveying party, Mr. Sullivant bid farewell to his friends, and, with a stout heart, equal to any fate, turned his back upon civilization and the settlements, and, striking out through the wilderness, arrived in due time upon the Scioto and commenced his operations in the territory of the present Franklin county.

His party consisted of about 20 men, including surveyors, chain carriers, markers, huntsmen, scouts and pack horse men with packhorses, carrying blankets, provisions, axes, kettles and camp equipage.

Of provisions they carried only flour, bacon and salt, depending for their chief subsistence upon the skill of the hunters and the abundance of wild game such as bears, deers and turkeys. When scarce of flour they substituted for their bread the dry breast of the wild turkey or the lean flank of the deer (or jerked venison as it was called), and the fat and greasy bear meat furnished a wholesome and palatable substitute for bacon.

Ah, what would the world be to us,

HOT WEATHER DISHES

On a warm day when hot dishes do not appeal to the palate, it is refreshing to serve some of the cooling jellied dishes.

Chicken is the favorite summer meat and may be prepared in many different ways to vary the sameness.

Chicken in Aspic

Wash and clean a four-pound chicken and put in a kettle with two quarts of water (boiling), one sliced onion, one-half cupful of diced celery, or one-eighth teaspoonful of celery seed, a sprig or two of parsley, a bit of bay leaf, one small carrot diced, two teaspoonfuls of salt, and one-quarter of teaspoonful of pepper. Cook slowly until very tender. Set away to cool; remove the chicken and skim off all the fat from the top of the liquor. Heat the liquor, adding two egg whites and shells to clarify, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter teaspoonful of paprika, one-eighth teaspoonful of nutmeg and the juice of half a lemon. Add three tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin which has been soaked in three-quarters of a cupful of cold water; stir until the gelatin is dissolved; then strain through a double cheesecloth. Mold as for any meat loaf, adding asparagus tips, cooked egg, canned pimentos or stuffed olives for color.

A quick aspic may be made with beef extract or bouillon cubes, one teaspoonful to each cup, or one cube.

Attractive jellies may be made of tomato juice. This is nice for fish mold.

Maryland Hors d'Oeuvre.

Spread rounds of buttered toast with minced mushrooms stewed in a little butter or cream. On this place a spoonful of diced chicken moistened with white sauce, and top with half a stuffed egg garnished with a whirl of mayonnaise. This makes a nice luncheon dish which may be extended to serve many.

IS THAT YOUR BEST?

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

Is that your best? Whatever task
Is yours, your duty is to ask
Yourself the question—this the test
Of ev'ry job—"Is that my best?"

For nothing less than that will do,
No job is finished, work is through,
No task is done beyond a doubt,
Until you fully work it out—

Until your study fails to find
One bolt to tighten, knot to bind,
One word to change, one sum to prove,
Or weed to pull, one rock remove.

So many only fairly well
Make what they make, sell what they sell—
Do fairly well the thing they're at
And stop and let it go at that.

They might have sung a better song,
Or made a corner doubly strong,
Or wiped a joint or set an ad
A little better than they had.

Some other time—but were content
With yesterday's accomplishment,
Yet yesterday is but to show
New things to do, new roads to go.

It isn't just the chief you cheat
When leaving something incomplete;
We must move upward—none the hill
Will climb by always standing still.

The one you cheat the most is you;
Because the better job you do
The better job you always can—
The better job the better man.

For men are made of better stuff
Than those content with "good enough";
And so, my boy, make this the test
Of ev'ry job: "Is this my best?"

In the JUNGLE

With Cheerups and the Quixies

by Grace Bliss Stewart

One morning Cheerups opened his one morning cheerups opened his round twinkly eyes sooner than usual.

"Folks have to be up bright and early to get ahead of me," thought he, "I feel just as if something were going to happen today."

He was really too excited to sleep. All the lovely Jungle was so much more wonderful than any dream he had ever dreamed that he opened his eyes very wide to make sure of staying awake. Above Cheerups' head the palm trees waved their giant leaves in the breeze like so many palmleaf fans. Big Bright Mr. Sun, as he peeped over the tops of the Little Hills, made diamonds of the dewdrops and turned the flowers into flame.

"One of those flowers would make a whole suit for me," thought Cheerups. "If I could only find a tailor, I would exchange my green coat for a purple one. But what in the world is that rumbling noise? I believe we are going to have a shower. Quickear, do you hear thunder?

"I certainly hear something very loud and alarming, sir," cried Quickear, jumping up from the comfortable cobweb where he was sitting. "It doesn't sound a bit like the thunder we hear on the Great Mountain at home, though. It's so humbly-rolly, and it's coming nearer all the time."

"Bless me, what's that?" shouted Cheerups, as a great gray monster broke through the underbrush and stood still a minute, as if dazed. Fully ten feet tall was this fellow, with the biggest ears and the longest nose and the most surprising teeth which stretched away, away out in front of him.

"How do you do, sir," said Cheerups bravely, but his knees shook a little. "What can I do for you this morning?"

"Eh, what was that? Did I hear something?" trumpeted this strange visitor. "Surely I heard a sound, but I can't see a single thing. Do they make voices without bodies nowadays? Come out here like a gentleman and talk, whoever you are!"

"My deaf sir," said Cheerups, who was just a little angry at being spoken to so rudely, "will you please be kind enough to look on the ground right in front of your remarkable long nose? I'm Cheerups, and I have come all the way from the Great Mountain to broaden my acquaintance."

"Oh, there you are, to be sure, Mr. Cheerups. I am sorry I spoke the way I did. My cousin, Husky Tusky, in India, is so polite that he would be dreadfully ashamed of me. I have been looking everywhere for you. Churly Gorilla came home so set up about the new umbrella which you loaned him—I mean explained to him how to use—that I have come for a bit of advise too. Hop onto my trunk and run up nearer my ear, that's a good fellow! Now we can talk. I am Gray Ears, the African Elephant. You see, I have come about my teeth. No, not these long tusks. They do look impressive, don't they? But what was I saying? Oh, yes, about teeth. I had four fine ones, two on each jaw, and they ground leaves and twigs splendidly, but three of them have worn off and dropped out. What can I do?"

"Hop Onto My Trunk and Run Up Nearer My Ear."

"Why, that's very easy, Gray Ears; don't worry," shouted Cheerups gaily. "Mother Nature has arranged so that when one of your teeth drops out, another one will come forward from the back of your jaw to take its place. Go home now and be patient, and before you realize it, you will have all the teeth you need," and Cheerups ran quickly down Gray Ears' long trunk and jumped to the ground with a merry chuckle.

Gray Ears stood there a minute, swinging his body from side to side and curling his trunk this way and that. He felt a little doubtful. What he had heard seemed too strange and too good to believe. Then he shook his big gray sides and flapped his big gray ears and said:

"Thank you ever so much for your kindness, Mr. Cheerups. I'll be going now, but I'll come back later to let you know about those teeth." Then Gray Ears the Elephant ambled and shambled slowly away through the forest.

HEALTH EXHIBITS AT COUNTY FAIRS

Fewer Number Will Be Visited Than Last Year—As State Fair One Week.

This year the state department of health will be able to put on health exhibits at only a few county fairs. Last year the department was able to borrow two army trucks for these demonstrations.

This year the department has been able to purchase one truck, to equip it in a manner not possible with the borrowed material of a year ago, and to provide personnel for the laterly authorized and just created bureau of health education; so that the exhibit although limited to one out, and a traveling exhibit in its scope of operation, is now a permanent feature with recognized functions in the state department of health, with a responsible head and adequate personnel to carry on.

At present the schedule calls for exhibits at seven fairs, with a prospect of at least two more. The schedule as arranged includes: The Muskingum county fair, Zanesville, Tuesday, Aug 18; State fair, Columbus, the entire week of Sept. 1; Madison county fair, London, Aug. 25; Van Wert, Sept. 8; Columbiana, Sept. 15; Auglaize, Sept. 22; Preble, Eaton, Sept. 29.

The truck is equipped with an electric generator of 110 volts- capacity, and will carry a moving picture machine and the booth to house it, many moving picture films, placards, posters, literature and other material essential to the success of such a venture. Dr. H. E. Kleinschmidt, chief of the new bureau of health education, will have charge.

Outlays for permanent improvements, including those for public service enterprises, amounted to $6,698,509

Total payments, therefore for expenses, interest and outlays, including schools, were $16,018,548, or $59.72 per capita.

The total payments included for schools amounted to $8,891,445.

Of this amount $3,127,724 represents the expenses for school maintenance; $448,888, interest on debt; and $1,814,834, school outlays.

In 1923 the total payments for the city, including schools, were $15,199,124, and in 1917, $6,351,844, a per capita of $58.22 and $28.43, respectively. The totals include all payments for the year, whether made from current revenues or from the proceeds of bond issues.

Total revenue receipts of Columbus for 1924, including schools, were $12,614,828, or $47.06 per capita.

This was $3,194,789 more than the total payments of the year, exclusive of the payments for permanent improvements, but $3,403,720 less than the total payments including those for permanent improvements.

These payments in excess of revenue receipts were met from the proceeds of the debt obligations.

The revenue receipts included for the school district amounted to $5,188,806.

Property taxes represented 66.7 per cent of the total revenue for 1924, 66.3 per cent for 1923, and 59.2 per cent for 1917.

The increase in the amount of property taxes collected was 100.1 per cent from 1917 to 1923, and 8.6 per cent from 1923 to 1924.

The per capita property taxes were $30.92 in 1924, $29.19 in 1923, and $17.07 in 1917.

Earnings of public service enterprises operated by the city represented 12.1 per cent of the total revenue for 1924, 12.4 per cent for 1923 and 13.5 per cent for 1917.

The net indebtedness (funded debt less sinking fund assets of Columbus on Dec. 31, 1924, was $24,999,869, or $93.21 per capita. Of the total net indebtedness $7,247,099 was for the schools. In 1923 the per capita debt was $83.36, and in 1917, $44.04.

The levy for all purposes for 1924 was $11,548,753, of which $3,811,658, or 33 per cent, was levied for city corporation; $4,716,215, or 40.8 per cent for the schools; $147,915, or 1.3 per cent, for the state, and $2,872,965, or 24.9 per cent, for the county. The per capita tax levy for the city, school, state and county was $48.06.

Dollar Day Friday at Seiler's.

FACTS ABOUT DAYTON, TENN.

According to Charles B. Furbee, editor of The Tennessean, Rhea county, in which Dayton is located, the town had in 1920 a population of 14,446. It has no railroads. Thirteen of its inhabitants in 1923 paid income tax. Sixty-six per cent of all people in the county are one-room schools, the average salary paid to rural school teachers being $454, and 46 per cent of the teachers had elementary training only. The whole state of Tennessee is fourth from the bottom in illiteracy in the United States. In view of the recent fiasco at Dayton these facts are rather illuminating.

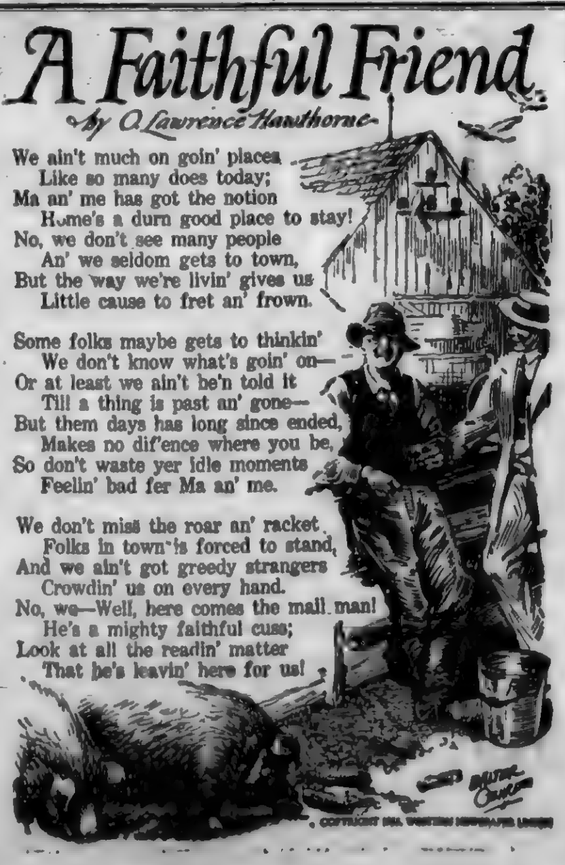
VETERANS MEET AT CHILLICOTHE

State Legion Convention to Be Held August 23-25— Program Arranged.



Between fifteen and twenty thousand World war veterans will attend the American legion convention at Chillicothe, to be in session from Aug. 23 to 25. It is expected there will be present 1000 veterans from Columbus.

The program of the convention calls for parades, speeches, decisions on questions of public policy, transaction of business, shows, a banquet and other entertainment.

Legislative questions of interest to the legion will come before the convention. A stand will probably be taken on the immigration question and a resolution calling for the elimination of smuggling of aliens across the national borders will probably come before the convention. Adjustment of compensation so as to apply to the estate of veterans' parents, extension of vocal training to veterans whose disability kept them from taking it within the legal time limit, Americanism, military and naval policy and national defense day will also be before the convention.

A Faithful Friend

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

We ain't much on goin' places
Like so many does today;
Ma an' me has got the notion
Home's a durn good place to stay!
No, we don't see many people
An' we seldom gets to town,
But the way we're livin' gives us
Little cause to fret an' frown.

Some folks maybe gets to thinkin'
We don't know what's goin' on—
Or at least we ain't be'n told it
Till a thing is past an' gone—
But them days has long since ended,
Makes no dif'ence where you be,
So don't waste yer idle moments
Feelin' bad fer Ma an' me.

We don't miss the roar an' racket
Folks in town is forced to stand,
And we ain't got greedy strangers
Crowdin' us on every hand.
No, we—Well, here comes the mail man!
He's a mighty faithful cuss;
Look at all the readin' matter
That he's leavin' here for us!

HEALTH HINTS.

Few people appreciate what protection we get from Mother Nature at all times. We are told by physicians who have made post mortem examinations that it is a common thing to find patches of scar tissue in the lungs, which is positive proof of previous tubercular infection. The inference is that at some time there has been such infection which has existed for a time and passed away—has come and gone by the breath—without knowledge of the patient. This might be true of any or all of us, for there is no doubt that we inhale many of the germs—perhaps daily.

If this be true, then are we all tubercular? No; not if our lungs and blood are otherwise healthy and in good condition, for tubercular germs cannot exist and remain in the presence of healthy tissue; they are either "knocked out by the healthy blood corpuscles or breathed out (if in the lungs) to go elsewhere for succor.

Suppose that the breath, thus exhaled, that contains them, is re-breathed into weaker lungs where the germs can "win out" and so get lodgment. That is infection, the spreading of which will depend upon the soil. If it be already diseased there will be "quick consumption," if only slightly affected, there is hope for the victim if placed in pure air, which, with other proper environment, is the only successful remedy.

Strange as it may seem this is infection taken from a healthy person—one who is not infected—which emphasizes the necessity for extreme care in the choice of the air we breathe and is also conclusive that we should keep physically fit.

I have said much in these columns about taking your own breath-rate and doubling the length of each breath thereafter; about forgetting to continue it and doing the same again and again, until the deper breathing habit is formed; about doing so upon retiring and when awake in the night: and when walking, inhale during 4 steps and exhale during 4 steps, etc. But have you done it? That's the point. "To breathe or not to breathe, that is the question?"

Recently I started on "Onward Christian Soldiers" game; and it's no joke—it's serious business. And I give you warning right now that (if the editor doesn't cut me off) I'm going to play the game, even though single handed.

Rythmic breathing "isn't to be sneezed at" and "Onward Christian Soldier" is a rythmic reminder, too agreeably familiar to be ignored.

Not long ago I awoke in the night and found myself breathing as short as this: (Think the tune the usual speed. The black faced type represents inhalation, and the light-faced type exhalations.)

Onward Christian sol-dier, etc.

I changed it so that it was like this:

Onward Christian soldier,
Marching as to war; etc.

And so, went to sleep. When I awakened, I found the slow rate had continued. I'll do that same thing again, if necessary, and 'keep on keepin' on 'till my breathing apparatus behaves properly.

And when walking, "Onward Christian Soldier" (not sung, but breathed) is a good balancer. BUT the inhaling should continue strong, up to the time of exhaling, and the exhaling, ditto, up to the time of the next inhalation. This is necessary, if deep breathing is to be cultivated. Ordinarily, we use only about one-tenth our lung capacity in breathing, and it should be remembered that we get far too little air (that costs nothing) and too much food. Come on, let's go!

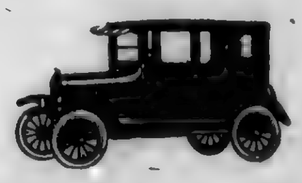
THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

CRICKETS



When we consider the presence of a cricket singing in the house as an omen of good luck we are continuing a superstition of unknown antiquity. In general the superstition is that the cricket "on the hearth" brings good luck; the sudden departure of crickets from the house prognosticates a death in the family, and the especial liveliness of a cricket in its chirpings foretells the coming of a loved one.

Most of the writers regard the superstition as originating in the magic of association. The cricket makes a cheerful sound and is frequently heard about the hearth becoming, as it were, a part of the family or a god of the fireside—a Lares.

Pliny, writing nearly two thousand years ago, says that "crickets were much esteemed by ancient magicians," which arouses a suspicion that the cricket superstition has behind it something besides the Lares idea and that something so ancient that it was unknown even in its associations in Pliny's time; that the superstition is so ancient, an inheritance from days so remote, that its real origin has been lost—a vestige from primitive times and a striking example of the persistence of a superstition long after everything relating to it has been gathered into the impenetrable gloom of lost centuries.

GLENWOOD WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

In City Tennis Tournament at Franklin Park— Other Activities.

In the city recreation tennis tournament held at Franklin park last week Allen Sweeny, representing Glenwood in the under-16-class, came through for the championship. Those who witnessed the matches report enthusiastically of Al's determination and cool headedness. In the finals he had lost but the first set and was on the way to another loss when he rallied and with careful play took the second set 6-4 and the third 6-3. All Glenwood is proud to be represented by such a boy as Al Sweeny.

George McCrae and Allen Sweeny played to the semi-finals in the doubles tournament, but were then eliminated by Beatty's double team.

Virgil Green and Tubby Morris are representing Glenwood in the horseshoe tournament at Northwood Playground this week.

Two wins in baseball were chalked up by the boys from Glenwood playground during the past week. Friday, Schonthal suffered defeat by a score of 7 to 2, and Monday, Holton lost 5 to 3. Then Glenwood boys consider their victory over Schonthal quite a feat because it was responsible for the elimination of Schonthal from the race for championship in the league. Scott's pitching for Glenwood was the feature of the game.

The health class which Mrs. Sturgeon has been having in the shade of one of the big trees at Glenwood all summer was concluded Tuesday with the final weighing and measuring of the children. Mary Jane Scully, Ruth McKinley and Dorothy Winstead from this class, because of their interest, were chosen to attend a picnic at the Arlington woods Wednesday afternoon of this week.

Mrs. Farar's sewing class also came to a finish Tuesday with an exhibition of the work done during the summer. Many came to see the work and much was said of a blue gingham apron embroidered in red and made by Eleanore Adair. The best pieces of sewing were selected to be on display with the sewing from other playgrounds at the state fair.

Go to the fair Monday, Columbus Day, and watch the children from 20 city playgrounds compete in an interesting track meet. Boys to represent Glenwood are Scales, Garber, Carmell, Davis, Sweeny, Adair, McPhail, Larkin and McCrae. Girls who have been chosen are: Katherine Faye, Rosa Mahoney, Mary Carmell, Anna Baseman, Dorothy Baseman, Edith Murray, Ruth Morris, Alice Adair, Frances McCrae and Florence Matthews. These people will meet at the park Monday at 9 o'clock in the morning.

The K. L. C. E. of St. Paul's United Evangelical church gave a farewell party last Friday evening in honor of Miss Helen Snider, Miss Dorothy Postle and Mr. Gerald Seesholtz. The party was held in the back yard of the home of Miss Dorothy Louise Ruegg, 130 North Warren avenue. After the crowd enjoyed a number of games, including a great variety of stunts, they were seated at tables, and from the darkness came an invitation in song for each and every one to join the K. L. C. E. and help to build it up as the best C. E. on the Hilltop. Refreshments were then served, after which toasts by each guest of honor were given. The party ended with repeating the aforementioned songs.

Miss Snider has already left for her year of study at Moody Bible Institute, and Mr. Seesholtz has left for Canton where he will teach in the schools of that place. Miss Postle will soon leave to take up her teaching duties.

Machine Skids and Overturns Into Ditch

While driving along the highway about seven miles north of Mt. Vernon last Thursday noon, slippery pavement caused the machine of J. F. Smith, 27 South Ogden avenue, to skid and overturn into a ditch about four feet deep.

Mr. Smith, with his family, had been driving slowly along the road where workers were painting a white line in the center of the road to mark the division of the highway, and when he attempted to pull over into the center of the road the machine skidded and overturned.

WANTS RULING ON EXTRA LEVIES

Extra Levies Law Will Seriously Effect Taxing Districts If Retroactive.

County Auditor Thatcher has requested County Prosecutor King to rule on the law passed by the last legislature which provides that all extra levies voted on during the year of reappraisement be reduced by the percentage the tax duplicate is increased.

Thatcher wishes to know whether this law will effect reappraisements made before the law was passed, such as that of Franklin county in 1924.

If the law is retroactive it will seriously affect many taxing districts in the county, Thatcher claims.

WON'T ENFORCE CODE CHANGES

New traffic regulations which were to have gone into effect this week will not be enforced until after the close of the state fair, Safety Director McCune has announced.

The principal change in the code is the inside left turn of autoists, and the regulation of pedestrians in crossing the streets with auto traffic, which plan is being given very serious consideration by the safety director.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

TO BREATHE OR NOT TO BREATHE

This letter is mostly on diet, but let's start the "Onward-Christian Soldiers gait first.

If you've been watching you may have caught yourself breathing about this way: (Black words inhale, others exhale).

Onward Christian Sol-dier, etc.

Then you thought better of it and changed to:

Onward Christian Sol-dier,
Marching as to War, etc.

That's right. Keep on a keepin' on whether you're walking, sleeping or working, and pull in and push out to the limit. Get the habit.

(The above for former readers).

My own meals for three days:

BREAKFASTS

Fruit, daily. Every day, 1 lemon sauce melon.

Noon—Starch Meals—3 Days

(1) Toast whole wheat bread, cookie, carrots, corn, lettuce, cabbage, onion salad.

(2) Toast, Potato, beans, beets, corn.

(3) Boston brown bread, sweet potato, lettuce, celery, beets.

(Starch food in above, black face type.)

Evening—Protein Meals—3 Days

(1) Custard, milk, cookie, corn, cabbage, lettuce.

(2) Cottage cheese, custard, carrots, snaps, cabbage.

(3) Peas, custard, milk, corn, beets.

I went out to dinner recently and I promised my hosts that I wouldn't write them up, but it seems I have acquired the reporters' "story" habit and have become addicted. The urge is simply irresistible and here goes:

I was unavoidably a little late, which only added to my thousand-dollar appetite—a hunger, not acquired by maliciously saving up for it, but legitimately through my usual fruit breakfast and mid-day meal on that day, of hard buttered toast, cabbage, lettuce and tomato salad and soft green corn.

Moreover, the same sort of a menu the day before and for six weeks back—a fruit breakfast, a starch dinner and a protein supper, samples of which are given above.

I found, as I expected to find, a most homey atmosphere and an inviting dinner.

Having something of a reputation with them for crankiness about foods, I was not surprised at the doubt expressed about being able to meet my critical needs, but I met it by eating samples of all the food.

"But," you say, "they had boiled ham and fried potatoes and tea—that you are always berating in your newspaper preachments." Yes, I took samples of them all and enjoyed them and they did me good.

"But, you say that fried potatoes are diabolical—damnable, and tea drinkers are addicts."

Yes, that's all right and those effects would show on me if I ate them every day, but did you scan my three days' menu above? And did you multiply it by seven and think of me on my chosen menu for three weeks?

That's what makes me enjoy and get full benefit from my friends' entertainment.

I am not berating carefully, warmed over potatoes occasionally, but do condemn the indigestible fried grease with potato flavor that many families imagine they must have daily.

The tea that my friends provided was most delectable and gave me the gentle stimulation that I needed and I appreciated it and praised it. It served me a far better purpose than if I had been an habitual drinker of strong tea. Tea is a drug and not a food. No, I don't eat much meat, but I ate their boiled ham to my advantage.

And the apple sauce and green vegetable salad were the best ever and it was from such foods that I took my second helping while others "cleaned up the platter."

This brings up my old hobby of making my diet 2 parts fruits and vegetables to 1 part of such staple foods as bread, meat, eggs, cheese, etc. Then if I should be so thoroughly satisfied with this as to make it 3 to 1 (as my sample menus show) an occasional banquet will be beneficial rather than hurtful. But to make the average ratio 2 of the more nutritious foods to 1 of fruits and vegetables is to banquet all the time and be constipated. Then the occasional „feast" gets the blame.

It is with foods as it is in morals: the vices are the overworked virtues. Many things are not really bad till they are overdone and then may be most harmful. That's what makes insanity. You may do once as I did, and then again, after a time as I will, but you must not do it all the time.

My three weeks of careful eating made me worthy to be trusted for a square meal. If I should reason that if once was good for me therefore I should "square meal" all the time—well, that's what makes overweight, hardened arteries, heart troubles, apoplexy and disqualifies for life insurance. No indeed; I went right back to my rational diet to keep my credit good with Mother Nature.

We can't borrow at a bank without resources and thrift; neither can we afford to overtax digestion and thus deplete nerve force-resistance.

"COLUMBUS DAY" AT STATE FAIR

City Department of Recreation to Stage Field Day—20 Playgrounds to Participate.

Monday, Aug. 31, will be Columbus Day at the Ohio state fair, and many retail establishments and manufacturing plants of the city are planning a half holiday for their employes on that day, to allow them to participate in the Columbus Day events.

Included in the "Columbus Day" events are the parade, municipal playground field day contests, stock judging events and other attractions.

A. W. Raymond, director of recreation, is arranging for the playground field meet for this day and it is expected that representations from all of the city's 20 playgrounds will be there to participate in this event. The boys and girls from these playgrounds will be in charge of their instructors.

The athletic contests include, for boys: Fifty-yard dish, jockey race, wheelbarrow race, centipede race, bicycle race, tilting contest, half-mile relay race and 100-yard dash. For girls: Slap obstacle race, bicycle race, sedan race, boat relay, down and up relay, flag race and kangaroo race.

The 11 district winners in the statewide beauty contest will have a section in the parade, and an event of Columbus Day will be the selection of "Miss Ohio" from among the contestants. She will represent the state at the national beauty pageant at Atlantic City in September.

MAIL SERVICE ON FOODSTUFFS

Consumers on Same Rural Route as Producer Get Service Same Day.

Transportation of fodstuffs by rural mail carriers, a service inaugurated Monday on two mail routes to southeastern Franklin county, in an effort to bring the producer and consumer closer together, was received enthusiastically by the farmers, according to Superintendent of Mails A. L. Pace.

One-day service from the farm to the city is undertaken by the carrier, the only limitation being that the consumer be on the same rural route as the producer, or live within the city. In addition to his regular salary, the mail man receives 50 per cent of the postage on food produce collected and delivered by him.

The museum of the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia has on exhibition 2 saw blades from the original saws found at Ur of Chaldees in Mesopotamia. The blades which are two inches in length are made of volcanic glass. Their approximate age lies somewhere between six and seven thousand years, which would make them at least two thousand years old when Abraham lived. They are the handiwork of the Sumerians, a race of ancient Babylon.

I hear men talk so much about
Some great, uncertain day
When happiness at last will drive
Their miseries away,
When peace will shelter them from care
And fate will guide their feet
Along the endless paths of rest,
And joy will be complete.

They live in hope of better things
Tomorrow, in a land
Where all is rapturous and gay
And comforting and grand,
Where freedom opens wide the gates
To ecstasy supreme,
And leisure makes of days and nights
One long delightful dream.

But oh, how foolish is the plan,
How tragic is the fate
Of those who so delude themselves
Until it is too late!
Contentment sets no future time
To bless the lives of men,
For happiness is here and now
And never there and then!

Figures are quoted to show that sobriety and industry go hand in hand in Africa. Statistics from Algeria show that between 1910 and 1922 the importation of spirituous liquors declined ninety-one per cent while the export of oil nuts increased. Between 1907 and 1921 the import of spirits into the British West African countries decreased by 30,000,000 gallons, or well over sixty per cent, while the exports of cocoa increased by more than two hundred and fifty per cent.

WHO SAID

"The multitude is always in the wrong."

When Wentworth Dillon, fourth earl of Roscommon, uttered these words, he well knew and appreciated the limited ability of a multitude or mob to make an accurate judgment. He lived at the times Charles II was in power in England, and he saw the multitude first acclaim royalty, in the person of Charles' father, then denounce it and execute their king, to welcome the regime of Oliver Cromwell. And, finally, he saw the multitude turn again to royalty and outdo itself in an attempt to show their affection for the new monarch, Charles II.

Roscommon, as he is best known, was one of the favorites at the court of Charles II, where his learning and brilliant conversational powers won him many staunch friends among the nobles. It is a rather strange thing that this man who was such a friend of the king should at the same time have been described as the only moral writer" during the reign of Charles.

The reign of this monarch was noted for the dissoluteness and licentiousness of those in control, and how it happened that a man of Roscommon's character, writing as he did, did not offend some of the dissolute courtiers, if not the king himself, is not known. The fact remains, however, that he continued in the good graces of the king and his court until death.

Roscommon is known as a minor poet. He has left little to accord him a high place among the writers of his land, and yet many of his sayings and bits of philosophy, such as that quoted above, have been handed down through the years. He was born in 1633 and died in 1685.

Little of the work of Roscommon has survived. His two best-known efforts, probably, are an "Essay on the Translation of Verse" and a "Translation of Horace's Art of Poetry."—Wayne D. McMurray.

American export trade made a gain of 10.2 per cent in 1924 over that of the previous year, making the total export value more than $4,500,000. In many ways 1924 was a record year in American exports. More petroleum was shipped out of the United States than ever before, and exports of gasoline, and naptha exceeded those of 1923.

OLD PIONEER DAYS

In our little story last week about Lucas Sullivant's surveying party starting out in 1787 and his labors in this locality, we mentioned the limited provisions they had with them and that many times food being scarce they were sore tried for a full meal.

Upon one of these occasions of scarcity, after two days of almost entire abstinence from food, when leaving camp for the third day, Mr. Sullivant told the cook to hunt up the bones and rejected scraps of meat around the camp and try for a pot of soup by their return in the evening. When they returned to the camp, weary and hungry, they were regaled with the most appetising oder arising from the bubbling and steaming camp kettle: for sure enough, the cook had found something and soon the mess was ready, and each man received his share of the hot broth in his tin cup, and the bones and scraps of meat were distributed by lot, and Mr. Sullivant received the head of some small animal for his portion.

After supper, as the men gathered around the campfire, now happy and contented, the cook, somewhat vain of the success he had achieved, asked them to guess what they had eaten for supper, and how he had procured the materials. Some guessed a raccoon, groundhog, rabbit; others suggested a possum, squirrel, procupine, etc., to all of which the cook returned a negative, and finally when he was pressed to tell, he said they had supped on skunk soup, and to prove it produced the fresh skin of the animal.

Instantly the camp was in a commotion. Some of the men laughed, some swore and others, more indignant, wanted to whip the cook, and one poor fellow, the victim of a vivid imagination, soon lost the supper he had just eaten.

The cook had fortunately found a pair of these little animals in a hollow log and captured them without damage to himself, and thus had the material for his soup, which, it is said, Mr. Sullivant declared was first rate.

Wolves were constant visitors, barking and howling about the camp, lying in wait for any odd scrap; and the panther (vulgo painter) or American cougar, was at times found prowling around, most probably attracted by the venison which was generally in good supply in their camp. Once when encamped near what the early settlers knew as the "Salt Lick," on the west side of the river, in what is the southwestern part of Columbus, a panther was discovered crouched on the horizontal limb of a tree nearly overhanging the place where they were sitting around the brightly blazing fire. The tail of the panther was swaying to and fro and he seemed about to spring upon them when one of the men, seizing his gun, aimed at the head between the glaring eyeballs of the animal, and with steady hand pulled the trigger. Simultaneous with the crack of the gun the beast gave a scream and a spring, then fell in their midst, scattering the campfire in his death struggle.

The next morning, when Mr. Sullivant awoke, he felt something heavy on his body. He cast his eyes along without uncovering his arms or moving his position, and to his horror, perceived a large rattle snake snugly coiled up enjoying the combined warmth of his body and his blanket. With a quick and vigorous thrust he threw the blanket and all from him, and springing to his feet, soon dispatched the venemous reptile.

YOUR Last Name

IS IT MILTON?

The American Miltons have the satisfaction of believing that they are collateral descendants of John Milton, the immortal author of "Paradise Lost." At least such may be their claim if they are descended from the Milton family early established at Halifax, N. C.

The tradition is that the ancestor of these Miltons was Judge Christopher Milton, a brother of the poet. A descendant of his was John Milton, who was born in England and came to the United States in 1734, settling in North Carolina.

His son, John Milton, born in Halifax county, North Carolina, in 1740, was secretary of state of Georgia after the Revolution, and received two votes from the Georgia electors for first President of the United States. He married Hannah Spencer and by her had a son, Homer Virgil Milton, an officer in the War of 1812. He was known as General Milton.

General Milton had a son John Milton, born in 1807, who was governor of Florida. Governor Milton had a son William Henry Milton, a distinguished jurist, and his son, William Hall, born in 1864, was a distinguished surveyor general.

CANE—There is an Anglo-Norman word "cas" or chance from which this name is probably derived.

ASHLEY—From the name of parishes in Staffordshire, Wilts, Cambridge and other English counties.

WILL ASK CHANGE IN TRAFFIC CODE

Compelling Street Cars to Stop at Sounding of Fire Sirens.

Councilman Wehe announced Monday that he would present an amendment to the traffic code to city council at the first meeting after its summer vacation, Sept. 8.

Wehe is chairman of the safety committee, and together with Councilman Postle, a members, decided to present such an amendment to council following a conference with Safety Director McCune and Fire Chief Daniels.

The traffic code requires all vehicles to stop at the sounding of the siren of a fire truck, but in defining vehicles, specifically excludes street cars.

Wehe's action is a result of a recent accident in which a city fireman was killed in Parsons avenue when fire apparatus collided with a street car.

HOLTON PARK CLOSES SEASON

Activities for the Summer Were Very Successful and Gratifying to All.

Holton Park playground closed a most successful season last Monday. The closing activities consisted of Holton's part in the field meet held at the state fair. In this, as in other general activities, Holton playground was well represented in numbers as well as in the final results.

Holton playground had an average attendance of 1500 boys and girls each week during the summer. The playground was made complete this summer by the addition of tennis and basketball courts, making a variety of games for boys and girls of all ages.

Picnics were the custom at the natural playground, never a week passing but two to four picnics were held. At times there were family gatherings, again they were organizations, church or social clubs.

Baseball was the greatest boys' activity. There were three teams, the men's, the boys league team and the junior boys' team. The men's team was a later development, consisting of men who had played on the Glenwood and St. John's church teams. Combined as one team they play other men's teams from the different grounds. Two games were played with Washington park, one with Welland, one with Nineteenth and Rich.

The boys' league team was composed of boys under 16 years of age. They played Schoenthal, Glenwood, Sunshine, Livingston, Washington, Linden and Nineteenth and Rich, which were played as part of the league schedule. Before the league started Holton defeated Glenwood 9 to 7, and Glenwood defeated Holton in the league game 7 to 5. All boys who played in two games received letters, fifteen being awarded.

The Junior boys' baseball team consisting of boys under 13 years, claim the championship of the city, never having been defeated. They beat Northwood two games, Glenwood one game, and Livingston one game. There were 15 letters awarded to these players.

Two field meets were held at Holton this summer, which included events for boys and girls of the different age groups.

A tennis tournament as well as a horseshoe contest was held during the summer, the winners of the tournaments representing the playground in the city finals.

Volley ball came in for a good share of the activities, but no organized team existed. Basketball consisted of games of foul shooting most of the time.

Besides these organized activities there were swings, slides, teeter boards and the grand and glorious wading pool. This apparatus was used extensively by the boys and girls, large and small, from 9 a. m. until closing time each day. A fine sand pile kept the smaller "kids" busy.

Each Tuesday was "swimming" day for the larger boys and girls, and on that day all else was forgotten and the old swimming suit was brought out for a plunge in Indianola pool.

All boys' activities were directed by Robert Condy.

Among the more specific girls' activities, which were under the direction of Miss Anna Nemeck, were games, baseball, volley ball and tennis. There also were sewing classes held each Tuesday which were productive of fine work as well as providing excellent training for the girls. Mrs. Farrar of the recreation department held the principal sewing class each week, but the informal classes were held almost daily.

The girls entered into the two field meets which were held, being awarded ribbons for their efforts in the different events.

A prize health class was another feature events for the girls, it bringing number of boys and girls engaging in the health games and listening to the stories than at any other playground in the city. A class of 50 smaller girls and boys was the weekly average.

Miss Anna Mae Parrett, 89 South Burgess avenue, and her niece, Miss Elizabeth Parrett of Linden, returned Wednesday from Winona Lake, Ind., where they had been the guest of Dr. John Parrett of Hammond, Ind.

PLAYGROUNDS CLOSE SEASON

Glenwood One of the Recreation Grounds to Be Open After School Hours.

The city department of recreation officially closed its summer playground schedule last Saturday, and this week as a climax to its summer activities, sponsored a field meet at the state fair comprising various games and contests for the children of the playgrounds.

The recreation department has decided upon the policy of maintaining several after-school playgrounds which will be available for the children after school hours and remain open until dark and all day Saturday.

Two playgrounds on the West Side are among the list to be kept open—Glenwood and Sunshine—and beginning next Tuesday these grounds will be open each week day after school and on Saturdays, until Oct. 1.

Mr. Willard Waite, who has had charge of Glenwood playground throughout the season, has been a very successful supervisor and has established an enviable record among the patrons. He wil continue in charge and will supervise activities at Glenwood shelter house this winter.

MISSING LAD HOME AGAIN

Herman Hartwell, Jr., 15, Absent Since Aug 14, Returns Sunday.

Herman Hartwell, jr., aged 15 years, 536 Catherine street, who had been missing since Aug. 14, returned to his home last Sunday.

In a joking manner a neighbor had told the boy police were looking for him to cause his arrest. Not wishing to be arrested the boy "hit the road," and with lifts from friendly autoists, sleeping in haymows and begging his meals at farmhouses, the lad made his way to Portsmouth then over into eastern Kentucky and back to New Boston, Ohio, where he stopped overnight with some friendly villagers, who recognized the boy from descriptions broadcast in newspapers, and prevailed upon him to return. From New Boston he got a lift to Dayton and then made his way by foot and auto rides to Columbus, arriving early Sunday morning.

Still having the fear of being arrested the boy hid in the Gibson woods, across the road from Greenlawn cemetery, where he was recognized by a passerby and the police notified. He was taken to the home of his grandmother, Mrs. George Ramey, 113 Yale avenue, his parents being in West Virginia searching for him.

AN INTERESTING TRIP REPORTED

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Deems Return Home After Long Motor Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Deems have just returned from their vacation trip in the east. The trip was to Cleveland and then along Lake Erie to Buffalo, N. Y., then to Niagara Falls, Rochester, Nunda, Silver Lake and Portage Falls, N. Y., crossing the Niagara river over the lower bridge at the Whirlpool Rapids into Canada, thence to Hamilton, London, Ontario, and other points to Port Huron, Mich and Detroit, then to Toledo and home.

The roads were all that anyone could ask for almost all the distance. It is a real joy to travel by auto these days with millions and even billions in money being expended in the building of good roads. In Ohio there is every evidence of the greatest corn yield in the history of the state; the fields indicate millions of bushels this year for the farmers, and we hope a degree of prosperity for them. Pennsylvania and part of New York state the scene is through great vineyards loaded with luscious fruit and up in the Niagara region there is a wealth of apple, pear and peach trees loaded to the limit with fruit, just waiting for the harvest.

Of all the cities we visited, Detroit was the one to impress us most. The extent of the city's growth is marvelous one million five hundred thousand population. Years ago the waterworks was out on the edge of the city, and although the waterworks has not moved from the old location, it seems now to be in the heart of the city with miles and miles of city beyond it. Its great buildings, its mighty factories, its tremendous trade and traffic on its streets and boulevards, brings one to a halt, and they begin to wonder whether this city will not surpass Chicago some of these days.

Of course at Niagara we pause in wonder at the force of power, mighty, tremendous, awful power as the water rushes in and drops 180 feet on turbine wheels generating from 5000 to 12,000 horsepower at each wheel. When you reach Jamestown, N. Y., in Chautauqua county, you feel the influence of Niagara power; when you go east from Buffalo everything as far as Syracuse, 192 miles from the falls, is run by the electricity generated at the falls.

Of natural scenery Portage Falls is a beauty spot with its immense pine trees, its wonderful dense forest, and its interesting history make it a place to be remembered. There are three falls at Portage, the highest of which is 98 feet, all in the Genesee river. Above the falls is a steel bridge 235 feet high and 900 feet long. The river has sides of stone that look to be 300 feet to the top, which have the appearance of being hewn down by human ingenuity.

We met Mrs. Orpha Haller at the home of her son, Harry Haller, in Detroit. Mrs. Haller is well known on the Hilltop and was long a member of Hoge Memorial church. We arrived in time for her 81st birthday, which was being celebrated with much interest with her friends and neighbors.

Mrs. Minnie Kester, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. John Welch, returned to her home in Greenville, Ohio, Tuesday.

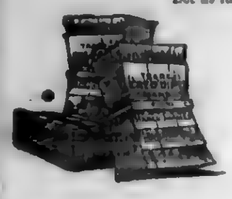
Side Walls of "CREO-DIPT" STAINED SHINGLES



For a True Colonial Effect

Especially the large 24" shingles, with heavy butts, laid with 10" exposure give an effect unequalled by other side wall material. Using random widths varying from 6" to 12", the monotony of a plain side wall is overcome. They are laid so as to break joints and provide a double thickness of these heavy "CREO-DIPT" Stained Shingles. This means a weather protection not afforded by other materials; a warmer house in winter,—cooler in summer.

The artistic advantages and the adaptability of "CREO-DIPT" Stained Shingles are beyond comparison. There are many color treatments possible. For true colonial treatment, "Dixie White" gives all the soft texture of Southern whitewashed shingles without the "painty look" so often noticed in wide clapboard and painted shingle work. The silver gray treatment is also considered very attractive and weathers beautifully.

"CREO-DIPT" Stained Shingles are cut from vertical grained red cedar, thoroughly seasoned, and treated by a special staining and creosote oil preserving process. Permanent stains made from finest earth pigments (no aniline dyes) are ground twice in pure linseed oil and carried into the wood fibers. They will not curl, rot or warp.

Let us furnish samples of colors on wood and prices.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

Continuing the "Onward Christian Soldier" game—I wonder if you are getting as much out of it, personally, as I am.

Again, in the night, recently, I found myself breathing short, shallow breaths, like this:

Inhale exhale inhale exhale
Onward Christian Sol dier, etc.

Then I changed to this:

Inhale Exhale
Onward Christian Sold dier, etc.,

(In the same speed with length of each breath doubled) and in trying to finish breathing the tune, discovered it to be a good treatment for insomnia—I dropped off to sleep and continued my slow rate of breathing.

It's a great game (of solitaire). Do it now, (the last way), and so fortify yourself against

TUBERCULOSIS

The war proved to be a great opportunity for medical research. The wholesale and thorough examination of young and middleaged men, revealed many facts which would otherwise have remained obscure.

Many men who supposed themselves—and rightly so—to be in perfect health, were told of tubercular scars on their lungs, which told, unmistakably, of the presence and activity, at sometime, of tubercles. It is not strange that these men inhaled these germs, for we all, unknowingly, do that. But, in the cases of these men, the germs found an unhealthy spot where they could nest and propagate.

The fact that, in these cases, the disease was cured as unconsciously as it was incepted, proves, not only that tuberculosis is much more common than is usually supposed, but that it is most curable, by right living. This will be alarming to some and encouraging to others, depending upon one's susceptibility to alarm, but it should be a matter for congratulation to all.

Right living, as against universal drug medication is becoming more popular with the years. No longer than 50 years ago, the physician's greatest asset was the manipulation of his medicaments. This was encouraged by the cultivated attitude of the people, most of whom felt that the medicine was the thing to be paid for, and, with many, their reliance was principally upon the drugs. Advice and personal responsibility were incidental.

Latterly, many medical men who can write and speak, are making themselves heard in the interests of public health, by spreading a gospel of cheer instead of fear, and of hope and belief in personal responsibility and "self determination" in health matters, which means nothing more nor less than right living.

Apropos of tuberculosis, this means that an institution for the cure of the disease is as much a school as it is a hospital. The patient is sedulously taught law, by keeping close to nature, he can increase his vitality, which is his only defense. Having thoroughly learned this, he can go forth, and by aid of favorable surroundings and his will power, he can complete his cure—simply by right living.

The reader my yet be interested to know what happens to effect a cure. To illustrate: In a battle, every man, on both sides, contributes all the power he has toward exterminating every man on thee opposing side. I like to think of the fight between vitality and disease as we think of a battle, in which the contestants are the corpuscles of the blood against the tubercular or pneumonia germs or of a common cold—for it is indeed a battle. The microscope affords the most graphic illustration of this.

The Luxury of Sleep

O. Wendace Hawthorne

"Now I lay me down to sleep"—
Oh, what a happy phrase!
Enwrapt in folds of slumber deep,
While stars their faithful vigil keep,
Our barks across the darkness creep
Between two busy days.

Afar we float on spirit wings
Beyond the vaulted sky;
We soar to realms of mystic things
And drink of youth's eternal springs,
While Mother Nature gently sings
A soothing lullaby.

Of men asleep, it matters not
How humble they may be;
In sleep we know a common lot;
All strife and burdens are forgot
When each has found his friendly cot
And sails the Morphean Sea.

The luxury of sweet repose
Bids petty cares be gone!
When men their weary eyelids close
The spark of genius brighter glows;
They gain the might that sleep bestows
And gayly greet the dawn.

Among the NOTABLES

SILAS CLARK HERRING

If a modern burglar or "safe cracker" could see some of the safes invented by Silas Herring, he would probably have a good laugh. For a "modern" safe blower must be a bit of a scientist with a large knowledge of explosives; an old-fashioned safe would be easy for him to get into.

Herring was born September 7, 1803, in Shrewsbury, Vt., and began his career as a grocery clerk. Tiring of this after some six years, he went into the lottery business, saved $10,000 and started a wholesale grocery concern in New York city. A fire and a panic ruined his business, so he obtained the agency for safes. He got the right to manufacture them later, and kept on improving them each year. He once put a thousand dollars in the drawer of one, sent it to the World's fair and offered the money to anyone who could get into the safe and get it. No one got it.

But nowadays big banks and trust companies would laugh at these old square safes. The "burglar-proof" safe today is round like a ball, and has a door that screws in, leaving no cracks for explosives. Even if any were poured into the hinges, the explosion would only drive the door more firmly into the casing of the safe.

Herring died in 1881.

OLD PIONEER DAYS

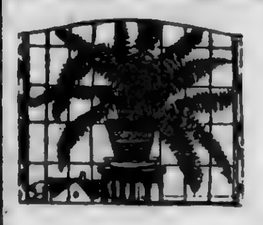
At one time, it is related, that Lucas Sullivant, with his party were ascending the Scioto river in their canoes. It was toward the latter part of April. They had paddled along up the river and were about half a mile below the place now known as Marble Cliff quarries, with the wind blowing down the stream, they encountered a most peculiar and sickening odor, which increased as they advanced, and some of the men were absolutely overcome with nausea occasioned by the intolerable odor.

They kept paddling on, however, up the stream, wondering what it was, and striving all the time to find out, and when they had reached a spot opposite the cliff they discovered the odor protruded from a prodigious number of snakes, primarily rattlesnakes, which had just awakened from their winter torpor and were basking in the warm spring sunshine. Mr. Sullivant said that unless he had seen it he could never have imagined such a sight. Every available place was full, and the whole face of the cliff seemed to be a mass of living writhing reptiles.

It has been related by early settlers of Franklin township that the fissures and holes in the rocky banks of the Scioto river and also Whetstone (now Olentangy) were the resorts of great numbers of snakes that went there every fall for winter quarters, and that many regular snake hunts, or rather snake killings, took place.

The most famous snake den known was at the Marble Cliff. There were two entrances into the rocks from three to five feet in diameter, leading into a fissure or cave of unknown extent, and the bottom part of these entrances was as smooth and polished as glass, from the constant gliding in and out of these lothsome reptiles, which were the annoyance of the settlers in that neighborhood, as well as the special dread of boys of those days, who had to go with bags of grain to McCoy's mill, about 200 yards above this place.



Mr. William Sullivant, in his history, states that several times on his trips to the mill he saw the venomous reptiles sunning themselves in the road and he would always turn aside the horse, which seemed equally afraid to go near them. He wrote that "on one occasion when mounted on 'Old Kate,' we jogged on until near the mill, when the old mare gave a snort and shy that nearly threw me off, as she discovered a huge old rattlesnake lying in the middle of the road, as if he owned all the premises. The old mare, of her own accord, gave his snakeship a wide berth and continued to snort and exhibit uneasiness for some time, and I know I received such a fright that the cold chills ran over me, although it was a hot summer day."

For years after the settlement of that neighborhood frequent attempts were made to break up that resort, particularly when the premises were owned by Thomas Backus, who one cold winter, had large quantities of dry wood and brush carried into the caves and set on fire in the spring. Gunpowder was also used in an attempt to blow the snake den, as it was usually called, and one of the blasts found vent on top of the ridge, a half mile away, and formed a sink hole, which remained for years after.

One of the most efficient means was that of building a hog pen, early in the fall, in front of the den and the hogs were said to have destroyed great numbers of the snakes. A pair of bald eagles had a nest in a tall cedar tree that formerly crowned the cliff and they also killed many of the reptiles. But time alone has effected what combined and systematic effort failed to accomplish, for it is probable that no venomous snake has been seen in that locality for many years.

ANCIENTS HAD MORE THAN FAIR IDEA OF SURGERY

Evidence that skull surgery was successfully practiced by prehistoric people in Michigan has been presented to the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Prof. H. P. Grossman of the University of Michigan. Pointing out that Michigan has been greatly neglected as a field for archeological investigation, he said: "In Alpena county, Michigan, several trephined skulls—that is, skulls into which holes were drilled during the life of the patient, have been reported. One of them is in the University of Michigan museum and careful examination by anatomists of repute shows that a healing had begun after the operation and therefore the area of the practice of skull trephining must be extended far beyond Mexico."

STORY OF ZOROASTER

Zoroaster was one of the great teachers of the East and founder of what may be called the national religion of the Perso-Iranian people, that is, speaking generally, the Persians. When he lived and taught is not exactly known, but it is held that it was between the years 1000 B. C. and 600 B. C. He taught a dualism of power, one good and the other evil. Light represented the former and darkness the latter. As corruption grew up the sun became worshipped as the great source of light and, therefore, of all good.

HOLTON PARK CLOSES SEASON

Activities for the Summer Were Very Successful and Gratifying to All.

Holton Park playground closed a most successful season last Monday. The closing activities consisted of Holton's part in the field meet held at the state fair. In this, as in other general activities, Holton playground was well represented in numbers as well as in the final results.

Holton playground had an average attendance of 1300 boys and girls each week during the summer. The playground was made complete this summer by the addition of tennis and basketball courts, making a variety of games for boys and girls of all ages.

Picnics were the custom at the natural playground, never a week passing but two to four picnics were held. At times there were family gatherings, again they were organizations, church or social clubs.

Baseball was the greatest boys' activity. There were three teams, the men's, the boys league team and the junior boys' team. The men's team was a later development, consisting of men who had played on the Glenwood and St. John's church teams. Combined as one team they play other men's teams from the different grounds. Two games were played with Washington park, one with Weiland, one with Nineteenth and Rich.

The boys' league team was composed of boys under 16 years of age. They played Schonenthal, Glenwood, Sunshine, Livingston, Washington, Linden and Nineteenth and Rich, which were played as part of the league schedule. Before the league started Holton defeated Glenwood 9 to 7, and Glenwood defeated Holton in the league game 7 to 5. All boys who played in two games received letters, fifteen being awarded.

The Junior boys' baseball team consisting of boys under 13 years, claim the championship of the city, never having been defeated. They beat Northwood two games, Glenwood one game, and Livingston one game. There were 15 letters awarded to these players.

Two field meets were held at Holton this summer, which included events for boys and girls of the different [illegible].

A tennis tournament as well as a horseshoe contest was held during the summer, the winners of the tournaments representing the playground in the city finals.

Volley ball came in for a good share of the activities, but no organized team existed. Basketball consisted of games of foul shooting most of the time.

Besides these organized activities there were swings, slides, teeter boards and the grand and glorious wading pool. This apparatus was used often ively by the boys and girls, large and small, from 9 a. m. until closing time each day. A fine sand pile kept the smaller "kids" busy.

Each Tuesday was "swimming" day for the larger boys and girls, and on that day all else was forgotten and the old swimming suit was brought out for a plunge in Indianola pool.

All boys' activities were directed by Robert Coady.

Among the more specific girls' activities, which were under the direction of Miss Anna Nemeck, were games, baseball, volley ball and tennis. There also were sewing classes held each Tuesday which were productive of fine work as well as providing excellent training for the girls. Mrs. Farrar of the recreation department held the principal sewing class each week, but the informal classes were held almost daily.

The girls entered into the two field m as which were held, being awarded ribbons for their efforts in the different evnts.

A prize health class was another feature events for the girls, it bringing number of boys and girls engaging in the health games and listening to the stories than at any other playground in the city. A class of 50 smaller girls and boys was the weekly average.

Miss Anna Mae Parrett, 89 South Burgess avenue, and her niece, Miss Elizabeth Parrett of Linden, returned Wednesday from Winona Lake, Ind., where they had been the guest of Dr John Parrett of Hammond, Ind.

PLAYGROUNDS CLOSE SEASON

The city department of recreation officially closed its summer playground schedule last Saturday, and this week as a climax to its summer activities, sponsored a field meet at the state fair comprising various games and contests for the children of the playgrounds.

In the competitions Glenwood playground girls' team won third place in the relay race.

The recreation department has decided upon the policy of maintaining several after-school playgrounds which will be available for the children after school hours and remain open until dark and all day Saturday.

Two playgrounds on the West Side are among the list to be kept open—Glenwood and Sunshine—and beginning next Tuesday these grounds will be open each week day after school and on Saturdays, until Oct. 1.

Mr. Willard Waite, who has had charge of Glenwood playground throughout the season, has been a very successful supervisor and has established an enviable record among the patrons. He wil continue in charge and will supervise activities at Glenwood shelter house this winter.

MISSING LAD HOME AGAIN

Herman Hartwell, Jr., 15, Absent Since Aug 14, Returns Sunday.

Herman Hartwell, jr., aged 15 years, 596 Catherine street, who had been missing since Aug. 14, returned to his home last Sunday.

In a joking manner a neighbor had told the boy police were looking for him to cause his arrest. Not wishing to be arrested the boy "hit the road," and with lifts from friendly autoists, sleeping in haymows and begging his meals at farmhouses, the lad made his way to Portsmouth then over into eastern Kentucky and back to New Boston, Ohio, where he stopped overnight with some friendly villagers, who recognized the boy from descriptions broadcast in newspapers, and prevailed upon him to return. From New Boston he got a lift to Dayton and then made his way by foot and auto rides to Columbus, arriving early Sunday morning.

Still having the fear of being arrested the boy hid in the Gibson woods, across the road from Greenlawn cemetery, where he was recognized by a passerby and the police notified. He was taken to the home of his grandmother, Mrs. George Ramey, 113 Yale avenue, his parents being in West Virginia searching for him.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Allen and children Thelma and James, 128 North Ogden avenue, and Mrs. A. C. Carroll, toured to Grafton, W. Va., to visit Mrs. Bernard Hueman, Mrs. Carroll's sister. Miss Edith Carroll, who has been visiting at Grafton for six weeks, returned home with them.

Miss Verna A. Walcutt, 44 South Wheatland avenue, attended the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Zook (Esther Lindley), at Urbana, Ohio, Thursday, Aug. 27. Mrs. Zook is the daughter of Rev. Paul B. Lindley, and formerly resided on the Hilltop. Mr. and Mrs. Zook will attend the Cleveland Bible Institute the coming semester.

Simplicity marked the marriage service Saturday evening of Miss Elva I. Hartman and M. Kenneth Brentlinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Brentlinger of Columbus. The wedding took place at the home of the officiant, Dr. William Oxley Thompson, president of Ohio State University. The bride wore a dress of cream georgette and pansy crepe and carried a corsage of pink roses and garden flowers. The bride and groom are both graduates of Ohio State university, Mr. Brentlinger being a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. He is at present employed as a metallurgist at the Central Steele Co., Massillon. Mrs. Brentlinger is a teacher in our public schools and is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hartman.—Wadsworth (Ohio) Press.

Mrs. Brentlinger is a sister of Mrs. M. W. Seiler, 29 Eldon avenue, with whom she made her home for four years, and has many close friends on the Hilltop.

AN INTERESTING TRIP REPORTED

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Deems Return Home After Long Motor Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Deems have just returned from their vacation trip in the east. The trip was to Cleveland and then along Lake Erie to Buffalo, N. Y., then to Niagara Falls, Rochester, Nunda, Silver Lake and Portage Falls, N. Y., crossing the Niagara river over the lower bridge at the Whirlpool Rapids into Canada, thence to Hamilton, London, Ontario, and other points to Port Huron, Mich and Detroit, then to Toledo and home.

The roads were all that anyone could ask for almost all the distance. It is a real joy to travel by auto these days with millions and even billions in money being expended in the building of good roads. In Ohio there is every evidence of the greatest corn yield in the history of the state; the fields indicate millions of bushels this year for the farmers, and we hope a degree of prosperity for them. Pennsylvania and part of New York state the scene is through great vineyards loaded with luscious fruit and up in the Niagara region there is a wealth of apple, pear and peach trees loaded to the limit with fruit, just waiting for the harvest.

Of all the cities we visited, Detroit was the one to impress us most. The extent of the city's growth is marvelous one million five hundred thousand population. Years ago the waterworks was out on the edge of the city, and although the waterworks has not moved from the old location, it seems now to be in the heart of the city with miles and miles of city beyond it. Its great buildings, its mighty factories, its tremendous trade and traffic on its streets and boulevards, brings one to a halt, and they begin to wonder whether this city will not surpass Chicago some of these days.

Of course at Niagara we pause in wonder at the force of power, mighty, tremendous, awful power as the water rushes in and drops 150 feet on turbine wheels generating from 5000 to 12,000 horsepower at each wheel. When you reach Jamestown, N. Y., in Chautauqua county, you feel the influence of Niagara power; when you go east from Buffalo everything as far as Syracuse, 193 miles from the falls, is run by the electricity generated at the falls.

Of natural scenery Portage Falls is a beauty spot with its immense pine trees, its wonderful dense forest, and its interesting history make it a place to be remembered. There are three falls at Portage, the highest of which is 95 feet, all in the Genesee river. Above the falls is a steel bridge 235 feet high and 800 feet long. The river has sides of stone that look to be 300 feet to the top, which have the appearance of being hewn down by human ingenuity.

We met Mrs. Orpha Haller at the home of her son, Harry Haller, in Detroit. Mrs. Haller is well known on the Hilltop and was long a member of Hope Memorial church. We arrived in time for her 81st birthday, which was being celebrated with much interest with her friends and neighbors.

Mrs. Minnie Kester, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. John Welch, returned to her home in Greenville, Ohio, Tuesday.

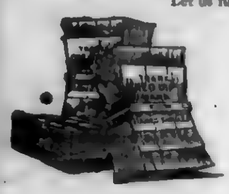
The third annual reunion of the Ziegler-Heyl families was held at Glenwood park Sunday, Aug. 30, honoring Mrs. F. M. Hanger of Urbana, whose 77th birthday occurred on that date. Reminiscences of bygone days were recalled by the older members of the family, and a general good time was enjoyed by all. Thirty-seven relatives and friends sat down to tables laden with good things to eat. Those present were Mrs. F. M. Hanger, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Dorsey and son George, Miss Winona Dorsey and Mr. Carl Dorsey of Urbana, Miss Blanch Flowers of Bellefontaine, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wallace, Mr. Clarence Wallace, Mr. Roy Wallace and son Lawrence, Miss Pauline DeLong of Delaware, Mr. and Mrs. David Ziegler, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Ziegler of Springfield, Mr. and Mrs. H. Grant Estep of Detroit, Mr. D. W. Heyl, Mr. Kenneth Heyl of Huntington, W. Va.; Mrs. Aletha Shannon of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Rev W. A. Warner, Mr. David Warner, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Heyl, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Heyl, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heyl, Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Hane, Mr. A. A. Heyl, Miss Elizabeth Heyl and Mr. and Mrs. John Merritt, all of Columbus.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Phalor and daughter Mildred, 2528 West Broad street, returned home last Saturday from a very pleasant vacation at Buckeye Lake.

Dr. and Mrs. C. B. Turley of Dayton, were guests last week of Mrs. Turley's mother, Mrs. Sarah A. Gray, 2528 West Broad street.

Side Walls of
"CREO-DIPT"
STAINED SHINGLES



For a True Colonial Effect

Especially the large 24" shingles, with heavy butts, laid with 10" exposure give an effect unequalled by other side wall material. Using random widths varying from 4" to 12", the monotony of a plain side wall is overcome. They are laid so as to break joints and provide a double thickness of these heavy "CREO-DIPT" Stained Shingles. This means a weather protection not afforded by other materials; a warmer house in winter,—cooler in summer.

The artistic advantages and the adaptability of "CREO-DIPT" Stained Shingles are beyond comparison. There are many color treatments possible. For true colonial treatment, "Dixie White" gives all the soft texture of Southern whitewashed shingles without the "painty look" so often noticed in wide clapboard and painted shingle work. The silver gray treatment is also considered very attractive and weathers beautifully.

"CREO-DIPT" Stained Shingles are cut from vertical grained red cedar, thoroughly seasoned, and treated by a special staining and creosote oil preserving process. Permanent stains made from finest earth pigments (no aniline dyes) are ground twice in pure linseed oil and carried into the wood fibers. They will not curl, rot or warp.

Let us furnish samples of colors on wood and prices.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. H. McFADON

Continuing the "Onward Christian Soldier" game—I wonder if you are getting as much out of it, personally, as I am.

Again, in the night, recently, I found myself breathing short, shallow breaths, like this:

Inhale exhale inhale exhale
Onward Christian Sol dier, etc.

Then I changed to this:

Inhale Exhale
Onward Christian Sold dier, etc.,

(in the same speed with length of each breath doubled) and in trying to finish breathing the tune, discovered it to be a good treatment for insomnia—I dropped off to sleep and continued my slow rate of breathing.

It's a great game (of solitaire). Do it now, (the last way), and so fortify yourself against

TUBERCULOSIS

The war proved to be a great opportunity for medical research. The wholesale and thorough examination of young and middleaged men, revealed many facts which would otherwise have remained obscure.

Many men who supposed themselves—and rightly so—to be in perfect health, were told of tubercular scars on their lungs, which told, unmistakably, of the presence and activity, at sometime, of tubercles. It is not strange that these men inhaled these germs, for we all, unknowingly, do that. But, in the cases of these men, the germs found an unhealthy spot where they could nest and propagate.

The fact that, in these cases, the disease was cured as unconsciously as it was incepted, proves, not only that tuberculosis is much more common than is usually supposed, but that it is most curable, by right living. This will be alarming to some and encouraging to others, depending upon one's susceptibility to alarm, but it should be a matter for congratulation to all.

Right living, as against universal drug medication is becoming more popular with the years. No longer than 50 years ago, the physician's greatest asset was the manipulation of his medicaments. This was encouraged by the cultivated attitude of the people, most of whom felt that the medicine was the thing to be paid for, and, with many, their reliance was principally upon the drugs. Advice and personal responsibility were incidental.

Latterly, many medical men who can write and speak, are making themselves heard in the interests of public health, by spreading a gospel of cheer instead of fear, and of hope and belief in personal responsibility and "self determination" in health matters, which means nothing more nor less than right living.

Apropos of tuberculosis, this means that an institution for the cure of the disease is as much a school as it is a hospital. The patient is sedulously taught law, by keeping close to nature, he can increase his vitality, which is his only defense. Having thoroughly learned this, he can go forth, and by aid of favorable surroundings and his will power, he can complete his cure—simply by right living.

The reader my yet be interested to know what happens to effect a cure. To illustrate: In a battle, every man, on both sides, contributes all the power he has toward exterminating every man on thee opposing side. I like to think of the fight between vitality and disease as we think of a battle, in which the contestants are the corpuscles of the blood against the tubercular or pneumonia germs or of a common cold—for it is indeed a battle. The microscope affords the most graphic illustration of this.

"Now I lay me down to sleep"—
Oh, what a happy phrase!
Enwrapt in folds of slumber deep,
While stars their faithful vigil keep,
Our barks across the darkness creep
Between two busy days.

Afar we float on spirit wings
Beyond the vaulted sky;
We soar to realms of mystic things
And drink of youth's eternal springs,
While Mother Nature gently sings
A soothing lullaby.

Of men asleep, it matters not
How humble they may be;
In sleep we know a common lot;
All strife and burdens are forgot
When each has found his friendly cot
And sails the Morphean Sea.

The luxury of sweet repose
Bids petty cares be gone!
When men their weary eyelids close
The spark of genius brighter glows;
They gain the might that sleep bestows
And gayly greet the dawn.

SILAS CLARK HERRING

If a modern burglar or "safe cracker" could see some of the safes invented by Silas Herring, he would probably have a good laugh. For a "modern" safe blower must be a bit of a scientist with a large knowledge of explosives; an old-fashioned safe would be easy for him to get into.

Herring was born September 7, 1803, in Shewsbury, Vt., and began his career as a grocery clerk. Tiring of this after some six years, he went into the lottery business, saved $10,000 and started a wholesale grocery concern in New York city. A fire and a panic ruined his business, so he obtained the agency for safes. He got the right to manufacture them later, and kept on improving them each year. He once put a thousand dollars in the drawer of one, sent it to the World's fair and offered the money to anyone who could get into the safe and get it. No one got it.

But nowadays big banks and trust companies would laugh at these old square safes. The "burglar-proof" safe today is round like a ball, and has a door that screws in, leaving no cracks for explosives. Even if any were poured into the hinges, the explosion would only drive the door more firmly into the casing of the safe.

Herring died in 1881.

OLD PIONEER DAYS

At one time, it is related, that Lucas Sullivant, with his party were ascending the Scioto river in their canoes. It was toward the latter part of April. They had paddled along up the river and were about half a mile below the place now known as Marble Cliff quarries, with the wind blowing down the stream, they encountered a most peculiar and sickening odor, which increased as they advanced, and some of the men were absolutely overcome with nausea occasioned by the intolerable odor.

They kept paddling on, however, up the stream, wondering what it was, and striving all the time to find out, and when they had reached a spot opposite the cliff they discovered the odor protruded from a prodigious number of snakes, primarily rattlesnakes, which had just awakened from their winter torpor and were basking in the warm spring sunshine. Mr. Sullivant said that unless he had seen it he could never have imagined such a sight. Every available place was full, and the whole face of the cliff seemed to be a mass of living writhing reptiles.

It has been related by early settlers of Franklin township that the fissures and holes in the rocky banks of the Scioto river and also Whetstone (now Olentangy) were the resorts of great numbers of snakes that went there every fall for winter quarters, and that many regular snake hunts, or rather snake killings, took place.

The most famous snake den known was at the Marble Cliff. There were two entrances into the rocks from three to five feet in diameter, leading into a fissure or cave of unknown extent, and the bottom part of these entrances was as smooth and polished as glass, from the constant gliding in and out of these lothsome reptiles, which were the annoyance of the settlers in that neighborhood, as well as the special dread of boys of those days, who had to go with bags of grain to McCoy's mill, about 200 yards above this place.

Mr. William Sullivant, in his history, states that several times on his trips to the mill he saw the venomous reptiles sunning themselves in the road and he would always turn aside the horse, which seemed equally afraid to go near them. He wrote that "on one occasion when mounted on 'Old Kate,' we jogged on until near the mill, when the old mare gave a snort and shy that nearly threw me off, as she discovered a huge old rattlesnake lying in the middle of the road, as if he owned all the premises. The old mare, of her own accord, gave his snakeship a wide berth and continued to snort and exhibit uneasiness for some time, and I know I received such a fright that the cold chills ran over me, although it was a hot summer day."

For years after the settlement of that neighborhood frequent attempts were made to break up that resort, particularly when the premises were owned by Thomas Backus, who one cold winter, had large quantities of dry wood and brush carried into the caves and set on fire in the spring. Gunpowder was also used in an attempt to blow the snake den, as it was usually called, and one of the blasts found vent on top of the ridge, a half mile away, and formed a sink hole, which remained for years after.

One of the most efficient means was that of building a hog pen, early in the fall, in front of the den and the hogs were said to have destroyed great numbers of the snakes. A pair of bald eagles had a nest in a tall cedar tree that formerly crowned the cliff and they also killed many of the reptiles. But time alone has effected what combined and systematic effort failed to accomplish, for it is probable that no venomous snake has been seen in that locality for many years.

SECOND PERIOD OF SUMMER CONTESTS

At Central Y. M. C. A. Opened Monday—Will Close Sept 18.

The first six weeks' period of summer contests in the young men's division of the department of physical education of the Central Y. M. C. A. closed Friday night and the second period of three weeks began Monday and will close Sept. 18. Three sets of exercises on five pieces of apparatus were conducted and new exercises will be taken up during this last period.

These summer contests is for the purpose of locating as many natural groupings as possible among the members and for the selection of leaders so as to make a strong organization for the fall and winter season which program starts Sept. 21.

In the fall program it is planned to organize the young men into permanent groups to carry out the complete four-fold idea of Y. M. C. A. work.

STORY OF ZOROASTER

Zoroaster was one of the great teachers of the East and founder of what may be called the national religion of the Perso-Iranian people, that is, speaking generally, the Persians. When he lived and taught is not exactly known, but it is held that it was between the years 1000 B. C. and 600 B. C. He taught a dualism of power, one good and the other evil. Light represented the former and darkness the latter. As corruption grew up the sun became worshipped as the great source of light and, therefore, of all good.

HILLTOP SCHOOLS OPEN FALL TERM

With Increased Attendance and About the Same Personnel of Teachers.

The rapid growth of the Hilltop population was again exemplified this week at the opening of the fall term of the city schools. Though greater facilities had been made from year to year for the accommodation of the ever increasing school population on the Hilltop, yet it seems that we do not get ahead of the demand for more room, as about all the available capacity was filled up after the first two days' enrollment.

Not much change has been made in the different teaching departments, and nearly all of the teachers that have held forth for the past year are again in their place.

Following is a list of the teachers and instructors in the three Hilltop schools, also the enrollment of the same for Tuesday, the opening day, together with St. Aloysius parochial school.

CUT AND BRUISED WHILE AT WORK

H. C. Weaver, Employe of Pennsylvania R. R. Shops, Caught in Air Motor.

H. C. Weaver, 100 South Ogden avenue, an employe of the Pennsylvania railroad shops, was painfully injured Saturday morning while at his work in the shops.

Weaver's clothing caught in an air motor and before he could be released he was badly cut about the head and face and badly bruised about the body.

His injuries, however, are not serious, and he is much improved.

BOY SCOUTS AT BUCKEYE LAKE

About 15 Boy Scouts of Troop No. 31, together with R. C. Kadel, scoutmaster, and John Birle, assistant scoutmaster, spent three days in camp at Buckey Lake. They were gone from Saturday until Monday.

This troop earlier in the season took a two weeks' motor trip through the east.

ANOTHER BUNCH DESERVE "WORKS"

An Essex coach, carrying a bunch of four, said to have been drunk, ran into the Oldsmobile coach of Denver Painter, parked in front of his home, 1641 Sullivant avenue, last Monday evening and bent the rear bumper, then to make a quick getaway, a woman seeming to be more sober than the rest, slid over to the steering wheel to back out and pull away before being caught, but in her haste neglected to close the door of their machine before starting forward. The door caught Painter's fender and nearly broke itself off, doing damage to the fender of Painter's machine. The parties succeeding in getting away, however.

NOTICE

Of the Meeting of The Hilltop Business Men's Association Thursday Evening.

Owing to the misfortune of an error in the notice of the date of our last meeting, the Association will hold a special meeting in the men's parlor of the Hillcrest Baptist church on September 10 at 8:00 p. m. sharp. There is some very important and interesting business matters to be taken up and acted upon at this meeting and it is the duty of every active business man on the Hilltop who is interested in his business and the community to be present at this meeting. Come out and show your loyalty by getting behind those that are working for the community. Let's show the community that there are enough live, active business men on the Hilltop to support an organization that will work for their interests. The men's parlor is the coolest place on the Hilltop these hot nights. If in doubt come out and prove for yourself also benefit by the discussions. (signed) President

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

The "Onward Christian Soldier" game might be over, but most of you have been "soldiering." Instead of breathing the tune like this:

Onward Christian soldier
Marching as to war; etc.

You do it this way:

On ——— sol ———
Mar ——— war ———;

But you say: what do those lines mean?

It means that you inhale at "On" and then simply hold your breath till time to begin to exhale on "sol," and the same on "Mar" and "war," etc.

There is little to be gained by holding the breath; the important act is to keep on inhaling until time to exhale—that is deep breathing. Then continuing to exhale until time to inhale.

The oxygen you inhale you must have; so "git a plenty while you're a gittin." And the poison in your blood and lungs can get out, only by the breath; therefore, push it all out if possible by exhaling. The greater the inhalation, the more oxygen (life); the greater the exhalation, the more poison (death) is discarded.

Work at this, as you should, 24 hours each day, and be immune from

Place the merest needle point of blood, from a healthy person, on a transparent "slide" (in a microscope); and against it, a small patch containing tubercular or other germs, and see through the lens what happens. You will see hundreds—perhaps thousands—of healthy corpuscles having a knock-down-and-drag-out fist battle against as many disease germs in which the weaker side must succumb to the stronger.

Multiply these few corpuscles by the billions of them in your body-blood, and feel and know that they are your army of defense, which is constantly bombarding the enemy and you will see reason enough why you should always cultivate vitality, as you would feed and care for an army of soldiers. Low vitality against disease germs means failure—degeneration and inevitable death. Good, strong vitality as surely means victory.

If tubercular germs are in the air in great numbers, as they are known to be; and if we inhale them daily, and perhaps hourly, into our lungs, as we are supposed to do, then ar ewe, all of us, tubercular? Yes, if they gain a footing; but possibly not hopelessly so. A robber is looking for unprotected property which he may steal, but he will not attempt to pass the guards. So, the deadly germs are looking for unhealthy tissue—unguarded by good blood—where they may germinate and be reproduced with wonderful rapidity. If they find such patches, those places are immediately infected and that person is tubercular. The rapid or slow progress of the infection will depend, as has been said, upon the vitality of the individual. It may be so slow and insidious as not to be observed for years, or it may be "quick consumption," which is the same as is the slower sort, except that the patient has so little resistance (vitality) that the germs quickly get a footing and win out against the weakened blood corpuscles.

The thoughtful reader will readily see abundant reason for always breathing pure air, and much of it, which, because of its purity, is likely to be avoided by the germs. And, above all things, we should avoid breathing the breath of another—no matter how healthy, for, unbeknown to that person, his outgoing breath may contain tubercular germs which did not find a welcome in his lungs, but may find congenial quarters in yours. This would be "catching" tuberculosis from a healthy person, which is entirely possible, however paradoxical it may seem.

The problem, then, becomes one of vitality, which is of interest to us all. Its requirement is like the accumulation of property—often very slow, but it is a habit to be persistently followed. Our vitality up to date, like our credit at the bank, will serve us well sometimes, and not only to knock out tubercular germs but to fortify us against pneumonia and other infections and in the every day struggle for maintenance and supremacy.

Dr. O. E. McFadon, Osteopath, 106 W. 10th Ave. Un. 7904-W. Residence Saturday mornings.

AUGUST BREAKS PERMITS RECORD

Total Estimated Values of Promits Issued During Month Is $5,328,000.

Taking into consideration the value of permits issued by the city building department, the month of August broke all records for a single month.

Six hundred and eighty-six permits were issued during the month, with total estimated value of $5,328,000. Last year the August permits totaled 46 permits, with a valuation of $1,457,90 The July record came near totaling the number issued for August, but the valuation was about one-half.

The largest permit ever issued in the city, that of the A. I. U. building with a valuation of $2,500,000, boosted the August valuation.

Permits for 209 dwellings and 29 garages were among the permits of last month, while in August, 1924, 128 permits for dwellings and 200 garages were issued.

New fall dresses and coats coming in daily at Seiller's.

YOUR Last Name

IS IT WARREN;

The simplest explanation of the name Warren is that it first belonged to a dweller at or keeper of a game preserve, warren being still used in this connection today.

However, there are others who contend that it, like Waring, Wearing and Warin, is derived from the French Guarin or Guerin. It is suggested that Guerin, the French name, was in turn derived from the German Warand, meaning protection.

The first of the name in this country was Richard Warren, who sailed from Plymouth in the Mayflower in 1620. He was not of the Leydon party but joined the little band of colonists off the coast of England. The fact that he was one of the few of the party designated as "Mr." indicates that he was a person of good birth. He was one of the third exploring party when the colonists arrived in New England, and was with them when they were surprised by the Indians.

He was spoken of as "grave Richard Warren," also as "a man of integrity, justice and uprightness, of piety and serious religion."

Richard Warren married in England a woman named Elisabeth, who came to this country a few years after her husband in the "Abb." She was a person of much distinction and was referred to always as "Mistress Warren," a mark of great respect.

After her husband's death she never remarried and this is pointed out as one of the rare instances of continued widowhood to be found in the New England colonies at that time. Richard Warren had five daughters and then two sons to carry on the traditions and name of the Warren family.

As the Years Roll On

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

Do you ever pause a moment
In the journey of the day
Just to rest your faithful team-mate
From her toiling on the way?
Do you pull a little harder
Than you really need to do
Just to make the burden lighter
For the one who's helping you?

When she finds a duty irksome,
Do you come to her relief?
Do you speak a word of comfort
When her heart is torn with grief?
Do you often say "I love you"?
Do you try to cheer your wife?
Do you give her little joy-rides
Down the happy side of life?

Do you set aside your business
For a moment or a day
And refresh her drooping spirits
In a breath of care-free play?
Are you making good those pledges
That your sweetheart can't forget?
Are you certain that her future
Will be free from all regret?

The California redwood trees are among the oldest living things in the world. Naturalists say that the wood of the fallen redwood trees may remain sound for hundreds of years. Recently there was discovered in Humboldt county, California, a fallen redwood about 10 feet in diameter at the butt and 186 feet long, upon whose prone trunk there are growing 11 trees. The roots of these trees find their way to the ground on either side of the trunk of the redwood. One of them, a hemlock 25 inches in diameter, is 180 years old. Borings into the redwood show the tree as sound as the day it fell, 300 years ago or more. A ring count gives the tree's age at about 600 years when its fall occurred.

HEALTH OFFICIAL ISSUES WARNING

Dr. H. M. Platter, supervisor of health and hygiene in Columbus public schools, Saturday warned public school principals to keep the city schools free from communicable diseases.

"Parents should be urged to have their children vaccinated. This will prevent smallpox," said Dr. Platter. "Toxin-antitoxin will prevent diphtheria. These treatments should be given by family physicians," he said.

There are at present three cases of scarlet fever, one of smallpox and three cases of diphtheria under quarantine.

OLD PIONEER DAYS

Before there were any mill dams or obstructions on the Scioto river, travel by canoe was carried on quite extensively by persons traversing the Scioto valley. Many families and immigrants availed themselves of the transport by canoes and pirogues to reach Piketon, Chillicothe, Circleville and other places along that stream. First settlers in the town of Franklinton came in canoes.

In the summer and fall of 1797, Lucas Sullivant laid out the town of Franklinton, which was on quite a liberal scale. He believed that, situated as it was in a region of land unparalleled for fertility, and on a then navigable river and so near the center of the state, if it did not become the actual capital of the state, it would be close to it and the great tide of western immigration would pass through it, and so it was likely to become a great center in the progress of the state and consequently he had great expectations of the new town.

Before the day appointed for the sale of the lots, however, there came the great flood of 1798, in which the bottoms and low grounds surrounding the town were overflowed and the plan of the town was reduced and made to conform in limits to the higher ground, which is now in the region of Sandusky and Broad streets. In the town on one whole street, called Gift street on the map, lots were laid off and offered gratituitously to those who within a certain time, would build on them. Lucas Sullivant built the first brick house in the country there, and it was there that his children were born and where he lived till the day of his death.

At the time Mr. Sullivant laid out his town, our political position was in the Northwest Territory, and it was not until some years after that Ohio was elevated to the dignity of a state, and then we fell within the territory and jurisdiction of Ross county, for not until the winter of 1803-4 was Franklin county laid off with a territory extending north to the Indian boundary line established by General Wayne after his victory over the Indians, and commonly known as the Greenville treaty line. Franklin county then included a territory comprising in whole or part of what afterwards became the counties of Pickaway, Fairfield, Licking, Delaware, Marion, Logan, Union, Champaign, Clark and Madison.

In this new county of Franklin, Mr. Sullivant was appointed the first clerk of the courts.

On January 18, 1804, it was "ordered that there be a jail built for the use of this county on the following plan: Of logs 12 feet long and 18 inches in diameter, with two sides hewed so as to make a face of eight inches, to be let down dovetailing, so as to make the logs fit close together; to be seven feet at least between the lower and upper floor, which floor is to be of timbers of like thickness, with three sides hewed so as to let them lie entirely close and be smooth on the face of the lower floor, and the upper floor to show an even face in like manner on the lower side, and to have two rounds of logs at least, of like timbers, above the upper floor; then to have a cabin roof." [illegible]

A cabin roof was one made of clapboards, or large rude shingles, some four feet long, six or eight inches wide, split by hand out of logs. These shingles were not nailed on, but were kept in place by heavy poles laid across them.

The shingles were "to be put on, a door cut out two feet, eight inches wide, and prepared in a workmanlike manner, to hang the shutter of the door, which shutter is to be made in a strong and sufficient and workmanlike manner of plank two inches thick. There are to be two windows, 8x10 inches wide made in said prison house, which windows are to be secured by two bars of iron one inch square, sufficiently let in, in each window, the corners clearly sawed or cut down."

It appears that Lucas Sullivant superintended the construction of this jail, for at the court session of March 24, 1804, it was "ordered that there be paid out of the county treasury to Lucas Sullivant, $80, for building the jail in Franklinton for this county."

The first prison was not of long duration, for it was not a great while before it was burned down.

William Sullivant, in writing of this jail, states that, "I cannot of my own knowledge or from any of the county records which I have examined, assert that a whipping post and stocks were used in connection with this jail, but there was such a tradition in my boyhood, when the site of this prison was pointed out to me."

AUGUST BREAKS ANOTHER RECORD

August seems to have been the month of records for Columbus and Franklin county. The latest record given out is that of the sale of automobiles in Franklin county which numbered 5723, both new and used, for the month, of which 1193 were new cars.

There were 686 sworn statements of ownership filed and collections in the automobile department amounted to $1557.85.

August collections last year amounted to $1248.70, and there were only 1000 new cars sold, 530 sworn statements of ownership filed and 4674 new and used cars exchanged hands.

AN HOUR IN THE CITY OF THE DEAD.

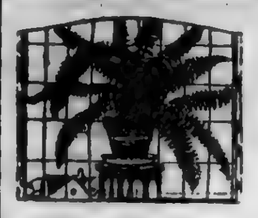
The cemetery was so quiet; no one in mourning garb and tearful eyes lingering on neighboring lots, not a caretaker to be seen, no sound of the tolling bell to open heart wounds afresh, no sign of life around me, save now and then the plaintive chirp of a little brown bird (perhaps lost from its mate) in the maple, whose friendly branches overshadowed the sacred spot.

I knelt by the graves of husband and son, arranging the flowers I'd so carefully tended, with my own hands, in basket and vase.

The fragrance of sweetpeas, pinks and lillies, perfumed the air and precious memories of my dear ones surged through my soul. Both had been so kind, and life with them through many years so happy and joyous—without them everything so changed. Tears mingled with the flowers, and a sob I could not suppress broke the painful silence.

Then suddenly from some hidden recess in memory's gallery, came the echo of a tender voice, saying, "Mother be happy, the winter will soon pass away."

These were my boy's last words to me, as he bid me goodby on the train that carried me to the southland, but e're I could return, his great loving heart had ceased to beat, and cheery voice was hushed in death.



As I knelt there the "river between" grew so narrow—the vail, that hid them from my eyes, so thin, and the glorious hope of immortality so bright—and the Christ who is the "resurrection and the life" so near, that my soul mounted up on wings. It was a sacred hour.

M. M. Marshall.

It costs one and seven tenths cents to print a dollar bill and it has a very short life. A silver dollar can be minted for one cent and its last indefinitely. This is one of the reasons for the government's desire to put the metal coin into circulation. It is estimated that 40,000,000 silver dollars replacing that many paper bills, would save the government $1,000,000 a year.

The department of agriculture, which is one of the largest departments of our government, with more than 5000 employes in Washington, is to have a new building. A beginning of this building was made in Roosevelt's administration, when two wings were built and stand today unconnected. According to the present plans the structure when finished will be the handsomest departmental building in Washington.

The United States weather bureau reports that hailstones larger than a man's fist and weighing more than a pound have been seen from time to time. During a storm in Natal in 1874, hailstones that weighed a pound and a half passed through a corrugated iron roof with as much ease as they would have passed through paper. At Canorla, Spain, in 1888, houses were battered by hailstones which are reported to have weighed four and a half pounds.

Herr Folkee, the famous Dutch aviator, has built a new monoplane that is much safer than any other plane now in use. He has been able to produce a plane that has very slight tendency to nose dive foremost when the power is suddenly shut off. A Worthwhile Afternoon for anyone who plans to buy or build a home

A HOME represents the biggest and most important outlay of money a family ever makes. And, unlike automobiles and clothes, it does not wear out—if you are careful what house you buy or build, and where that house is located.

Before deciding what you want you'll talk to an architect or builder, maybe both. You'll read articles, advertisements, books and pamphlets. You'll look at plans, specifications, houses, building sites and prices. But how many people will you talk to who have actually bought lots and built homes within the past two years?

Here is a common-sense and definite suggestion. Go out to Broadview where the million-dollar development of the Hilltop began two years ago. There are 150 families there who have bought or built since 1923. Take a few hours to study their homes, of every size and style. See what your ideas really look like in actual brick, wood, stucco and stone.

Stop at any house that interests you. Broadview people are neighborly. They are interested and glad to help other people who are planning homes like theirs. Ask them questions. They will be glad to tell you their practical experience with different building materials, with plumbing and lighting fixtures, with kitchen equipment, with heating by oil and steam and coal. They will tell you about costs, about lawn planting, about the many things they have learned by becoming home-owners—experience that is up-to-date, practical and of priceless value to you.

You, too, may want to live in this beautiful, clean, prideful neighborhood which so many others have chosen. There are building sites available with plenty of trees and rolling ground—and at prices of around $900. They are the finest on the whole Hilltop.

But you are under no obligation. Heed & Holton and the people of Broadview will be glad to have you feel under no obligation. We are satisfied that every home built in a self respecting neighborhood, and every citizen who becomes a home-owner, contributes to the prosperity and progress of Columbus.

Here, then, is actual practice to help your theories and ideas. You can drive out here in 15 minutes. It will be a wonderful experience—and when you own that home you are planning you will know that it is the best investment and the greatest happiness in all your life.

Broadview extends south from West Broad street. Well within the city limits it is the closest to High street of all the marvelous development on the high, healthy, fast-growing Hilltop.

CHARLES BLEVINS CRUSHED TO DEATH

By Being Caught Between Two Cars While Doing Switch Duty.

Charles L. Blevins, 64 North Harris avenue, a freight conductor on the T. & O. C. railroad, was killed while on duty last Monday afternoon.

Mr. Blevins, it is said, was riding on the side of a car being switched onto another track, and as his car approached the switch he was struck by another car standing too close to allow a clearance of his body.

The accident happened about 1:30 Monday afternoon. He was rushed to Grant hospital, where he died about 4 o'clock. It was found that he had 12 ribs broken, also his right leg, shoulder blade and collar bone were broken and he was badly cut about the head and body.

He had been a railroader all his life and had been employed by the T. & O. C. railroad for the past six years. Although having the seniority as a conductor he was doing work as a temporary brakeman, working at the time of his death with a crew in the yards of the American Rolling Mills Co.

Mr. Blevins was 49 years old age and came to Columbus from Indiana. Besides his widow, Mrs. Grace L. Blevins, he is survived by two sons, Lee Roy of Chicago, and John S. of Columbus; a daughter, Mrs. Helen Carter, Seymour, Ind.; his parents and two sisters in Aurora, Ind.; one sister in Cincinnati, and a granddaughter. He was a member of Crestview lodge, K. of P., West Gate lodge, F. & A. M. and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

The funeral services were held at West Gate Temple Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Burial was made in Green Lawn cemetery by C. J. Kohn.

NORTH HARRIS AVENUE PAVING

Protested By Property Owners Who Want Asphalt Instead of Brick.

Property owners on North Harris avenue are very indignant at City Service Director Duffy on account of the way matters are going in regards to paving the north end of that street.

A petition to improve the street from Steele avenue north to the railroad with asphalt was granted by council some time ago, and arrangements made to proceed with the work. But it is said Service Director Duffy has let the contract for paving with brick. A protest was made by the property owners concerned, but to no avail.

On Tuesday evening, Sept. 8, property owners on that street attended council meeting in a body and protested about the matter, and council that night went on record as favoring asphalt. It was then taken up with Duffy again, so it is said, but he absolutely refused to grant a change from brick to asphalt, and seemed to give the property owners and their representative, Attorney Yaw, no consideration in the matter.

As Mayor Thomas has been out of the city for some time, but has now returned, a committee representing the property owners of that street, consisting of Messrs. Bender, Richert, Warner, Murath, Matthews and Jones waited on him Wednesday afternoon, stating their grievance. After hearing a statement of the case the mayor informed the committee that after a conference with Director Duffy, Thursday, he would try and give a decision in the matter.

It is claimed that the paving with rick will cost each property owner bout $100 more than paving with asphalt, and we are told that 98 per ent of the signers want asphalt.

RECOMMENDS NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM

Duffy Would Use Boulevard Light on Broad and High Streets.

City council's street lighting program for next year includes the light of Broad street with boulevard lights from the west corporation line to the east line, also High street for the entire length.

At a committee session last Friday council unanimously approved the recommendations of Service Director Duffy, which calls for the boulevard lighting system of these two streets.

The lights would be placed on both sides of the streets, beginning at the corporation lines, 200 feet apart, in a staggering position, making the lights 100 feet apart on opposite sides of the street.

The standards would be 12 feet high with lights of 600 candlepower and would be increased by zones until at Broad and High the standards would be placed 100 feet apart on opposite sides of the street and carry two lights of 1500 candlepower each.

Under Duffy's recommendation the city would stand 20 per cent of the cost of erection and the property owners 80 per cent.

As yet no trace has been found of Harold Livingston, 21, 310 Nasboba avenue, who abandoned a Clark Baking truck in Linden and disappeared Monday. The truck was found on Cleveland avenue near Manhattan.

Livingston, who is married, had been employed at the Livingston Seed farms, north of the city, all summer. He took the job with the baking company as driver last week.

The first regular meeting of the West Broad P.-T. A. will be in the form of a birthday party as the school will celebrate its fourteenth birthday on Saturday, Sept. 19. The meeting will be held Friday afternoon, Sept. 18, at 3 o'clock.

There will be a short business meeting followed by a specially prepared program. All parents are asked to be present.

SOME JOY RIDE

Perfect contentment was registered on the countenances of five colored people in a dilapidated Ford touring car (or what was left of it) as they traveled east on Broad street in the broiling hot sun one day last week at about the noon hour.

The machine was minus its top, the upholstering from the back was being scattered along the wayside, scarcely any paint, two flat tires were in evidence on the two rear wheels, and an alarm clock was hung very prominently on the left side of the car, with its face to the rear.

Nevertheless they were "motoring."

Group four of the Ladies Aid society of Glenwood M. E. church will meet Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 22, at the home of Mrs. Fry., 2624 West Broad street.

George Harris (who said "Johnny Green," when we asked his name), of South Park avenue, has returned from a "vacation" fishing trip up in Michigan. He says the only thing he caught was a six-pounder, and he had to "buy that."

Arthur Sands, 2015 Fairmont avenue, was taken suddenly ill with appendicitis last week. He was taken to Grant hospital and operated on Sept. 10. He is reported as recovering as well as could be expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude J. Hall, 18 South Burgess avenue, returned Tuesday from Ann Arbor, Mich., where they were called last week to attend the funeral of Mr. Hall's sister, Mrs. Walter Shenck. Prior to her marriage Mrs. Shenck was a resident of this city and was for several years connected with the office of the F. & R. Lazarus Co.

Keeping ever abreast of the times, Ray G. Haunts has installed in his grocery at Hague and Broad, an up-to-date machine for making mayonnaise, Thousand Island dressing, sandwich spreads and relishes, thus giving him a product that will be fresh at all times and in many cases superior to that often offered to the public.

Slyh, 254 North Harris avenue, passed the examination recently given by the Ohio state board of funeral directors, which grants him a license to practice embalming and funeral directing in the state of Ohio. He is a graduate of the Columbus Training School for Embalmers conducted by Dr. E. C. Buck of Ohio State university. Before You Buy or Build Spend an afternoon in Broadview; study its 120 new homes; talk to their owners who have had actual experience with houses as they are being built today!

When you plan to own a home, the only practical thing to do is to benefit by the experience of others. Think what a help it will be to study 120 different houses of every size and description, all built within the past two years, and to talk with people just like yourself who have had the actual experience of buying and building!

In Broadview, where the million dollar development of the Hilltop began in 1923, you can learn first-hand about the thousand and one things which go into the modern home. Broadview people are interested in home-owners, glad to help others who are planning to buy or build homes like theirs. They will willingly give you the benefit of their experience—up-to-date, practical, of priceless value to you.

After seeing Broadview you may choose one of its fine sites, on rolling ground, among green trees, which are available for around $900. But that is entirely up to you. Heed & Holton and the people of Broadview welcome a prospective home-owner, for any part of Columbus as well as Broadview, as an asset to their city.

You can drive out here in 15 minutes or take a West Broad street car. Broadview extends south from West Broad street. Well within city limits it is the closest to High street of all the marvelous development on the Hilltop. Improvements, schools, churches and rapid transportation downtown.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. R. McFADON

MORE OF THE SAME.

We have made some progress with "Onward Christian Soldier," but it will prove of very little use until we "Onward Christian Soldier" all the time. Not that we should give our entire time and attention to it, but that it should become such a part of our breathing as to seem as natural and automatic as in our ordinary breathing, which requires no special attention.

The "Onward Christian Soldier" part is a sort of scaffolding to be discarded when no longer useful, but until we cease to forget the deeper breathing that it promotes, it will be useful to us. I practice it daily as I walk and find the steps taken and the tune breathed, useful in enlarging my lung capacity, which means better blood and thereby greater vitality and resisting power.

Several formulae have been given, but here is the best, all around comprehensive formula, which all people, of all ages, can make good use of, all the time—especially when walking.

Inhale
On-ward Christian
1 2 3 4
Exhale
Sol - dier;
1 2 3 4
Mar ching as to 1 2 3 4
war.

Inhaling on the black-face words, and exhaling on the others, and pulling in or pushing out as much air on "4" as on "1".

Now I imagine I hear some shallow, superficial, person saying: "Oh, that's old stuff. We've had that for a month." Yes, and I gave you fair warning that I meant to keep it up till Christmas, and in doing it, I am but judging all who read this by myself, for I find myself short breathing sometimes, and when I discover it the best thing to do is to "Onward Christian Soldier." And don't forget to move as much air on 4 as on 1. Inhale to the limit, and exhale to the limit, and thus avoid COLDS.

A cold is a much more serious matter than most people suppose. Some colds "id the 'ead" are purely from infection and should be treated locally; but most colds are an evidence that the poisons within the body (which are constantly forming) are not being excreted normally. It is estimated that one-third of the body poison should pass out through the skin. This emphasizes the importance of an active, healthy skin, with open pores and fixes the value of the bath as a health measure.

Another third of such poison is supposed to pass out with the outgoing breath. We all know how different are our inhalations (supposed to be pure air) and our exhalations (which we know to be very impure. The effect of this exchange, upon the blood, is so immediate and so great that the benefits of deepbreathing are apparent. It is a sad fact that but few people use, actively, more than one-tenth their lung capacity. The remaining third of the poison is excreted by the bowels and kidneys. The food being the great source of poison, it is evident that any excess of food should be avoided. (And who isn't guilty?)

If a cold is caused by the over accumulation of poison, then the rational cure is by elimination of those poisons by the only four methods, namely: (1) through the pores of the skin, (2) by the breath and (3) by the bowels and kidneys, the discontinuance of any of which would soon cause death.

Summarized, then, the rational cure for a cold implies: (1) frequent bathing and treatment of the skin, (2) deep breathing of pure air and (3) abstemious eating.

"But," you say, "Feed a cold and starve a fever." And thereby hangs a tale. Never was a slogan so misunderstood as that. The original precept was, most likely, "If you feed a cold, you will have a fever to starve," for that is the fact. Nothing could be worse for a cold than to overeat, or to eat as much as would otherwise be normal. Fasting, in connection with bathing and deep breathing would be infinitely better. More food means more poison, and "too much poison" is the basis of most our ills—especially colds and fevers. "Keep on a keepin' on" with "Onward Christian Soldier," and avoid taking cold.

NEW TEACHERS MUST REPORT

All teachers, supervisors and principals in the Columbus public schools, whose certificates expire before Feb. 1, 1926, and all new teachers assigned Sept. 8, 1925, must report to Mrs. Ida L. Truax, secretary to Superintendent Collicott, in the school office before Sept. 18, for certification.

"This is very important because salaries can be legally paid only to those principals, supervisors and teachers whose certificates are in force and properly recorded in the school office," said Superintendent Collicott.

We believe a word of appreciation is due our friends who have been so kind as to send us news items, and we take this opportunity to thank those who are so materially aiding us in making the Record a better community paper, and assure them we will be just as appreciative of their future help. We believe the Record is the best community paper in the city and with your help we can make it still better.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

GIVE ENCOURAGEMENT

A word of encouragement in the dark hour is often followed by a ray of sunshine that lights up a human soul until the end of time!

And how little does the helpful word cost the giver!

Look at the burden-bearers passing you, dust-covered, sad-eyed and weary, trudging through the cold and the heat, conscious only of their aching backs, tired feet and breaking hearts.

Give them a smile as you meet them. See their countenance brighten and their feet step more lightly as they catch the meaning of your lips and know it is meant for them.

Encouragement makes people believe in immorality because it opens up new visions that reveals vistas and sensations never before seen or experienced.

It stirs new emotions, strikes new chords of music, give new hue to the sky, and awakens thoughts which have been lying dormant in discouraged hearts since they first began to beat.

Instead of censuring the being who has made a mistake, give him or her a kindly word of cheer. Treat him or her as you would like to be treated when your soul is filled with doubt and sorrowing.

Forget the great weighty sermons, the thread-worn parable of advice and conjure up a dainty little posy of encouragement and note how eagerly it will be accepted, sometimes with a twitching of the lips, a trembling, grateful hand and a happy tear.

Try it today on some of the human wrecks you may meet, scuffling along, groping in a dismal world of whose horrors you know nothing and habitually shun as you would a pestilence.

And after you have tried it, look into your own soul and see the new light that has been born there to cheer you in the silent night when you are alone.

A little more friendly intimacy with one another, a few more benevolent smiles, a trifling bit of consolation and a few small words of encouragement scattered here and there as you go along the beaten pathway would in a generation lighten sorrowing hearts, make the world brighter and better and possibly move it closer to heaven!

The United States and Canada have reached an agreement which plans for the concerted action of the two countries in improving the channel of the St. Lawrence River between Montreal and Lake Ontario. This it is hoped will permit transatlantic ships to enter the Great Lakes, and at the same time will furnish increased water power to both Canada and the United States. Engineers will study the situation in order to find the most advantageous method of procedure. It is roughly estimated that the proposed improvement will cost $300,000,000.

THE CHIEF WHO KNEW LIVINGSTONE

In the time of David Livingstone, the place which is now a prosperous Malamulo mission was part of a great tract of land owned and ruled by Maguire, a native chief who lived on the banks of the river Shire, in British Central Africa. Maguire is now dead, but one of his under chiefs Kasonga, recently lived in his village on the mission estate. He is one of the few old men who have responded to the call of the white man's religion and been received into the full fellowship of the church.

Standing with Kasonga in front of the church building, on the very spot where Dr. Livingstone, on his first trip into the country, camped and held a council with the chiefs of the district, an American missionary recently listened with deepest interest to the story of the coming of the first white man into the land.

The arrival of Dr. Livingstone, bringing with him the mtengo wabwino (good message), and demonstrating in his life the love of God, gave to the natives a view of a character totally new to them, making it necessary for them to adopt a new word to describe this wonderful white man.

He seemed so like a god to them that they gave him the name of Maungu, similar to Mulungu, their name for God. Although that pioneer of African missionaries has been followed by white men whose characters have fallen far short of his, yet the same name still holds good for every white man who enters the country.

Livingstone passed down the hill from his camp, crossed a little river, and continued his journey to the place now called Blantyre. His heart would have been made glad could he have foreseen the future of that little stream. Because of the many baptisms that have been performed in its waters, it has been named by the Christian natives "the Jordan."

The Malamulo estate, high up in the Shire hills, is bountifully watered and wooded. It was purchased from the native chief by a German planter, for a few yards of red cloth. This planter built the strong fireburned brick house now occupied by the mission superintendent. He also built a great coffee storehouse, which an American missionary converted into a spacious dwelling house.

Later this estate was bought from the planter, and became the center of a most thriving mission. Not only is a training school maintained here, but many out schools are carried on in surrounding native villages.

One hundred miles to the north, a large out school forms the center of another circle of schools, so that many thousand natives in this region where Livingstone pioneered now enjoy the light of the blessed gospel, which is slowly but surely dispelling the heathen darkness of central Africa.—Jean M. Beeman, in Forward.

OLD PIONEER DAYS

In the latter part of the year 1805 there came to Franklinton a young missionary of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States, who had been commissioned to the "State of Ohio and the parts adjacent thereto." If we remember the great extent of territory included in this Bishopric of the missionary, we will obtain some idea of how little was understood, even in our own country, of that vast and vague region so long known as "The West," but then confined to the region betwixt the Alleghanies and the Mississippi, for all beyond was really the "unknown." The young missionary was well received by the dwellers in the wilderness, and on February 8, 1806, the First Presbyterian church, and indeed the first church of any denomination in this region, was organized with 15 members, of which Mrs. Sullivant, wife of Lucas Sullivant, was one.

This young man was the Rev. James Hoge, and his labors were so acceptable that on the 25th of September, 1807, the congregation gave him a formal call to become their pastor. The request was acceded to, and the one congregation had the one pastor for over 50 years.

As a matter of curiosity and to show the contrast of the early times with the present, a copy of that call, which was in Lucas Sullivant's handwriting, is here inserted:

"The congregation of Franklinton, being on sufficient grounds, well satisfied of the ministerial qualifications of you, James Hoge, and having good hopes from our past experience of your labors, that your ministrations in the gospel will be profitable to our spiritual interests, do earnestly call and desire you to undertake the pastoral office in said congregation promising you, in the discharge of your duty, all proper support, encouragement and obedience in the Lord; and that you may be free from worldly cares and avocations, we hereby promise and oblige ourselves to pay to you the sum of $300 in half yearly payments, annually, for three-fourths of your time until we find ourselves able to give you a compensation for the whole of your time, in like proportion, during the time of your being and continuing the regular pastor of the church.

"In testimony whereof, we have respectively subscribed our names this 25th day of September, Anno Domini 1807.

"Robert Culbertson and Wm. Reed elders.

"Joseph Dickson, John Dill, David Nelson, William Domigan, Joseph Hunter and Lucas Sullivant, trustees."

That this call was prepared and forwarded for Mr. Hoge with the knowledge and at the earnest request of the whole congregation of Franklinton, is attested by Robert G. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson was the minister called to assist the congregation in such cases, according to the Presbyterian forms.

In the JUNGLE

With Cheerups and the Quixies

by Grace Bliss Stewart

HER SWEET TOOTH

"I believe there is a traveling circus coming, boys," cried Cheerups one lazy afternoon. "Here are the acrobats, as sure as I live! Look, Brighteyes; don't you see them?"

"Oh, yes, sir," piped Brighteyes; "and aren't they funny? If they didn't tumble about so, I'd say they were old ladies wearing gray waists and black skirts."

Just at that time two small gray and black animals trotted up in single file, stopped right in front of Cheerups and turned head over heels one after the other. Then they picked themselves up and said coolly, as if nothing unusual had happened, "Good afternoon, Mr.

Cheerups; we rolled over to see you for a few minutes and inquire after your health."

"Now that was nice of you, to be sure," replied Cheerups. "I am quite well, thank you; and you are, too, I should judge, from the excercise you have been taking today."

"Oh, yes; Mrs. Ratel and I are feeling splendidly," said one of the little black and gray visitors. "We did enjoy our tumble through the Jungle. It would have been quite perfect if it hadn't been for one thing which upset Mrs. Ratel a little. I won't go as far as to say it spoiled our day, but it was upsetting."

"So these are the Ratels I have heard about," thought Cheerups to himself. "What was it which bothered you on your way over, Mr. Ratel? Do please tell us," then said he cordially. "If it's any kind of adventure, we are just ready, aren't we, Quixie Boys?

These are my friends—Brighteyes, Quickear, Softfoot and Sniffsniff."

"Well, you see, sir, Mrs. Ratel is very fond of sweets which those busy creatures called bees have a way of storing up in their nests. Isn't that true, Honey? I call her Honey just as a joke, sir."

"Yes, I must admit my failing," murmured Mrs. Ratel shyly. "But you know that honey is very good, and you like it, too."

"So I do, so I do, my dear," said Mr Ratel good-naturedly. "Well, as we were coming along, Mrs. Ratel spied a bees' nest and she could hardly get by. she did want that honey so much; but it was a very large nest and I was afraid to have her tear it open. She was sure to be stung and have a swollen nose, and really, sir, a swollen nose when you are going to make a first call isn't the thing at all. I'm sure you will agree with that. A swollen nose, indeed!" spluttered Mr. Ratel indignantly. "So I persuaded her not to touch the bees' nest."

"You just said that I mustn't," replied Honey in a small voice, "if that's what you call persuading."

"So here we are, sir," cried Mr Ratel, paying no attention to what Honey had said. "But I know that neither of us will be able to resist that nest if we take the same way home. You see what a problem it is, sir."

"But I don't know why you should be afraid of bees," said Cheerups. "You belong to the Badger family, don't you?"

"Oh, yes," chimed the two Ratels in chorus. "We are Badgers and proud of it. There are just two branches of Ratels: one lives in India and the other here in Africa."

"As I was saying, then," resumed Cheerups, "you don't need to be afraid of those bees. There isn't a bee in the world that could sting through three such heavy coats as you have on. First comes your thick coat of fur, then one of loose skin and then a layer of fat. You are really wearing your overcoat, raincoat and sweater all at once."

Hadn't we better be going my dear?" gurgled Mrs. Ratel gleefully. "I can hardly wait to be off," and she squirmed with delight at the thought of the sweets that were awaiting her on the way home.

"Good-by, Mr. Cheerups," called Mr. Ratel. We'll bring you some honey one of these days," and with a parting somersault the two little visitors started down the Winding Way.

"Remember not to hurt the bees, and don't take all the honey," called Cheerups after them.

"We'll try not to," came two faint voices through the warm afternoon air.

HARRIS AVENUE STREET PAVING

Property Owners Seem to Be Getting Worst End of Affair.

About a year ago the property owners of North Harris Ave., from Steele avenue to the railroad, petitioned city council to have that section of the street paved with asphalt, 90 per cent of the residents signing the petition.

Recently city council passed a resolution ordering bids be advertised for paving this section with either asphalt or brick. The property owners had two weeks to file objections. In less than a week the property owners had a petition, signed by fully 90 per cent of the residents of the street, protesting the paving of the street with brick and petitioning for asphalt.

On the last of August it was learned that the contract for paving the street with brick had been let to B. J. Dienst.

Then, it is said, a protest was made to City Engineer Simpson and Service Director Duffy, but they received little consideration from Duffy in the matter and is reported as saying that the contract was for brick and had to be brick, and threw their petition into the waste basket, stating that he would pay no further attention to it. He argued that North Harris was a dead end street and must be paved with brick, as asphalt needed a great deal of traffic in order to keep it alive.

We are told that council on being waited upon by a committee from the street, Sept. 8, recommended that Duffy rescind the brick contract and give asphalt, but he refused.

The committee and their attorney then went to Mayor Thomas, who informed them that he thought they should have asphalt, but after consulting with Duffy he was helpless to assist them.

A delegation of about 20 residents, with their attorney, waited on city council again last Monday night, but report as receiving only disappointment in the matter. Councilman Lewis brought the matter up and asked that those property owners be granted what they wanted in the matter of paving their street, but council turned them down. Mr. Heston is reported as saying that he did not see what right that delegation had to bother them in the matter.

Therefore the residents of that section of the street are very indignant, not only at Director Duffy, but also at certain members of council for the attitude that body has taken in the matter.

It is said that the paving of the street with brick will cost each lot owner from $100 to $110 more than it would cost to pave the street with asphalt.

Teachers and principals at Highland avenue school, together with their wives, husbands and families, enjoyed a picnic Wednesday evening after school. About 30 were in the party that started out from the school in machines and motored up the west side of the river several miles, where a steak fry and corn roast were enjoyed. The event was especially in honor of the new members of the faculty and a delightful time was reported by all.

HIGHLAND AVENUE SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

Complete enrollment at Highland Avenue school this year totals 847. With classes balanced satisfactorily and an efficient adjustment of necessary changes made, the third week of school finds everything running in fine shape.

Miss Ellen Van Dyke and Mr. Gosnell Lyman, physical directors, are practicing their pupils for the annual field day, which is to be held Oct. 15 at the Stadium. Plans in other departments include various dramatics and musical entertainments aside from the usual curricular activities.

Bank day, Tuesday, found the Highland pupils interested in planning to make this a real thrift year. The deposits for this first day of banking totalled $123.92, with 165 pupils depositing.

LA RUE'S GIFT SHOP AN UNIQUE AFFAIR

Entertaining patrons of the Rivoli theater and keeping interest in his "Gift Shop" at its highest point for over a year has been the record of George LaRue with his "Gift Shop" each Tuesday evening at this theater.

"LaRue's "Gift Ship" is an unique affair, by which a number of patrons of the local theater benefit each Tuesday evening by prizes which are donated by local merchants for this specific purpose.

A blanket, throw rugs, auto tubes, electric iron, tea pot, spot light and numerous other articles were pleasing gifts presented by LaRue last Tuesday evening.

However, the prizes which LaRue gives away are by no means the only attraction to his part of the program. For his talk which goes with the presentation is both entertaining and has a vein of humor pleasing to his audience.

If you have not heard LaRue in his "Gift Shop" you have not only missed a chance to participate in the valuable gifts distributed, but have also missed an interesting treat.

Courtesy Columbus Citizen

Mr. Ketcham was born in Pickaway county in 1851 and his wife was born in Ross county in 1852, although most of her life before her marriage was spent near Lockbourne.

Mr. and Mrs. Ketcham have five children living, who were present at the celebration. They are: James Ketcham of Cleveland; Mrs. Laura Mix, Massillon; Mrs. Ruth Eastep, Warren; Mrs. Marie Lane, Pataskala, and Mrs. Mabel Cramer of Columbus.

Hillcrest choir will resume active work the second Sunday in October, after a vacation period of four months. As far as can be ascertained every member will be in the organization again, with new voices on all parts. With careful study of each voice as to tone quality there is no reason why beautiful ensemble work will not be done this winter. Mr. Wilson, 104 North Eureka avenue, is taking the list of applicants to be tested, and is reporting encouraging results. The very fact that the way the present members stay by this organization speaks well for the valuable training they are receiving.

Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Benton and family and Mrs. Charles Norton, 58 Belvidere avenue, motored to Delaware last Thursday and spent the day with relatives.

Mrs. Charles Babb, 849 Midland avenue, has returned home after several weeks' stay in Cincinnati.

A LITTLE STORY THAT'S TRUE

We were told this one the other day:

After the signing of the armistice of the late war some Yanks in camp overseas had gotten together a ball team and were playing a team selected from amongst the Turks. The latter were at bat, with two men out. A big Turk took his place at bat, but before getting ready to swipe the ball, looked upward and raised his hands, calling upon "Allah" (his God) to help him hit the ball, ending up by bowing his head in a lowly manner. The pitcher then "wound up" and let loose of the ball and the Turk swung with terrific force—the umpire called "strike one." A second attempt, repeated in like manner, resulted in "strike two." Then a third time the Turk bowed so low as to almost touch the ground with his head, and tried harder than ever to hit the ball, only to hear "strike three, you're out." This retired the side.

Then the Turks took the field and the Yanks came to bat. The first batter up, a big "doughboy," took hold of his bat with his right hand, and stepping up to the plate, swung it high in the air and yelled out, "You know me, 'Al'." The Turk pitcher contorted a time or so and let loose of the ball, when bang—away went the ball over the infielders' heads and the batter never stopped till he stood safely on third base.

INTERESTING P.-T. A. MEETING

Celebrate Fourteenth Anniversary of Broad Street School.

The first regular monthly meeting of the West Broad Street P.-T. A. was held last Friday afternoon at 3 p. m. with Mrs. E. Dupuis, the newly elected president, presiding, with a very large membership in attendance.

As it was the fourteenth anniversary of the school, a very short business session was held, at which time it was decided to change the time of the afternoon meetings from 3 to 2:30 o'clock.

Mrs. E. Dupuis and Mrs. C. W. Barrell were selected as delegates to the state P.-T. A. convention which will be held at Cincinnati, Oct. 7-9 inclusive.

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. L. Earl, program chairman. Mrs. Harrison sang two P.-T. A. songs, accompanied by Mrs. Millsor. Mrs. Michel spoke on the "Relationship Between the School and Home," and Miss Bess Sperry then responded and spoke on the teacher's side of the question.

Miss Hutt told of how the school had progressed since she first came there at the opening of the building, and Miss Judd told of how hard she worked to get the building arranged for the opening and secured the few books which were available for the first day. At the opening of this building 14 years ago there were 252 children registered. Today there are 912 pupils.

The reception committee then took charge and served very dainty refreshments.

Mrs. J. D. Aker, 43 Highland avenue, is leaving today with a party of friends for St. Petersburg, Fla., stopping at Chattanooga and Jacksonville, Fla., en route.

SUCCESS OR FAILURE?

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

If you have made the weary smile,
If you have made the lonely glad,
If someone's load that someone had Seemed lighter for a little while,
If someone walked an easier mile,
Or someone better bore a grief
For words of comfort and relief
That you have said to help the sad—
Although you never found the gold
Of which you dreamed in dreams of old,
Will you the gods of luck assail
And call it failure when you fail?
Or, if the dreams you dreamed come true,
The dreams of wealth, the thoughts of pow'r,
Your name the subject of the hour,
Your house the privilege of the few,
Whatever greatness comes to you,
If none a kindness can recall,
The ones who need it most of all,
If you have brought no grave a flow'r,
No attic fire, no table food,
If you your goal alone pursued
Along a path of selfishness,
And then you won, is that success?

An automatic gun which is fired by the sun booms out the noon hour in Cintra, about 20 miles from Lisbon, Portugal. By means of convex lens arrangements, supported by a cannon, the sun's rays are concentrated at noon each day on the touch-hole of the cannon, and the gun is fired. It is not known what happens on days when the sun's face is hidden.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

Our "Onward Christian Soldier" formula was a little on the lias last week, but it shows up better this week.

Several formulae have been given but here is the best, all around comprehensive formula, which all people of all ages, can make good use of, all the time—especially when walking.

1 2 3 4 — 1 2 3 4
Left rt. left right — Left rt. left right
Inhale — Exhale
On-ward Christian Sol - dier:

Mar ching as to war .....

Inhale on the black-face words, and exhaling on the others, and pulling in or pushing out as much air on "4" as on "1".

And please don't forget that you can do this at all times, without interfering with business. You must breathe anyway and since it costs nothing, get the habit of taking more and still more air. "Git a plenty while you're a gittin." It will keep up your resistance and keep down your

High blood pressure, like jaundis, is a symptom and not a disease. It suggests to the doctor, examination of your kidneys, arteries and heart muscle. If these be found normal there is no immediate cause for alarm. These ailments creep insidiously upon "high livers," and no one past middle life should neglect occasional examination.

While low pressure is desirable, yet a sudden drop from high-pressure is more alarming than encouraging, for it means, most likely, that the heart muscle is tired out and on strike, demanding rest. Rest, a restricted diet and no stimulants are imperative as treatment. Nature can make progress with this negative treatment, but a treatment of heart stimulating medicine would be like whipping up a tired horse; it would create more speed at the further expense of vitality and perpetuation of the trouble, leading to further disaster.

The pulse to the doctor, means more than the mere rate of beat. He would sense also the volume, rythm, the pressure it will resist, and the condition of the artery walls. The arteries may be strained (causing hardening), by anxiety, worry, haste, over-eating, over-drinking or any excess or stimulant which causes over-activity of the heart. These excesses need not necessarily be great—in fact they are more often light, but a daily recurrence and a little carelessness leads, unconsciously, to serious results. It is always true that the odds are in favor of the person of regular and temperate habits and of living "the simple life."

One of the most common causes of high blood pressure is over-eating and the use of alcohol, tea, coffee and tobacco. It is thought by some that alcohol aids digestion. The thing that it does is to increase appetite, or rather to create a false, unnatural appetite, which inevitably leads to over-eating. Any excess of food—especially of the more nutritious foods (bread, meat, eggs, cheese, etc.)—is a creator of acidity and poisons, which are irritating and insidiously harmful. It is always safer to limit the intake of the idolized "nutritious foods," and eat more of fruits and vegetables. Coffee, tea and tobacco are not foods—they are stimulating drugs, and, if blood pressure is high, should be discontinued entirely. Overwork and great anxiety should be avoided. Moderation in all things should be the rule. Take your doctor's advice.

A LITTLE CHAT WITH HILLTOP BOYS AND GIRLS.

Of course you love birds. I don't mean the quarrelsome, ugly, English sparrow that destroys the lettuce and peas, and drives away our song birds, but I mean you love the meadow lark with its soft sweet love notes; the saucy, industrious robin that helps pick the cherries, tripe across our lawns, stops now and then to turn his proud head close to the ground, locating some hapless worm, which he seizes and carries to his nestlings. He sings cheerily for us late into the twilight and again before we open our eyes. Sure you love the robin. And then pretty bluejay and the redbird. The redbird is our favorite, I think. It's so pretty. The bright plumed, crown headed male is certainly beautiful—and his son so joyous, so thrilling. Well it's about the redbird I want to tell you—a brand new story—no you never heard it before, for it only happened last Sunday. You remember it was raining and Mr. Leonard parked his machine under some maple trees, on Midland avenue, in front of his home and sat down on the porch to wait until the shower was over.

By and by he noticed a little bird, on the running board. Later when he and his wife went out to drive away, Mrs. Leonard discovered that it was a young and nearly drowned redbird. She picked the little, helpless thing up, and handed it to a lady on the porch, who took it in, placed it on a folded paper in a west window, covered it with a wire strainer, and sat down to read. The little bird's eyes were half closed, its wet wings spread out and it was in a sorry plight.

After some time the lady heard a weak chirp, which grew louder and louder, and the lady fancied it was crying in bird language, "Mother, mother—come—come."

The little fellow was very much alive, so she carried him out to the porch, placed some bread crumbs within its reach, and began wondering what to do with the little creature. By and by a neighbor lady came in and as they stood in the door taking counsel together, two redbirds flew hurriedly into the trees swiftly, flitting from tree to tree and branch to branch. Presently both birds flew down on the porch and close to their imprisoned little one, and then back into the maples.

It was thought best to place the little bird up in the tree close to its nest from which it had fallen, and a kind neighbor man undertook the job, but as he reached his hand under the wire the bird eluded his grasp and flew under the flower box. At once, quick as thought, the parent birds flew down beside it. The sympathetic folk, thinking the birds better be left alone for a time, went into the house. Returning a bit later to see what they were doing, not a bird was to be seen.

Did the parent bird carry the little one away in its mouth, like the mother cat carries her kittens, or on her back like the eagle carries its young, or in her claws like the hawk carries stolen chickens. Can you tell?

At any rate they were gone, and not a chirp or a song is heard in the deserted maple.

If a parent bird so cares for its little ones, how much more does our Heavenly Father care for each one of us.

M. M. Marshall.

OLD PIONEER DAYS

Stories of the Early Days of the Pioneers of This Section. Lucas Sullivant and Party.

The want of grist-mills was severely felt by the early settlers. What few mills were in the county were distant from Franklinton and not convenient of access, and the laborious process by handmills and graters was frequently resorted to, to obtain a coarse flour and meal for hoe-cakes. The old fashioned hominy mortar constructed out of a log, was in constant requisition, the hominy pot was kept hot winter and summer, and fried hominy was no mean substitute for bread.

In 1807, Mr. Lucas Sullivant contemplated the erection of a good mill, and preparatory thereto, undertook a great work for those days. It was to dig a mill race of more than a mile in length for the mill was to be situated on the west bank of the river, at "Billy's hole." This race commenced a distance above Franklinton and passed through the bottoms and along the high ground, and required some deep cutting and elevated embankment on top of which in places the race was to be carried.

But, after much labor and the expenditure of several thousand dollars, the contractor threw up the job, and the work was reluctantly abandoned, for no other contractor would undertake to complete a work that seemed beyond the simple engineering skill of those days and the other extensive business operations of Mr. Lucas Sullivant would not permit him to give it his constant supervision, and finish it by days work.

After the removal of the Indian villages from the vicinity of Franklinton, a few stragglers, possibly from a sentiment of veneration and attachment for the graves of their fathers and the old hunting grounds, still lingered amidst the habitations of the white men, or, with greater probability, were influenced by plentiful supply of whiskey to be obtained in the village.

Billy Wyandot, as he was called by the early settlers, because he was of that tribe, had his hut on the west bank of thee river, and where he was accustomed to entertain his white visitors, and had many a drunken bout with equally thirsty souls. When a young man he discovered one day a large black bear swimming across the river at this spot. He plunged in and met him midstream, and, after a long and desperate conflict killed him with his hunting knife alone. He was very proud of this exploit, and when in his cups, he, like other heroes, was somewhat given to boasting, and loved to fight his battles over again for admiring listeners.

One winter day, having a couple of visitors at his camp, after drinking freely of liquor, he insisted upon showing them how he had killed the bear, and, although the river was very cold and full of floating mush, ice, he staggered in against all remonstrance and efforts to prevent him, and, being too full of whisky, after whooping and floundering around for a little while, the cold water and the liquor proved too much for him, and old Billy was drowned in the act of fighting an imaginary bear.

We have already stated that Mr. Lucas Sullivant, at an early period, held two offices in his county, but, although in after years he wielded much personal influence, he was averse to politics, and never accepted any other office but that of supervisor of roads in his district, and, in this connection the following story is told:

At a time when Mr. Lucas Sullivant had out his force working the road on a long straight stretch, on which a person on horseback could be seen at the distance of a mile or more, the hands were distributed along in squads. Mr. Sullivant frequently passed from one to the other, and, as he rode a white horse, his appearance was readily perceived, and, on coming up, he generally found the men at work, although they seemed to have accomplished but little in his absence. He shortly discovered that, so soon as his back was turned, all hands sat down and took a long rest, until they saw him coming again. Riding up to John Jones, the foreman of one of the gangs, he said, "John Jones, it takes half of my time to watch you." To which Jones replied, with a broad grin, "Yes, Mr. Sullivant, and damed if it don't take pretty much all my time to watch you."

In 1807-8 Mr. Lucas Sullivant superintended the building of the court house in Franklinton.

Foresighted investors cash in on Broadview. That is neither prediction or promise. It is plain fact.

Investors are profiting greatly in Plat I, Broadview, because it sold out two years ago and built 120 Homes in record time. They will profit as much or more in Plat 2 because it has the same advantages as Plat 1—fine city improvements, asphalt streets, sewers, water, electricity, etc.—going in, and it is right in the million-dollar development of Broadview and the Hilltop.

Plat 2 is now one-third sold. Drive straight out West Broad Street to the Hilltop. Compare locations, advantages and prices—and form your own judgment on our statement that Broadview, Plat 2, is the greatest real estate value in all Columbus.

The Boston and Maine Railroad made application to abandon 1000 miles of railroad. It is said that these branches included in their mileage about 45 per cent of the total mileage of the Boston and Maine system, but have been doing only about three per cent of the company's business and at a loss. This situation is due to the extensive use of motor trucks in this particular part of New England.

Recipes

CORN CAKE.

Stir one pint of yellow corn meal into a pint of sour milk, add a beaten egg, a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful each of molasses and sugar, and a teaspoonful of saleratus dissolved in a little warm water. Mix well, then pour into a well-buttered square pan and bake in a brisk oven for a half hour. This cake is generally served with sausages, creamed potatoes and applesauce.

RHODE ISLAND PANCAKES

Mix one pint of rye flour with a pint of yellow corn meal, adding two tablespoonfuls of molasses, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of saleratus dissolved in a little milk, and add enough milk to make a stiff batter. Drop by the tablespoonful into hot lard and fry for ten minutes. Serve with honey or maple syrup or with pork chops, baked potatoes and sliced fried apples.

RICE GRIDDLE CAKES

Beat two cupfuls of freshly boiled rice into one quart of rich sweet milk. Add a saltspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of sugar, two beaten eggs, a teaspoonful of baking soda dissolved in a little bit of water, and enough sifted flour to make a medium batter. Cook the cakes as usual on a hot greased griddle, or an aluminum griddle that does not require greasing.

MISSOURI CORN CAKES

Sift a pint and a half of corn meal with a teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little water, and a heaping tablespoonful of fresh lard. Beat well, adding enough warm water to make a soft batter and add a level tablespoonful of sugar. Beat well for twenty minutes then fry on a griddle, the usual way. These are economical cakes as no eggs are used, or milk, in their making. They are served with fried ham and eggs. The cakes are eaten with golden drip syrup.

RECORD YEAR IN STREET PAVING

Contracts for paving more than 35 miles of streets at a cost of $2,287,791 have been awarded this year, which establishes a new high record for the number of miles of streets paved and valuation of same, according to City Engineer Simpson.

The average width of streets paved was 34 feet and the average cost per mile, $65,000. A total of 480,000 square yards of paving was contracted for, work beginning about April 1 and continuing to Dec. 1.

Six times as much asphalt as brick and concrete combined, was laid. Concrete cost $3.20 per square yard, asphalt $4.02 and brick cost $5.74 per square yard.

In addition to the total for street paving, $500,000 was expended for sewers.

The increase in mileage of streets to be paved during this year now contracted was 16 2-3 per cent over last year, the mileage for 1924 being slightly under 30 miles, or five miles less than this year. The streets average one-third wider than state highways and are of a higher type of construction to stand heavier traffic, officials said.

The largest job of paving was eight streets in Westgate Park with a total length of nearly four miles, at a total cost of $327,000.

HILLTOPLETS

Say, boy, ain't this Hilltop growing? Seems as though Broadview and Westgate additions have built up so quickly during the past year that one can hardly realize what has taken place. Then there's that territory south of Sullivant avenue—a couple of months ago cow pastures, now over a hundred houses built or being built. Then turn to the north in that pretty new addition—Valleyview and vicinity—well we believe nowhere in Columbus has there been so many houses go up in a community as here on the Hilltop.

Jimmy is a Hilltop 4-year-old. On going into a neighbors yard to play the other day the lady accosted him with "Hello, Jimmy."

"Good morning," he replied, "see, I got new shoes."

"My, my, aren't they pretty? What did you do with your old ones?"

"I won't tell you," answered Jimmy.

"I know," said the lady, "you poured paint in them and then put sand in them, didn't you?"

"Y-e-s, I-I- guess I did," he admitted.

We happened to walk past a corner a few days ago where a whole mess of old boards, pieces of stoves, tires and other junk was piled against the back of the house, and right over the pile tacked on the side of the house was a big yellow sign "Love Nest."

The mother of a 4-year-old Hilltop boy, happened to sit down for a moment behind a partly opened door in the kitchen, when all at once the little fellow came sneaking in and went over toward a shelf opposite where the mother was sitting quitely watching him. The she quickly pushed the door back and asked him what he was doing. He about jumped out of his shoes and exclaimed, "I-I-I-did-didn't know y-y-ou was here!" When asked what he was getting he said he was, "g-g-gettin' some m-m-atches."

We were riding west on the front end of a Camp Chase car about six o'clock the other evening and it seemed everybody wanted to get home first, when all at once a couple of young fellows in a Ford dashed around the other autos going in the same direction and ran right in front of our moving car onto the track only missing it I believe a couple of feet. I held my breath and looked at the motorman, who looked at me and burst forth in a flow of words which, though we won't print them, seemed to express such a fellows actions pretty well. It's a wonder more motermen don't die from heart disease.

Catherine (6 years old) was riding south of town with her parents, and happening to pass the rendering plant near the river exclaimed, "that's where our cat went."

Some hen must o' laid a hot egg in one of the nests at the Imbecile "hennery" last Thursday evening, 'cause it seemed that all the fire wagons in this neck-o-the-woods responded to an alarm turned in when a portion of the chicken house caught fire. Except getting the hens to cackle almost as loud as the noise of the F. D., not a great deal of damage was done.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Ong have moved from the North-end into their new home at 2900 Crescent Drive. Mr. Ong, who is one of the Hilltop's pioneer citizens, says it's good to get back home again. He says the Hilltop has changed to beat the band since he has lived here, a couple of years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Gheen, 259 South Eureka avenue, left Saturday morning by way of New York for Florida, where they will reside through the winter. A party of friends accompanied them.

BOY SCOUT TROOP 21 LEASES CABIN

Near Glenmary Park, Giving Them a Permanent Camp for All Kinds of Weather.

Troop 21, Boy Scouts, through its Scoutmaster, has secured a lease on the log cabin located near Glenmary Park. This cabin is more than a hundred years old and was built by one of the early pioneers of Ohio. It has three rooms downstairs, and a loft for bunks. The roughly hewn logs, and the big open fire place in the long front room gives the place the atmosphere of living deep in the woods.

The cabin and grounds needs some cleaning up, which has already been started by the boys of this troop, after which they look forward to many pleasant times with the troop and friends during the winter holidays and nights.

Troop 21 is located at Hoge Memorial church, and is just rounding out its fifth year. They have accomplished many real events within that time. With the addition of the cabin, this troop is considered the best equipped troop of Boy Scouts in or around Columbus. They now have a permanent camp for all kinds of weather, as well as having the necessary equipment to travel a long distance and set up a good substantial camp at almost any place.

WIN HONORS IN SWIMMING MEET

Boy Scout Troop No. 21 was well represented at the Scout swimming meet held at Indianola pool last Saturday afternoon. Lawrence Tracy, Elmer Smith, Robert Trout and Herschel Doty, representing Troop 21, won first honors in the 200-yard relay race.

Lawrence Tracy won second place in be 150-yard dash, and Herschel Doty won second in the 100-yard dash.

Winning these places in the meet placed Troop 21 in third place in the city in Scout swimming athletics.

The boys were each awarded ribbons for their efforts.

MISSION LOT IS CLEAR OF DEBT

The Quarry Mission, north of the Hilltop near the quarries, made the last payment on their lot last Monday, thus clearing the debt on it. They expect to erect a new chapel as soon as possible. The mission has been running for about six years and has gathered quite a congregation. It is interdenominational. W. H. Muth, is superintendent, and E. L. Skipper, chairman of the organization.

A LITTLE STORY THAT'S TRUE

"Gimme eight dozen eggs."

"What do you want with eight dozen eggs? What are you going to do with that many?"

"I want 'em 'cause I'm going to use 'em."

"All right. John give Mr. ———— eight dozen eggs."

The above conversation was heard recently in a certain grocery store. After the customer had been supplied with the eggs and departed, ordering them charged on his account, the grocer said that he was anxious to know what that man wanted that many eggs for, and he told John, his delivery boy, to follow along and see where he went. John did so, and after a short time returned and stated that the man had gone into another grocery store down the way and sold them for probably a coupe of cents less on the dozen, then went over to the filling station and bought gas for his machine.

WILL PROTEST PAVING ORDER

On account of the difficulty which has arisen over the order to pave North Harris avenue with brick instead of asphalt, as the property owners of that section petitioned for, it is said the petitioners will protest the ordinance assessing them for the cost of paving with brick.

WILL START TAG DISTRIBUTION

About December 1st, Secretary of State Brown Announces.

Distribution of the 1926 automobile tags will be started Dec. 1, according to announcement of Secretary of State Brown, Tuesday.

"If tags were distributed earlier than usual, many would not resist the temptation to use the tags before the first of the year, which would confuse the identification system," the secretary declared.

It is pointed out that facilities are ample enough for the distribution of licenses and that no trouble will be experienced and the work will start Dec. 1.

Vivian Jay, 231 South Warren avenue, reported to the police the theft of a purse containing $5 from a room adjoining the kitchen of the West Broad Street M. E. church, Sunday night. A description of a suspect was given detectives.

It has been estimated that a two-cent, twenty-four page newspaper will require a block of wood two inches high, three inches thick and four inches long. Then, with the co-operation of a paper mill, it requires a cord of wood to inform 3600 homes of the news of the day.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

THE HOG AND WINTER

In many parts of New England when hogs are killed the intestines are carefully examined to find out what sort of a winter it is going to be. The whole intestines represent the coming winter. If the middle portion is thickly covered with fat the middle of the winter will be severe. The same is true of the other parts; a little fat indicating warm weather and much fat cold weather. This superstition in modified forms is general all over the United States and Canada, in some places the divination not being confined to the intestines but extended to other interior parts of the slaughtered animal.

This superstition is a survival of haruspication—the form of divination by which, in ancient times, the future was foretold by the inspection of the entrails of animals offered in sacrifice. The haruspices of ancient Rome were a caste of subordinate priests of lower status than the augurs who, however, performed like duties in this respect. Haruspication is said to have been derived by the Romans from the more ancient Etrurians; but it is evidently of primitive origin primarily, for in various forms it exists today among many savage tribes not yet emerged from a primitive condition.

We inherit the superstition in question directly from the Romans. The Roman haruspex anxiously examining the entrails of a hog sacrificed to Bacchus to ascertain the outcome of war and the New England farmer just as carefully examining the entrails of a like animal to find out what sort of winter it is going to be, are one and the same though nearly two thousand years extend between them.

EARLY INFLUENCE MADE OHIO GREAT

Formation of Great Lakes Also Attributed to Glacial Moraine.

The foundation of Ohio's industrial and agricultural supremacy was laid hundreds of centuries ago while nearly three-fourths of its area lay under a sheath of ice.

According to estimate of geologists, a mighty glacial formation at one time covered 4,000,000 square miles of the northern hemisphere. The southern end of this glacial rested on a line which passes through East Liverpool and Canton. The line then turns south and intersects Tuscarawas, Holmes, Knox, Licking, Perry, Fairfield, Pickaway, Hocking and Ross counties. Here again it turns west and angles down to meet the Ohio river in Clinton county.

One familiar with the topography of Ohio can readily trace the above boundary since the portion of the state that was covered with ice was left quite level. The action of the glacier on surface rocks produced a uniform deposit of fine soil. Centuries of dense vegetation have enriched this soil and now Ohio farmers are able to produce an abundance of almost every crop that can be grown in a temperate climate.

The formation of the Great Lakes is also attributed to action of this glacial moraine. As a consequence, Ohio finds herself blessed with a waterway to the Atlantic seaboard and Europe. The opening of the Panama canal gives Ohio products an outlet to Pacific markets.

Our northern lake port facilities are a tremendous economic factor. Last year 467 American steamers were in the lake trade. Three hundred and fifty-one of these were managed in Cleveland. They bring to Ohio steel worker great cargoes of ore and leave our lake cities again loaded with Ohio coal.

Mother Nature again played favorites with Ohio when she filled the unglaciated portion of our state with rich deposits of coal, iron, gas, clay and limestone. Largely from this section of the state comes the mining products which in the year 1919 were valued at $134,518,505.

In the early history of the eighteenth century, when settlers with their pack horses and covered wagons were searching west for homesteads, they first had to traverse Ohio. Attracted by its agricultural possibilities, they acquired land, hewed logs for dwellings and cleared farms. From a population of 45,000 in 1800, Ohio grew to a population of 230,760 in 10 years.

Then came years of great hardship. Everything was agricultural and crops sold for next to nothing. Wheat was worth 25c a bushel, corn 10c to 15c, oats 10c, potatoes 10c or 12c.

The seventh governor of Ohio, Ethan Allen Brown, summed up the situation when he said, "You will bear in mind that our productions, which form our only great resource, are generally of that bulky and ponderous description as to need every easement in consequence that we can afford." He advocated "a cheaper way to market for the surplus produce of a large portion of our fertile country. Roads and canals are veins and arteries to the body politic that diffuse supplies, health, vigor and animation to the whole system."

Then came an era of road and canal building and the rise of river traffic. Ohio's tremendous resources were at last unpent, and a flood of prosperity swept the state. Cities sprang up almost overnight, improved machinery was imported, coal was discovered.

Little wonder that Ohio is prosperous; that she leads in many important fields of commerce and agriculture. Her present fortune is not accidental and it can be traced to a foundation comprised of the happy meeting of fertile fields, a temperate climate, coal, and a wealth of raw materials. These natural resources were combined with capital, labor and transportation.

But after all, the true progenitor of our good fortune was the mighty glacial drift, which pulverized Ohio's rock ribbed hills into fertile soil, for "Under all is the land." We Ohioans should ever keep before us in grateful appreciations the blessings brought to our door thousands of years ago by the mighty ice fields.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Dinsmore, 89 S. Burgess avenue, returned last week from Winter Haven, Fla., where they spent a few days.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

It is for utility, and not for good looks that this formula is reproduced here each week. The writer knows that because of his forgetfulness it has served him well as a many-times-a-day reminder.

1 2 3 4 1 2 3 4
Inhale Exhale

1 2 3 4 1 2 3 4
Mar ching as to war.

Inhale on the black-face words, and exhale on the others, and pull in and push out as much air on "4" as on "1."

The deeper inhalations make for more vitality (life) and the exhalations for less poison (death). And, by the way, why not think of them as "life" and "death," for that is what they are. Then let's work our bellows a little stronger—keep doubling the length of your breaths, and have less of

HEADACHES

Headaches are in most cases mere symptoms that usually point the way to habit or bodily defect. In naming these causes one is tempted to think it easier to name the sources from which they cannot come, for they may be mental or physical, internal or external, from in or near the head or in distant parts of the body.

The finding and removing of the cause being the only real cure, it is, of course, the most satisfactory remedy. The so-called headache remedies are usually composed of sedative drugs which may stop a headache by temporarily deadening nerves, but the causes cannot thus be removed, and a return engagement may usually be expected, when the same good "doctor" or drug is employed and the penalty for continuing the cause is thereby simply delayed. It is sure to be inflicted sooner or later.

The brain, having no sensory nerves, can have no pain of its own; it is simply conscious of pain and can report it and give its location. Intense mental effort or pressure within the skull can cause headache, but the pain is from nerves to the head and not in the brain. A blow on the head, bad vision, catarrh, too much or too little blood in the head may cause pain. In meningitis there is intense headache. Other more distant causes are from the liver and stomach, chronic kidney and tubercular diseases and the ailments of women. Neurasthenic headaches, aided by the emotions are persistent; the best cure is—don't get it. Some cases of migraine, the tendency to which may be inherited, are a difficult proposition.

In dull headaches there may be defective vision or chronic catarrh. This form is common in such slow poisoning diseases as chronic constipation or kidney diseases or hardening of the arteries. This suggests the importance of frequent examination that the insidious cause may be thwarted, most likely by a change of habits. A thorough survey, such as we should all take, frequently—often reveals the presence of serious heart or kidney disease, which may reduce the distressing headache to the level of a mere symptom. The finding and removal of the cause of such disease, then becomes of paramount importance, and implies the utmost co-operation of patient and doctor.

It is safe to say that by far the greater part of the ills of mankind are caused by auto intoxication—self poisoning. The slow accumulation of poisons, as from improper or overeating, the tobacco, alcohol or coffee habits, etc., cause freaky and often chronic intense headaches which can only be stopped permanently by discontinuing the habit. A stove or grate in a room burns up oxygen rapidly and makes ventilation necessary, and if neglected, we breathe too little oxygen and too much poison.

As already intimated, a headache may be stopped by sedative potions or powders, but no permanent good can come from them if the indiscretions be kept up. This brings us back to Right Living as the only reliable course, and the question forces itself upon us: Shall we continue to be the coffee, tobacco, food or other addicts that we are, with inevitably, shortened lives and suffering, or shall we use our will power and won't power and get back to nature's ways and enjoy longer and happier lives?

A WORTH WHILE INSTITUTION

A person passing in front of the Ohio Bureau of Juvenile Research on West Broad street and Wheatland avenue and seeing all those little fellows in blue jumper playing around on the lawn is apt to wonder what they are all there for and from whence they came and whither are they going.

They are sent there from all over the state and put under medical supervision, after which after going through 21 tests it is determined as to where they should be sent. Some of them if thought best are sent back home—if they have a home. Others are sent to the state farm at Orient, or to Lancaster, and if any are of the legal age and have committed sufficient depredation they are sent to Mansfield or Marysville.

Mr. Charles Lafollette, a cousin of the late Senator Lafollette looks after the boys, of which he reports 36 at present writing. Then there are about half that number of girls.

This institution, has only been in operation a few years, is proving a fine thing, as a boy or girl, is taken good care of and instead of being sent to Lancaster or Delaware as heretofore, is tested as to mentality and placed in the most suitable place for them. Many having no homes are sent by the authorities into good homes somewhere and given a chance to make good citizens.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Tracy, 70 Chase avenue, with Miss Madge Rutherford, 1678 East Main street and Mr. J. P. Dietes, 258 South Eighteenth street, have returned from a week's motoring trip to New York and Atlantic City.

OLD PIONEER DAYS

In 1909, while some of Lucas Sullivant's hands were plowing in the Dutch Prairie near the town of Franklinton a nearly grown black bear came along very leisurely, without, apparently, being in the least disturbed by the immediate vicinity of the men and horses. One of the men, unhitching his horses, took a singletree with a heavy trace chain attached and mounting his horse, rode up along side of the bear, and began thrashing him with the chain. The bear at first showed fight, but whincing under the heavy blows, he started off at a lively pace, the men following, and with an occasional application of the trace chain, finding little difficulty in driving him in any direction he chose, and finally in about a quarter of a mile succeeded in guiding him right into the door yard of the Mansion House, where he was immediately attacked by several dogs. A fierce battle ensued, in which the bear killed one of the dogs, and fought his way across the garden into the next lot, where he took refuge in the angle formed by the fence and house, and, protected in his rear, stood at bay. The dogs that first attacked him still kept around and prevented him from running away, had he been so inclined. A crowd of men and boys, with fresh dogs, soon gathered and a regular bear-baiting commenced.

The bear, standing on his hind legs in his corner, received the attack in front from the eager but inexperienced dogs, and, with a hearty hug and rip with hind claws, sent one yelling cur after another out of the fight. It was soon evident that, so far as the dogs were concerned, it was a drawn-battle, and measures were devised to capture the bear alive.

For this purpose a rope was procured with a slip-noose at one end, which was attempted to be thrown over his head, but which he, with surprising dexterity, cast aside each time. At this junction a man by the name of Corbus made his appearance and, being pretty full of whisky, undertook to place the rope over the bear's head. When he got sufficiently close, the bear struck him a blow with his paw, whereupon Corbus dropped the rope and pitched in with his fists and feet, and a very exciting and famous rough and tumble bear fight took place; but the poor beast, being much weakened and exhausted from his previous efforts, the human brute came off best and killed the bear. The exploit was long the talk of the village.

WILL CELEBRATE ARMISTICE DAY

American Legion Officials of Columbus and Franklin County Arranging Program.

Officials of the American Legion in Columbus and Franklin county are making arrangements for the celebration of Armistice Day, Nov. 11, and expect to make this year's affair the biggest that has taken place since the signing of the armistice.

Full details of the celebration have not been completed, although it is expected that many nationally prominent in American Legion work, and men who are leaders in state and city work will join here in making the seventh anniversary of the cessation of the World war an impressive event.

Civic organizations, luncheon clubs and the public in general will be asked to co-operate with the ex-service men and women in making the program a success.

MUST REGISTER TO BE ABLE TO VOTE

All electors, residing in Columbus, who wish to vote at the November election must register. There are four registration days scheduled, viz: Oct. 1, 8, 16 and 17.

AN OPEN LETTER TO HILLTOP FRIENDS

By bus line from Columbus to Chesapeake, Ohio. Roads fine, the stretch of curves, sudden bends, winding around the hills, beautifully unique orchards, great fields of shocked corn, cattle grazing in green pastures, herds of hogs with bushels of yellow corn heaped up before them, and flocks of chickens—so much speaking of peace and plenty. And the great patches of wild asters, sunflowers and the graceful plume-like golden rod delighted the eye and thrilled the soul.

Now and then some little school house carried us back to "school marm" days, or the sight of a lone hunter with a gun on his back, reminded us of childhood, and savory dishes of the frsky squirrel. Then squirrels were plenty and game was lurking around.

At one place we saw a boy of perhaps ten, chopping stove wood in the backyard of a humble home. We felt a sense of pity for him because the sun was so hot and his task looked so irksome, and we wondered about the future, but as we reflected we thought his change to grow up and become a worth while man—maybe a president—was far greater than our city lads with backs bent under heavy loads of papers.

Coming in sight of the beautiful old Ohio river and the rugged hills I felt the thrill of meeting an old acquaintance—one I had loved long and loved still. We made good connections and were only six hours on the way.

Attended Sunday school and church services in the little Christian church because it was close and had the privilege of addressing the little school. They kept so quiet I was almost frightened. M. M. Marshall.

Wonder why he doesn't like to study—why his eyes wander from his books.

"He is too young to need glasses," they say, if it occurs to them at all that a slight weakness of the eyes may be responsible.

TELEPHONE DEMONSTRATION

To Be Given at John Burroughs School Next Tuesday Evening.

If you want to spend an evening worth while, that will be instructive and entertaining, just go over to the auditorium of John Burroughs school building, Sullivant and South Richardson avenues, Tuesday evening, Oct. 13, at 8 o'clock.

The Hilltop Civic association has secured attaches of the telephone company to repeat the demonstration of unified telephone service at that time.

It will be of about 45 minutes' duration, of instructive and humorous vaudeville, along the above line, and is pronounced by those who have heard it as being fine.

It was produced recently before the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs of the city.

If you want to have a good laugh—go. It will cost you nothing. Everyone is invited to go and take their friends.

BROADVIEW IS BOOMING

With Scarcely a Let-up in Building of Homes in the Last Two Years.

It is said that over 2000 people weathered the inclemency of the weather last Sunday and went to the Broadview addition to see "Long Gables," which is said to be the "last word" in home building.

And while we're talking about Broadview, do you know, Mr. Hilltopper, that the making of that addition has been pronounced the greatest development in the history of Columbus?

In two years' time over 120 homes have been built and miles of streets paved, and right now extensive building is being planned or is already going on. There seems to be no letup, winter or summer, and plans are being made to continue the building activities in this addition through the coming winter season.

Plans have already been drawn for a new West High school to be situated in this addition west of Powell avenue. Also there is a plot of ground already secured on which will be erected a new elementary school. This plot is situated on the west side of Broadview, not far from the high school site.

The homes in this addition are unique in that they are of the latest style architecture, containing the latest built-in features, lighting fixtures and arrangements, plumbing and heating plans—all blending together for the convenience of the home owner and the beauty of the surroundings.

Messrs. Heed & Holton, developers of Broadview, invite all people of the West Side to inspect this addition and get ideas from the many new styles of beautiful homes already built there and now under construction.

Broadview Extension, the new section south of Broadview, though it has not yet been placed on the market, is reported to be already one-third sold.

Mrs. J. S. Chambers, 36 South Warren avenue, had as her guest for the past week Mr. and Mrs. Howard Higgins of Cherry Fork, Adamms county, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor J. Westlake of Martinsville, Ind., spent the week-end at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Westlake, 1667 Sullivant avenue.

Need Not Tell Age When Registering

In an opinion to Secretary of State Thad H. Brown, Tuesday, Attorney General Crabbe ruled that women need not tell their age when they register for elections.

"All voters making application for registration, when requested by the registration board, are required to furnish the board with information as to the period of years and months of residence in the state, county and precinct in which they reside," Crabbe said.

"In giving the information as to whether the applicant is 21 years of age, such applicant may avoid giving exact age by using the word 'yes' if 21 years or more, and by using the word 'no' if not at the time 21 years of age."

Saturday, October 3, at 4 o'clock at the Glenwood Methodist parsonage, Mr. William E. Wilson and Miss Ruth Keyes were married by Rev. George F. Barber. The couple were attended by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Keys, and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Hammond. After a trip to New York city, the former home of Mr. Wilson, they will be at home at 2788½ West Broad street.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris of Fostoria were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Louks, 249 South Burgess avenue last Sunday.

HILLTOPLETS

The fire department last week made a run to 234 South Richardson avenue, then turned and ran right back again, 'cause 'twas nothing but a hot water tank in the basement had burst-ed and filled the basement with steam.

Since the approach of the autumn days a big falling off is noticeable in the number of campers at the Glenwood tourist camp. Only a few scattering campers are now to be seen about the grounds and the last few nights made camping look like a cold affair. Well, there's one consolation we suppose with those folks there, and that is the mosquitoes have hied themselves to warmer quarters—and may joy go with the whole 1925 crop of "skeeters" is undoubtedly the wish of all us victims.

Two Hilltop daddies, who reside on the same street, and who each have boys about four years old, who play together, recently were talking of the exploits of the youngsters. "One daddy remarked that his boy came home the other day with his hair all full of grease. "Well, your kid hasn't anything on mine," said the other. The sequel of the story was that the two boys had gone into the garage at the home of the younger boy where they found a 5-pound can of hard grease and proceeded to do a good job of polishing a Buick sedan. In fact the job was so thorough that it consumed the contents of the whole can. To finish off the job the boys went into the house, secured a towel, wiped out the can clean and proceeded to put a high polish on the auto. The job was so well done that it took about three hours of hard work by the owner of the sedan to remove the grease. The boys remember the incident.

Some fellow from Dayton in a flivver was trying to climb the hill leading to the main building of the imbecile asylum the other day, when all at once his engine balked and no amount of coaxing or threatening would cause it function. After examination he found he was shy of gas. He attempted to back down the hill by gravitation, but had run so close to the curbing that he couldn't get away from it, but finally after skinning one tire and damaging another by side swiping the wheels he landed backwards at the bottom of the hill with a gasless crippled machine.

A few days ago, it happened to be raining in a sort of a drizzly manner and three little six-year-olds were going home from the Dana avenue school. As they reached the corner of Central and Sullivant avenues, a kindly gentleman, going in the same direction in a machine, stopped and asked the kiddies if they didn't want to ride.

Two of them piled in, but one of them, a little girl, said "No, sir, thank you, I'd rather walk." And she did. When she got home she related the incident and said, "I didn't know that man, and I wouldn't ride with him. And I'll bet he took them away some where and didn't take them home at all." Though the gentleman's kindness is worthy of mention, yet the girl's caution is worthy of praise.

A LITTLE STORY THAT'S TRUE

This is said to have happened in a rolling mill in Columbus:

An employe who had "hit the bottle" a little too hard, and feeling its effects in his work, accidentally got his little finger under the knife of a steel cutting machine, which resulted in it being cut off. The boss, happening on the scene, he attempted to show him how it happened, using the next finger on the same hand. In the demonstration he got the next finger too far in the machine and off went it also.

The boss became disgusted and told him he deserved having his "fool head taken off likewise."

By DR. O. E. McFADON

It makes a "dif" how you do it. If you take breath at 1 and simply hold your breath through 2, 3 and 4, you beat your self. But if, with closed lips, you pull in as much air on 2 as on 1, and so on through 3 and 4, and feel that your lungs are full, then push it all out till you feel a "goneness," and keep it up, you will get something out of it.

The difference between the two "ifs" above spells the difference between weakness and strength, between sickness and health, for one is death and the other life.

Here's the "Onward Christian Soldier" formula again.

1	2	3	4		1	2	3	4

Inhale					Exhale

On-ward Christian Sol - dier;

Inhale on the black-face words, and exhale on the others, and pull in and push out as much air on "4" as on "1."

HEADACHE

The highest paid men in factories are the efficiency experts, whose business it is to bring about such changes as will reduce the cost-per of articles. This implies the intelligent disposal of by-products and the elimination of unnecessary wastes of material and labor.

Your body is a factory whose constant duty it is to manufacture vitality for your use. Your doctor, who periodically looks you over (by your permission), is your "efficiency expert." If you place yourself in his hands, he should so manage your body that it will manufacture for you to the utmost in vitality. As in any other factory this implies intelligent disposal of wastes.

Ay, there's the rub. The poisons incidental in the creation and promotion and conservation of vitality must be eliminated; if not, then self-poisoning—auto intoxication, is inevitable.

Unfortunately, some manufacturers and most people get along without "efficiency experts," which increases the personal health responsibility of the individual. Every person should be adroit in maintaining such a balance of intake and elimination as will conduce to the highest possible efficiency. This is the greatest and most important problem in one's health history. The maintenance of this balance is but another name for Right Living. It is that that makes us immune to most diseases. It is that upon which the doctors rely—more than upon their medicines—for most cures. It is that that would render doctors almost wholly unnecessary, except in cases of accidents, for with universal right living, there would be no diseases.

The technique of right living cannot be given here but it implies air, food, water, exercise and rest on the constructive side and the lungs, skin, bowels and kidneys as eliminators on the other. The lack of the proper balance of these will result in auto-intoxication and auto-intoxication is another name for disease.

A recent visitor to Arctic regions gives some interesting information which he obtained during his travels. The musk ox of the northlands protected by his coats of wool and long hair is undisturbed by a temperature of 75 degrees below zero. The hardy Eskimo dog, although living amidst ice and snow, seems to have a mortal terror of the water. It is only when urged by the stinging lash of the whip that he will wade through even small streams.

WEST HIGH WINS FROM SPRINGFIELD

West High school football team defeated Springfield High at Springfield last Friday by a score of 6 to 0. Although the game was hard fought, a muddy and slippery field handicapped both teams in their offensive playing.

The only points of the game were scored by Harold Mason, star halfback of West, within the first five minutes of play, when after catching a punt on his own 20-yard line, he worked his way for 80 yards to the goal line of his opponents.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK OBSERVED

The week of Oct. 4 has been designated as "fire prevention week" by President Coolidge for a general campaign against loss by fire, and State Fire Marshall Louis F. Miller urges general observance of the week throughout Ohio.

"The fire loss last year was the greatest in the history of any country, and Ohio's share in this gigantic waste was more than 500 human lives and $24,000,000 in property," Mr. Miller said.

"I hope that all citizens, civic organizations, the churches, schools and the press will join in an educational campaign to reduce this tremendous strain upon our resources, 85 per cent of which is preventable."

The Hilltop Child Conservation circle had the first meeting of the year at the home of the president, Mrs. F. L. Bradfute, 202 South Hague avenue, Thursday evening of last week. Plans for the coming convention of the Ohio Federation of Child Conservation Leagues, to be held in Columbus, Oct. 21-23, were made known at this meeting. The five circles of the city are combining as hostesses for the convention.

"The troubles from which our world suffers spring mainly from an overestimate of the importance of relatively unimportant things—money, power, territory, oil, steel, coal—things whereof the sole value lies in the use to which we put them," says a writer in Harper's Magazine. This is a lesson which we seem to be slow to learn; for are we not busying ourselves about these very things? When we can rightly judge of the true value in life, we shall turn to the more important things of the Spirit, and the world's troubles will become lighter.

BOOST OHIO

Rich in Natural Resources—Fourth in Population and 6 Wealth.

From the time the Indians settled on the banks of the Ohio river, many historical events have occurred within the borders of the state bearing the same name. Ohio meaning, "beautiful river," is popularly known from coast to coast as the Buckeye State.

Not only do Ohioans glory in her past record but they are looking optimistically towards the future for which all her rich agricultural lands, natural resources, manifold factories and ample capital, she has much in store for generations to come.

Ohio, although the thirty-fifth state of the Union in area, ranks fourth in population and in wealth, being surpassed only by New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois. According to the last official census in 1920, her population was 5,759,394, which is an increase of more than a hundred-fold in little more than a century.

Ohio is known as the Mother of Presidents, for seven of our chief executives were born within her confines.

Ohio has more colleges and universities than any other state in the Union. Three of these institutions are maintained by the state, namely, Ohio university at Athens, Miami university at Oxford and Ohio State university at Columbus.

No state east of the Mississippi has so large a percentage of farm lands, about 94 per cent of the state's area being given over to agriculture. Within the decade from 1909 to 1919 Ohio's farm crops increased from $221,000,000 to $607,000,000, or about 174 per cent.

Ohio ranked fourth in 1914 in total value of mineral products, first in output of clay products, fifth in quantity and fourth in value of coal, fourth in quantity and third in value of natural gas and seventh in output of petroleum. It has been estimated that at the present rate of consumption the state has bituminous coal enough to last 1000 years.

A summarization of the industries of Ohio shows a wide range of character and high valuations in capital and production. Since 1879 Ohio has held fifth place in the value of manufactured products. The causes which have contributed to make her a great manufacturing state may be briefly summarized as follows:

1. Her favorable location as the natural gateway to the Mississippi valley.

2. A magnificent system of waterways, supplemented by more than 11,000 miles of stream and electric lines and more than 35,000 miles of surfaced highways.

3. Her splendid natural resources, especially her rich deposits of coal, petroleum and natural gas.

4. Concentration of manufacturing in large plants, making possible the use of expensive machinery and the many economies of large scale productions.

5. The energy and efficiency of our workers, trained under a system of free public education and the skill and enterprise of our captains of industry.

Other states in the Union may surpass her in some particular aspect, but judging from all angles there is only one Ohio.

OLD PIONEER DAYS

There was no fixed or permanent seat of government decided upon for several years after the organization of the state in 1803, but the legislature held its sessions sometimes in Chillicothe, and at others in Zanesville. As early as in 1810, however, the legislature appointed five commissioners to examine and select an eligible site on which to locate and fix permanently the seat of government for the state. They met in Frankliuton, and, after examining that locality, rejected it as being too low in situation, and too limited in plan, and, in the following December, reported to the legislature in favor of a tract of land on a high plain on the west bank of the Scioto, belonging to John and Peter Sells, and it is the same place now occupied by the town of Dublin, 12 miles above Columbus.

Nothing further was done regarding the location of the capital for some time, although in the meanwhile various places were contending for the coveted prize and devising measures to secure it, till, in 1812, the proposals of Starling, Johnson and others, were accepted and the seat of government established at the high bank opposite Franklinton, the present site of Columbus, which was then covered by a dense forest. The town was immediately laid off and the first sale of lots made in June, 1812. It is perhaps needless to add that the original plat of the town, although larger than Franklinton, was also on a moderate scale, being bounded on the west by the river, north by North Public Lane, east by Fourth street, and south by South Public Lane.

Lucas Sullivant not only helped to secure the location of the capital by his personal influence, but he greatly contributed to this result by the assistance he rendered to his brother-in-law, Starling, and his friend Johnson, especially by his liberal donation of money and the guarantee of other subscriptions, which he had afterward to pay.

Planets and Fixed Stars

Fixed stars are heavenly bodies similar to the sun; they are hot and shine by their own light. The planets are similar to the earth; they do not shine, for the most part at least, by their own light, but by reflected sulight. If you watch the planets from night to night you will see that they move in the sky; the fixed stars do not move noticeably. Of course, strictly speaking, no heavenly body is stationary; they are all moving through space.—Exchange.

The house of the poet Keats in which he lived for almost two years, and in which he did much of his best work, is to be made into a Keats memorial. The property was bought with money raised here and in England. The house and grounds with the chestnuts, sycamores, and hawthornes, are little changed from the time Keats left them to go to Rome, never to return.

It's time to buy in the growing West

Where there's real estate activity there's profit for the early buyer.

On the Hilltop the big growth has just begun. Plat 1, in Broadview, started the present million-dollar development only two years ago; now Plat 2 is already a third sold and will soon be paying the same big profits that Plat 1 has earned investors.

Think of it. Here are choice lots in an addition with 120 fine new homes, beautiful streets, parks, all city improvements being completed while you watch them—the closest to High Street of all the marvelous Hilltop developments—and yet you can buy many of these lots for only $900 on the most attractive kind of terms.

Columbus investors—here is where you simply can't help making money. We've developed more Hilltop property than anyone and we'll bank our reputation of 11 years' success on Broadview, Plat 2.

Drive or take car straight out West Broad Street. Turn south into any of Broadview's wide asphalt streets and let your own eyes see the value that is there.

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

In small families a roast of any size lasts for several meals and becomes rather monotonous, for no one like to throw away good food. The best plan is to invite one's friends to help eat the large roast. A few ways of serving appetising roast beef may be helpful. There is no meat more enjoyed than thinly sliced roast beef, so one may serve it one day for luncheon or supper. A nice well-seasoned tomato sauce may be served with thinly sliced meat heated well in the sauce; then to finish up the rougher portions, put it through the meat grinder and prepare croquettes, or stuff green peppers and bake them.

Emergency Dessert

Take pieces of stale cake and let them soak in any fruit juice like cherry, strawberry, plum or pineapple. If none of these is at hand use orange juice with a little of the grated rind. Arrange the soaked cake in a pretty dish and pour over a custard using a pint of milk, two beaten eggs, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, a pinch of salt and any flavoring which combines with the fruit juice used. Serve with whipped cream or cover with a meringue and brown lightly.

The state of Czechoslovakia became independent in 1918. The Declaration of Independence was signed in Independence Hall, Philadiphia, Pa., by Thomas G. Mazaryk. As far back as the tenth and eleventh centuries tribes of Bohemia, Moravia, and Slovakia were united into a state which has never been entirely dissolved. Today it is the thriving state of Czecholovakia.

"What's in a Name?"
By MILDRED MARSHALL

[illegible]

CARMEN

The very Spanish name of Carmen and the more or less English appellative Carmela are identical. Though they are used as distinct names, both signify "vineyard" and come to us through the Italian where Carmen is spelled Carmine.

The source of these two names is bound up in the history of the prophet Elijah whom the Greek translators called Elias. When the Empress Helena visited Palestine she built a church on Mt. Carmel, around which rose a cluster of hermitages.

The order of Carmelites was said to have been founded by the prophet himself, but when the Latins overflowed into Palestine it first came into note and its fame became widespread throughout the West. St. Mary was made its patroness and in Italy she became known as the Madonna di Carmela or the Madonna di Carmine. As a result the two names of Carmela and Carmine gained great popularity among the Italian women. They are still used there and in Spain, where Carmine was turned into Carmen, the name became a national favorite.

The ruby is Carmen's talismanic gem. It is said that she who wears a ruby can dwell without fear in the midst of enemies and will always be shielded from adverse fortune. The gem must be worn, however, on the left side. Tuesday is Carmen's lucky day and 7 her lucky number.

Wash and pare turnips and cut into half-inch slices, then into half-inch cubes; there should be three cupfuls. Cook in boiling water until soft, drain and add one-third of a cupful of butter. Prune Ice Cream

Cover a cupful of well-washed prunes with cold water and let stand overnight. Cook in the same water until soft, remove the stones and put the pulp through a sieve. Add a cupful of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, a pinch of salt and one and one-fourth cupfuls of heavy cream beaten stiff. Freeze as usual.

With the aid of an electric heater and an electric lens Leonardo da Vinci's famous picture, The Last Supper, has been restored and saved. It was found that the paint was peeling from the canvas and losing its color. Examination showed that the moisture was the cause, and so an opening was made in the wall upon which the canvas was hung, and artificial heat applied. This solved the finding-of-the-paint problem. Then portions of the paint had to be moved back into place before the picture could be said to be in perfect repair.

"Mr. Simpson got the idea from a number of western cities which have been experimenting with the 3-inch type for several years and have found it highly satisfactory. Several months ago he visited Kansas City, Wichita, Kans.; Arkansas City, Kan., and Ponca City, Okla., and made a careful investigation of their 3-inch streets. He returned to Columbus convinced that the 3-inch pavement would be especially suitable to residential streets and at the same time would result in big savings of taxpayers' money.

"With Simpson's recommendation before him, Service Director Duffy has awarded contracts for 3-inch vitrified brick paving on Berwyn, Wallnis, Magnolia and Twenty-sixth avenue.

"On three other streets, showing heavier traffic conditions, Director Duffy has awarded contracts for 4-inch vitrified brick, Ludlow street, Mock road and Harris avenue."—Dispatch, Oct. 10, 1925.

"The rub arises from the fact that brick costs about 10 per cent more than asphalt. Hence, when it was decided that because of the probable small amount of traffic on North Harris avenue asphalt would soon crack and break up and a contract for brick was let, it did not take long to stir things up."—Ohio State Journal, Oct. 11, 1925.

We are submitting to our Hilltop friends these articles, which otherwise migh escape their notice, in reference to the Harris avenue paving affair. The popular saying is "Read 'em and weep."

Director Duffy seems to be in the sad plight of the man in the school-day rhyme, "Who turned him round and round and round and still his pigtail hung behind him." The director seems to be both coming and going. In the one article we read, because of the small amount of traffic on North Harris avenue, asphalt would soon crack and break up." And in the statement of 24 hours previous we read, "On streets showing heavier traffic conditions, Director Duffy has awarded contracts for 4-inch vitrified brick, namely Ludlow street, Mock road and North Harris avenue."

The director has turned himself around so often on the North Harris avenues affair that he is dizzy; he has lost his balance. Witness for instance, his feeble attempt to figure the difference between asphalt at $17,031 (which was the amount of the low bid on asphalt for North Harris) and 4-inch vitrified brick at $21,264.75, which is the amount of the contract awarded, and which he states is a difference of 10 per cent.

If he uses the same method of figures in his service department budget, small wonder that there is a controversy between him and Auditor Thatcher.

Just one more point to consider and that is: The Dispatch article reads "that 3-inch brick would be especially suitable for residential streets," and accordingly Director Duffy awarded contracts thus and so—but on North Harris avenue he awarded 4-inch brick, which is suitable for heavy rtaffic.

What we earnestly desire to know, is since when was North Harris avenue eliminated from the residential district? and how shall we go about it to remedy the matter?

Director Duffy refuses, so we are told, to discuss the North Harris avenue project.

North Harris Ave. Residents.

REGISTRATION IS VERY LIGHT

Important That Every Voter Register This Week.

We believe the disinterest voters have been displaying about registering and voting at our elections—especially local ones—the last few years tends toward making a condition which, if indulged in for a few years by our voters, will be injurious to not only our own government, but will react on the voters as well.

In answering the question why he or she doesn't go to the polls and vote, the answer is generally about like one of these: "My vote would not change matters and I don't see why I should take the trouble to go and vote," or "They're all alike after elected, so it matters not who gets in," or "I don't know enough about the different candidates to choose which one to vote for."

We have often heard it expressed that if a voter willingly stays away from the polls at the primaries and regular elections, said voter has no business kicking if bad men get in and bad laws are passed.

We believe it is the solemn duty of each and every voter, if possible, to go and vote at every opportunity. By his vote each person has just as much right to his say in our government affairs as the other fellow, and it is his or her duty to take an interest in seeing that the best men, regardless of party affiliations, are elected to the responsible positions.

We have four councilmen to elect. With the very important city affairs ahead of us we should use our best judgment in helping to put the best man in that body.

Then there are bond issues to be settled that will involve millions of dollars of the city's money for sewers, streets, city hall, golf grounds, etc. These will affect our tax rates for years to come. Are all or some of them worthy of our support or rejection? Why not express our views at the polls, where is will be effective?

We have had tow registration days, and there has been but a small percentage of the total qualified voters who have registered. There are two more chances—Friday and Saturday, Oct. 16 and 17. If you do not register on these days you cannot vote in November.

Following is the number registered in the 10th and 11th wards, by precincts; also the ward boundaries and precinct locations. Look them over, then if you have not registered, don't fail to go to your precinct booth and do so on one of the above dates:

COAL COAL

ONE TON IN THE BASEMENT IS WORTH TWO IN THE MINE

That's the reason you should get your Winter's supply of coal now.

It looks like another coal strike and it's hard to get coal from the mine when the miners refuse to work.

REALIZE THE BUCKEYE'S SAFETY

In THE BUCKEYE investors are safe. For 30 years its officers have been engaged in but one line of business finance—the receiving and loaning of money. During that time THE BUCKEYE has received loaned and disbursed over $370,000,000, which vast amount has been handled without loss to any investor.

Its officers know real estate values, on which all its funds are loaned—first mortgages on Homes—at the low rate of 6½%.

THE BUCKEYE protects all of its customers by having a reserve and surplus fund of $1,100,000; bond and insurance of $3,150,000 and paid in capital of $5,000,000. THE BUCKEYE pays 5% on Certificates of Deposit. Interest from date, payable semi-annually.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. B. McFADON

Inhale during 4 steps and exhale during 4, pulling in as much, and pushing out as much air on "4" as on "1," and keep it up.

Does the above seem familiar, or have you long since forgotten it? You can't wear it threadbare for the more you work the game the more strength you get.

"Onward Christian Soldier" is practically the same thing, but this has the merit of looking like a change.

Vitality—resistance—is what we want and this deep breathing is the cheapest resistance we can have against

DEGENERATIVE DISEASES

Why degenerative diseases? Why disease at all? Is not all disease degenerative? Health is natural. Disease is unnatural and so, abnormal.

The traditional belief that afflictions are sent from heaven is vanishing with the years. If God wills any disease, then he wills it all. On the other hand His laws are fixed and our afflictions come from the ignoring of those laws, and the guilty parties may be individuals, societies or nations. Degeneration is the breaking down of what has been created.

Are degenerative diseases inevitable—must we all have them? No, not necessarily. They are escapable by normal people who live in harmony with God's laws. It is such people that really die of old age and, in many cases, pass away without sickness or pain.

We think and speak of "diseases peculiar to old age," as if we considered them "a matter of course." The fact that they are more common to those of advanced age, should prove to us that they (kidney and heart troubles, hardened arteries, gout, rheumatism, apoplexy, etc.) are not creations of the day, week, month or year before, but have been gathering momentum for perhaps many years, and are the result of variations from normal living.

How unreasonable, then, to expect a cure in a short time, if at all; and how foolish and short sighted to place great value on the one dose—or many doses—of medicines, which deceive by stimulating, but have no reference to the original cause.

It has been easy for medicines and doctors to gain reputations by such methods, but as the public gains a larger vision and makes and demands deeper inquiry into causes, it becomes imperative that the doctor meet the demand by additional facilities and equipment. He must realize that his greatest duty is, first to ascertain the cause, [illegible] Mrs. W. B. White, after much debating by the judges.

The October recital of the Hilltop School of Music will be held Tuesday [illegible], "Correct Eating"; "Sad to say, it must be broadly admitted that the stimulus to this newer interest has come quite totally from outside medicine's own ranks. Medically uneducated people are in large degree responsible for what medicine will absorb and ultimately claim as her very own." An article by Dr. Greca in the August New York Medical Journal is illuminating on this point.

REPAIR MATERIAL

The integrity of our bodies must be maintained by air, water and food, with proper balance of exercise and rest. Breathing is automatic, but its utility may be unnaturally limited or, in connection with exercise, wisely developed beyond nature's positive demands; unperverted thirst is easily controlled and utilized; but the food problem is complicated.

The loss of teeth, hair trimming, nail clipping, etc., are evidences of the breaking down which is constantly going on in our bodies, making replenishment necessary. This repair should be from the best material, but that fact is not properly appreciated. To expect good results from using poor air, water and food would be as foolish as to repair a leaky roof with paper.

(To be Continued)

Dr. O. B. McFadon, osteopath, 106 W. 10th Ave. Un. 7904-W. Residence calls on the Hilltop Wednesday and Saturday mornings.

Struck by Auto

While driving his machine over town last Saturday afternoon, Mr. E. G. Plank, 42 South Harris avenue, was ran into by a Buick maching, damaging Mr. Plank's machine to the extent of a broken running board and a bent fender.

Miss Edith Louise Robbins of the Hilltop School of Music gave several violin solos at the reception last Friday evening tendered to the university students at the Tenth Avenue Baptist church.

Mrs. Fannie F. Goodyear, aged 49 years, died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Rose L. Conklin, 2101 Sullivant avenue, Thursday, Oct. 8. Death was due to pneumonia, from which she had been ill for some time. Mrs. Goodyear was for six years a saleswoman at the F. & R. Lazarus Co. She was a member of Lorraine Chapter, Order of Eastern Star. Funeral services were held last Saturday afternoon at Sedalia. Burial was in charge of C. J. Kuhn.

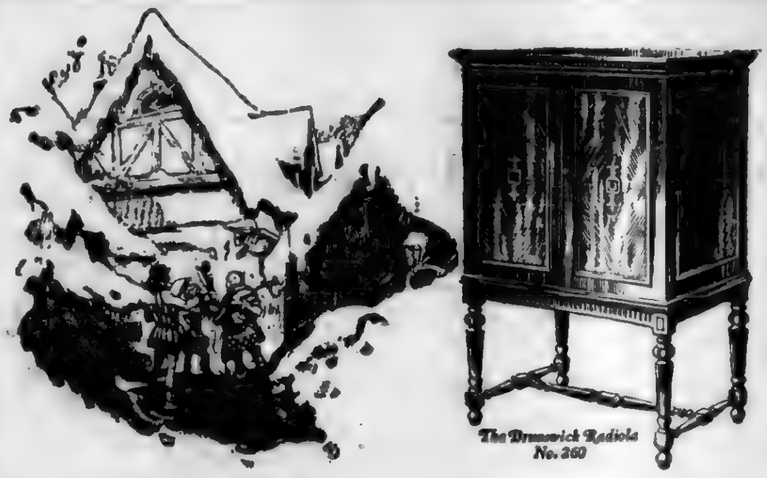
Buyers Get the Big Profit in Broadview

Many of the choice building sites in Plat 2, Broadview, are priced only $900. This is why buyers will make the BIG profit on this property.

People who bought Plat 1 two years ago have already made this profit. They bought at low prices; 120 homes have been built; the Hilltop began its present million dollar growth. Of course everybody has made BIG money—and made it quickly.

Plat 2 is already one-third sold. You can watch the city improvements—streets, parks, water, sewers, electricity, etc., go in. A rise in values is even more certain than it was in Plat 1. You simply can't help making money when you buy a well restricted Broadview lot for $900.

Drive or walk straight out West Broad street and turn south into any of Broadview's wide asphalt streets. If you take a street car, notice that the farthest lot is within three blocks of the car line.



And when you look around remember that Broadview was farm land in 1923. What will it be two years from now?

HALLOWEEN CELEBRATION

On West Broad Street—Hilltop Band to Furnish Music for the Evening.

Free Cider, Weiners and Buns Provided by Business Men's Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilltop and all the little Hilltoppers and their friends are invited to attend the masked halloween party on Broad street halloween night, Saturday, Oct. 31, from 7 to 10 o'clock and have one grand and glorious time.

Halloween is a time when witches, spooks and mysterious things come out for their annual frolic and good time, so, as the saying goes, "the lid will be off" (for anything within reason) and you are expected to come out and join in the merrymaking with your mask and costume.

The party is being sponsored by the Hilltop Business Men's association, which is desirous of making the affair one the people can participate in and enjoy.

The Hilltop band, under the leadership of George Shockey, will be on hand and furnish the music for the merrymaking. Everybody loves band music, and this feature alone will be worth while.

As a treat for the crowd, cider and weiner sandwiches have been provided, which will be free to the merrymakers as they enjoy the festivities of the evening.

The committee in charge promises a jolly good time and many surprises for the crowd as the evening progresses.

Council Monday night referred to the city law department for study an ordinance authorizing the Indiana, Columbus & Eastern Traction Co. to abandon its tracks in McDowell street, Town to Mound; in Mound street, Sullivant avenue to Central avenue, and in Water street from Gay street to a point 200 feet south. The tracks have not been used because river channel improvement work cuts them off in several places. Permission to abandon the tracks was given the Ohio Electric Co., formerr owners, in 1922.

Council also asked the Rail-Light Co to repair paving between tracks on Sullivant, Hawkes and Glenwood avenues.

Mrs. Nowell Injured

Mrs. Estella Nowell, aged 70, 14 North Warren avenue, was knocked down Wednesday night by an automobile driven by D. J. Lloyd, 490 South Twenty-second street, and seriously hurt. Mrs. Nowell was crossing Ohio avenue at Livingston, when Mr. Lloyd approached the intersection, and noticed her too late to avoid striking her.

Mrs. Knowell was knocked unconscious, and was taken to a doctor's office and later to St. Francis hospital.

Next Sunday, Oct. 25, Dr. Edward Leigh Pell begins a series of lectures at Glenwood M. E. church, his general subject being "More About Jesus and What He Really Taught."

Meetings will be held daily at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. from Oct. 25 to Nov. 1, and are open to all. Residents of the Hilltop are especially invited to attend. This will be a week of great inspiration under the guiding influence of so great a preacher and teacher as Dr. Pell.

Sunday school classes, young people's societies, business men's organizations, lodges and all societies of such nature are invited to attend in a body.

The Woman's Missionary society of Burgess Avenue U. B. church has prepared an interesting program for Sunday night with special music by the Women's Quartet, a reading by Mrs. Rockey, and an exercise by the juniors, "The Last Commaad." Mrs. Nellie F. Ellison will read the scripture lesson and Rev. Anna Burgett will offer prayer.

Edward G. Planck, who has erected a new brick and cement auto service station at 1354-56 Sullivant avenue, corner of Brehl, expects to open for business on Saturday, Oct. 24. His plant will be fully up to date for service of that kind. Mr. Planck has been with the J. Renner Auto Sales Co. since 1914, and takes up his new business fully experienced to do all kinds of work in that line. We wish him abundant success.

H. F. Taylor, 278 Clarendon avenue, gave a very enjoyable surprise party Saturday night for his brother and his wife, celebrating their birthday anniversaries. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Earny McWhorter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fristoe, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fristoe, Mr. and Mrs. William Carter and children Helen and Delores, Mr. U. J. Urton, Miss Marie Dalton, Mr. Richard Carter, Mrs. Lilly Taylor and Mrs. H. F. Taylor.

West Hi Football Team

Through the efforts of Coach Peg Fuller and Captain Ira Ritzman the best football team West High school has had in years have been developed, and is one that is able to give a good account of itself against any opposition.

Capt. Ritzman was an All-Hi man last year and bids fair to repeat this season, and has been largely responsible for the successes enjoyed by the West team.

Coach Fuller is a graduate of Ohio university and got his first football experience at an end at East High school, being a star on the championship team. Fuller was a fullback at Ohio and was prominently mentioned on several all-conference selections.

HILLTOPLETS

The Hilltop band has been practicing about two nights a week of late, getting ready for the halloween doings on the Hilltop a week from next Saturday night.

Two brick business blocks of two storerooms each are being erected on Sullivant avenue, one at the corner of Richardson and Sullivant and the other at Oakley and Sullivant avenues.

The Hilltop Accessory store has vacated its former location at Broad and Oakley and is now located on Broad street near Wheatland avenue, in the room formerly occupied by the Empire Hilltop theater.

The Hilltop postoffice branch will soon be located with the Mykrantz store in its new location at the northwest corner of South Park avenue and Broad street.

A little six-year-old girl on being shown, by her mother, one of the "family gold fish" that had died, remarked: "Don't throw it away mother, it will come to life again, cause, see, its eyes are now open." Then on looking at its gills she remarked, "Oh, look here, it's been cut in two places."

BROADVIEW EXTENSION

In conversation with Mr. Heed of the Heed & Holton Co., we were informed that at least 5000 people visited their two additions last Sunday.—Broadview Plat 1 and Plat 2—inspecting the beautiful homes recently built there.

Work on finishing Parkside Drive, Boys avenue and Binns boulevard is now in progress and it is expected to have these streets finished with asphalt clear through to Sullivant avenue before bad weather sets in. Several persons are starting to build their homes this fall and others are getting things ready to start early in the spring.

Messrs. Heed & Holton announce that already over one-third of the lots in Broadview Extension are now sold.

It is understood that plans for the new West High School building to be erected just west of South Powell avenue are now being drawn and it is expected they will be finished in time for the starting of the building next year.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Lyday, 65 South Westmoor avenue, announce the birth of a son, Oct. 14, at Mt. Carmel hospital.

Mr. A. Kessler, 105 South Hague avenue, was called to Springfield, Ill., Thursday, on account of the death of his sister, Mrs. C. J. Riefler.

Charles, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Ditrick, 125 North Park avenue, underwent a successful operation for the removal of tonsils at Dr. Prout's hospital last Monday morning.

A LITTLE STORY THAT'S TRUE

We were riding west on a Broad street car the other day when a cold north wind and a drizzling rain seemed to cause a sort of dismal hill at Glenwood park when the wet condition of the rails caused the hill at Glenwood park when the wet condition of the rails caused the wheels to buss around—the car could not go forward and finally stalled completely. The passengers looked this way and that, all thinking things, when the conductor went to the front end of the car and proceeded to shove sand over the wheels which fell on the track. Almost immediately the wheels took hold and forward went the car, while the passengers sat back and smiled at each other at the result.

We though what an illustration that is in life and resulted in us getting the following lines out of our system:

Did you ever think, as the years go by,
It's a pretty good plan for you and I
Along life's way we should keep on hand
A generous supply of "cheer-up" sand?

When pay-day comes and you go about
To square up the bills—but the cash runs out
'Cause the kids need coats and shoes for the fall,
The coal bin's low, and north winds squall
A kink tries to park in the small of your back—
Pucker up a whistle—shove sand on the track.

When things "gloom up" and clouds hang low,
The "power's" all on, but the bus won't go,
'Cause the grade is steep and the wheels just slip,
Say, draw on the sand—and get a new grip.

8A PARTY

The lower hall of the building at Highland Avenue school was the scene of a delightful masquerade party Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 20, when the 8A's had their halloween party. The decorating committee had decorated profusely in orange and black, giving the setting a quite unusual appearance, unlike its every day attire. Games and contests, together with the original make-ups of the boys and girls, provoked much merriment from 3:30 to 5:30. Doughnuts, cider and candy were partaken of heartily by all before reluctantly departing for their respective homes.

PAPER SALE

The paper sale held Oct. 16 by the Highland P.-T. A. was quite remunerative. Due to the efforts of the members and the co-operation of the pupils, paper aggregating over a ton and a half was collected from front steps of homes contributing. Mrs. Shirke, Mrs. Latham and Mrs. Heid collected the papers, and several ladies including Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Bowser, helped at the building, sorting, tieing, etc.

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

The reader may remember that I gave my actual menu for three days a few weeks ago.

My breakfasts were then, as they are now, all, or nearly all, fruit. As for instance: A bowl of apple or peach sauce, the juice of a whole lemon, sweetned with honey, if at all; canta loupe or melon, and, on cool morn ings, bacon or the yolk of a coddled egg. Four months of this fruit break fast have proved it fine for an extra acid stomach. (Note that I neve: omit the lemon.)

My usual dinner consists of two slices of hard toasted whole wheat bread, generously buttered, with an occasional potato or banana, and lighter vegetables (and the water in which they are cooked.) A starch dinner.

Having had a fruit breakfast and a starch dinner, I have a protein supper consisting of cottage cheese or milk and custard, with fruit or light vege tables (not potatoes), and cake or crackers.

Please notice that these meals are not balanced meals, but that the day's meals are balanced. The ratio is aimed to be two parts vegetables to one part of the more "nourishing foods," in a balancing by the day.

If you must have meat, take a meat meal or two each week, but make your light meals the rule rather than the exception, and give your poor over worked heart a chance. Then you need not concern yourself about

The "prime of life," like the end of life, varies with the individual, but it may be deferred by right living. It is supposable that vitality has com menced to wane at the age of 50, after which the processes of repair and re placement are slower, which emphasizes the necessity for extra care and caution in all habits, especially in those of diet. But how few there are who will so appreciate this as to coolly curb their perverted appetites and tastes, without a very definite danger signal. In fact it is positively tra ical that most people—yes, a large ma jority—who are in apparent good health, will glory in their cultivated, ruise, appetites and unnatural "pound age."

Of all our special senses—touch, taste, smelling, to which we feel so highly indebted, is the one, in most cases, that insiduously dethornes us. Three times a day, and at many other times, we ask ourselves, "Can I take care of this," and imagine it is our best judgment that answers. But we little realize that it is our pampered, perverted taste, and correspondingly weakened will, that are deciding the matter, and so our "best judgment" answers "yes," and adds a little to the rolling snowball of doom that will, surely lead to what we call "degenera tive diseases," premature old age and early death. I say "we," and why not? for—now be candid with yourself—who is it, beyond the age of 40, that is not guilty?

Dissipation is wasted energy. Not necessarily from drunkenness and other excesses, but it may be from an every day intake of such highly valued staple foods as bread, meat, eggs, cheese, etc., which, if out of propor tion to lighter foods become acid form ers and drains upon vitality, to digest. The "good nourishing food" regimen is over-done and the value of fruits and vegetables underestimated. The best food is not necessarily the most nutritious. The so-called "good livers" are not the longest lived. W. J. Bry an and Bob Ingersoll were abstainers from alcohol, but they were "good livers" and gloried in their strength! "The survival of the fattest" is a se rious joke, but they are not fittest and they don't survive.

"The meals he ate were the wonder of those who traveled with him on campaign tours. Vegetarianism, so frequently the concomitant of pacifism, was no part of his doctrine. Nor was he discriminating in the matter of food. He ate what was set before him, ate all of it, and passed his plate for more."

HOW TO STORE BULBS

If you have not dug your gladiolus bulbs do not delay until the ground gets frozen or you will have difficulty. If the weather is still open it is best to cure the bulbs in the sled, after which they can be taken indoors, cleaned, graded and stored for the win ter. In storing bulbs, trays arranged to keep the various varieties separate are best to use, but where only limited numbers are to be stored they can be handled in the ordinary paper sack, only be sure before packing them away that the bulbs are well dried or cured and then do not put too many in one sack. Gladiolus bulbs should never be more than three or four deep. Instead of laying the bags containing the bulbs flat it will be best to hang them to the ceiling in that part of the cellar farthest away from the furnace.

The American Museum of Natural History in New York City is to have a new building, the School Service Building, dedicated to the work that has grown up of providing natural his tory visual education material of the public schools. In 1924 there were 567,160 lantern slides of natural his tory visual education material to the children; and 206 special slides pro vided for 144,000 children. This indi cates a small part of the museum's work.

The winter of 1894-1895 was excep tionally severe in London, and some black-headed gulls were driven to the Thames for fodo. The inhabitants of London fed them liberally and in the succeeding winter they increased in numbers. During the World war the birds were neglected, but today great flocks are seen in St. James park and on other small ponds and open waters of the London parks.

Suggestive Tips for Avoiding Accidents

According to statistics compiled by authorities engaged in collecting data designed for use in accident prevention work, approximately 31 per cent of all persons killed by automobiles are children under 15 years of age.

Many drivers are careful on congested streets but careless in residential and other districts where children are [illegible]

In spite of the danger, many children make the street their playground, or in chasing each other or a ball they may suddenly dash into the street right in front of a moving vehicle.

A driver should assume that every child on or near the street may dash suddenly in front of his car. You cannot tell by looking at a child what it is going to do.

You should, therefore, drive slowly and have absolute control of your car not only when children are playing in the street but when they are playing near the curb or on the sidewalk.

When passing schools or playgrounds.

When approaching persons on bicycles, tricycles, roller skates, kiddie cars, etc.

When passing ice wagons and street sprinklers.

When passing any hill that may be used for coasting, in winter.

Drivers should remember the following:

Caution your own and other people's children about the dangers of the street.

Do not allow anyone to ride on the running board, rear tire or bumper of your car.

Persons on bicycles, on roller skates or in carts should not be permitted to hitch on your car.

It is bad practice to give children a "lift" to and from school because it encourages them to stand in the street while hailing. Such encouragement by motorists promotes a hazard to the children and to all motorists.

In many communities school children are being taught "safety." Automobile drivers should co-operate in this good work and take every precaution to prevent accidents to children.

If you expect other persons to avoid injuring your children you should take care not to injure the children of others.

Seein' and Hearin' Things

—Bunches of interested listeners gathered around radios here and there last Saturday listening-in on the State-Columbia football game.

—West Siders sorting the good ones from the wormy ones—chestnuts.

—Denver Painter "girating" on the gains and losses of State's football game as he heard 'em over his radio at home on Sullivant avenue last Saturday.

—Our exceptionally pretty fall flowers about all gone.

—Rush-hour street cars all balled-up and running in bunches on account of traffic congestion.

—Candidates "loomin' up." Voters "loomin' down."

—Taking down screen doors and awnings and packing 'em away with the straw hats, bathing suits, B. V. D.'s, etc.

—The "punky" looking grounds that have surrounded the new Central High school building for the past year and a half being graded and sodded and now looking very pretty.

—Bill Allen, motorman on Camp Chase car line, reports having lost two days' time already since Jan. 1.

—Snow sweepers taunting our minds by lying conspicuously in the front entrance of the West Side car barns.

—The pretty new electric sign on the front of the Rivoli theater building.

—Jim Young's flower bed at his grocery, corner North Oakley and Broad, "holding up" as well as could be expected.

—Saturday night parking space on West Broad street getting no better fast.

OLD PIONEER DAYS

About the year 1812 and previous to this time there prevailed a very uneasy feeling in the public mind in and about Franklinton, owing to the uncertain and even unfriendly disposition manifested by the Indian tribes still residing within our borders. The town of Franklinton was situated in the vicinity of where Sandusky and Broad street now are, and an Indian war had only been averted by the opportune victory of General Harrison over the Indians at the famous battle of Tippecanoe in the Indiana Territory in the year 1811.

Now, in the summer of 1812, they were again restive, having been tampered with and much demoralized by the celebrated prophet and his distinguished brother, Tecumseh, a chief among the Shawnees. Our difficulties with Great Britain resulted in a declaration of war against that power in June, 1812. The English government had its agents among the Indians of the Northwest, were furnishing arms and inciting them to hostility against our unprotected and exposed settlements, and the inhabitants, therefore, had just grounds for the apprehension.

The Ohio troops, intended for the protection of our borders and to operate against the British forces in Upper Canada, were assembled at Franklinton, Dayton and Urbana and, under the lead of our patriotic Governor Meigs, were marched a short distance from the latter place, and turned over to the command of General Hull, an officer who had performed acceptable and creditable service in the War of Independence, and who had been selected by the United States government to conduct the military operations in the Northwest. He marched to Detroit, and the unfortunate and unnecessary surrender of his whole army to an inferior force of British and Indians, without as much as striking a blow, is a matter of history known to all.

Such an unlooked-for and astounding blow almost paralyzed the country and created great alarm, for many of the Indian tribes, encouraged by this untoward event and urged by the British agents, now openly took sides against us. Months of apprehension supervened, and a feverish anxiety infected the whole community, for Franklinton was really a frontier settlement, and the inhabitants were in constant dread lest by some sudden attack their houses should be given to the flames and their wives and little ones fall a prey to the tomahawk and scalping knife of the remorseless savages, who spared neither sex nor age and marked their track with fire and blood. Indian alarms were frequent and on such occasions the terrified settlers from up Darby creek, Sells' settlement on the Scioto, from Delaware and Worthington and the adjacent regions, came flocking into Franklinton, and at one time a ditch and stockade was commenced around the courthouse, to convert it into a citadel.

During the troublesome and exciting period Lucas Sullivant rendered efficient aid, and, by his own calmness and conduct, did much to allay excitement and restore courage and confidence, for the citizens looked much to him. He kept two scouts of his own, well skilled in woodcraft and knowledge of Indian signs, constantly on duty for some weeks, as far up as the present Zanesfield in Logan county, who reported to him at short intervals.

This inspired confidence and gave assurance that timely warnings would be given of any real Indian invasion, and it became a saying with many "that, when Lucas Sullivant went into a stockade, or prepared to fly with his family, they would follow, but not until then." The war proceeded with varying success, till the disastrous defeat of our forces under General Winchester and the atrocious murder of our wounded and prisoners at Frenchtown (or more commonly known as the battle of the River Raisin) under the very eye of Proctor, the British commander, showing an utter disregard for the rules of civilized warfare, carried sorrow and mourning into many a household in Kentucky, and still further revived and intensified the dread of savage invasion.

Under the circumstances it was deemed highly important that the Ohio tribes, who had hitherto remained neutral, should now be induced to take an active part on behalf of the government in the ensuing campaign, or at least give a guarantee of their peaceful intention by removing with their families, within the white settlements. Accordingly a meeting was arranged and held on June 21, 1813, on the grounds of Lucas Sullivant at Franklinton.

The large stone now standing in the iron fence at Martin avenue and State street is a memorial to this event. The Delaware, Shawnee, Wyandot and Seneca tribes were represented by about 60 of the chiefs and warriors. General Harrison represented the government, and with him were his staff and a brilliant array of officers in full uniform. Behind was a detachment of soldiers. In his front were the Indians. Around all were the inhabitants of the region far and near, with many a mother and maid, as interested spectators.

The general began to speak in calm and measured tones befitting the grave occasion, but an undefined oppression seemed to hold all in suspense, as, with silent and almost breathless attention, they awaited the result of the general's words, which seemed to fall on dull ears, as the Indians sat with unmoved countenances and smoked on in stolid silence. At length the persuasive voice of the great commander struck a responsive chord, and, when Tarke, or Crane, the great Wyandot chief, slowly rose to his feet, and standing for a moment in a graceful and commanding attitude, made a brief reply, and then with others pressed forward to grasp the hand of Harrison, in tokenß not only of amity, but in agreement to stand as a barrier on our exposed border, a terrible doubt and apprehension was lifted from the hearts of all.

Jubilant shouts rent the air, women wept for joy, and stalwart men thrilled with pleasure as they now thought of the assured safety of their wives and children from a cruel and stealthy foe, and they prepared at once, with cheerful alacrity, to go forth to the impending battles.

Representatives of both the Home and Foreign Missionary societies of Glenwood M. E. church will visit every family of the church in a drive to double the membership of both societies before Nov. 1.

A complete prehistoric workshop containing 17 heaps of flint tools and weapons, numbering altogether four thousand pieces, was discovered by British and American geologists at Frindsburg, Rochester, England. The relics are believed to date from mid-Pleistocene times.

A direct air service between Egypt and India is to be established. The distance is about 25,000 miles and the flight is expected to take two and one-half instead of eigh. days now required. If night flying proves practicable, the trip may be reduced to a day and a half. It is hoped that not only the mails but also passenger traffic will be accommodated.

You Can't Help Making Money

Suppose the heads of a successful, long established business assured you personally that their stock was going to have a big rise in value. You'd probably buy some shares.

Heed & Holton, a real estate firm of 11 years standing and a record of profits for every single investor, make that exact statement about Plat 2 in Broadview. Lot prices there are going up as surely as they have in Plat 1, Broadview, during the past two years.

Take fine, high land with green trees and rolling ground, and close to schools, churches, stores and street cars. Put in asphalt streets, parks, sewers, water, electricity, etc.; restrict it carefully against all but desirable single dwellings, and locate it in the city, in the heart of a district where everybody wants to own his home, and where there is a limited supply of building lots.

That describes Plat 2 in Broadview. You can buy at original prices — $900 for many choice lots — with small easy payments, and make yourself a handsome profit in a comparatively short time.

This isn't a guess; it is fact. Plat 1 was farm land in 1923. Come out and look at its 120 fine homes and ask the profits that have been made there. Plat 2 is even more certain to pay profits to investors.

Drive out here and see what is happening to Hilltop real estate—the million dollar development that has taken place in the last two years. Broadview is closets to High street and faces on West Broad. Plat 2 extends south from Plat 1 and makes room for several hundred additional Broadview homes. At only $900 for a choice lot you can't help making money.

WHO SAID
"Laugh and Be Fat."

These words seem to have constituted the philosophy of life of their author, Ben Jonson. Laughter and light-heartness were the dominant traits of this renowned man of letters and to his easegoing, carefree disposition can be traced his constant state of poverty.

Jonson was a contemporary of Shakespeare and was a great friend of that great English writer. Probably his best known work is "Every Man in His humor," a comedy that was produced at the court of James I and was so well received that the author was persuaded to present a new play there each year. Jonson's other works include, for the most part, poetry. One of his best known short efforts being the poem:

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I will pledge with mine;
Or leave a kiss within the cup,
And I'll not ask for wine.
The thirst that from the soul doth rise,
Doth ask a drink divine;
But might I of Jove's nectar sip,
I would not change for thine

This poem has been set to music and has a prominent place in every collection of old songs.

In the year 1610 Jonson was appointed poet-laureate. This office carried with it a salary of $500 and the additional emolument of a butt of the best canary wine from the king's own cellar, but this was not enough to keep the extravagant poet. In addition to the allowance made him by the king, the city of London gave him a pension But this, too, was inadequate for his needs and we find the life of Ben Jonson one round of debts after another. Jonson died in the year 1637 at the age of [illegible]

HEALTH HINTS.

By DR. O. E. McFADON

"Shut up your mouth and keep it shut." That's what your best health interest says. The exceptions are, while you are eating and when you have something important you must say.

And keep the air away from your teeth. It can't harm your teeth, but it will do you better service if it passes brough your nostrils.

In other words, fix the habit of always breathing through your nostrils. That's a part of our "Onward Christian Soldier," solitaire game. Hereafter, the first words, as they are printed below should be suggestion enough to keep your breathing rythmically whenever you walk and while you sleep—in fact all the time, for it is a good method, why not work at it, keeping in mind the betterment of your blood.

So, while "breathing the words" in black, inhale all the the way, and ditto the words in lighter type, exhale all the way, and keep it up.

Onward Christian Soldier
Marching as to war, etc.
Or, if you choose to march faster:
Onward Christian Soldier
Marching as to war, etc.
Either way is good, but do it for the good of

THE BLOOD

The chief mechanical factor in life is the blood, which is the source of all structure and is necessary to all function. We have not now a drop of the same blood we had a few weeks ago and in a short time we will no longer have any of the blood we have now. Our new blood will be built from air water and food. Its normality will depend upon the quality of those elements. We demand good air; we insist upon natural water; but most people are careless about the nature and quality of their food—that problem is not so simple.

All our blood courses the body and returns to the heart every 5 to 7 minutes. This is necessary because the replenishment of our vitality must come from the blood, and the quality of the blood is most important. Insofar as our food is denatured, just so far is our vitality and health affected. This calls for a carefully planned and executed dietetic program always—as long as life lasts; and the earlier one's regime is adjusted on this basis, the better for the length, breadth and depth of his life. Once the proper balance is lost, complete replacement to what "it might have been," is impossible.

The 16 chemical elements in our bodies are also in fertile soil—earth; but the blood cannot get them from the soil except by the way of foods that are produced by the soil; they must be organized in vegetables. As, for instance: The lime that we must have for bones, teeth, heart, blood, nerves, etc., we get from grains, milk, egg youlk and vegetables; the iron necessary to liver spleen, bone marrow, etc., comes through grains, beans, meat dairy products, fruits and vegetables, and the phosphorus for brain, bones, and vitality is found in beans, peas, nuts, grains, dairy products, lean meat and some vegetables. (The animals that produce meat, eggs, etc., get them through vegetables.)

Oxidation is necessary to the integrity of the blood. The only way the blood can receive oxygen is from the air breathed into the lungs and absorbed through the air-vesicle walls. The oxygen, so absorbed, becomes a most important element in the conservation of nutrients and the formation of blood.

It is an interesting fact, that while oxygen is most necessary to food inside the body, it is destructive to food when in combination outside the body. For instance, the nutrients in an apple or melon are protected and conserved by the skin, but if the skin be removed and the apple divided into parts, and the parts exposed, the oxygen of the air will soon render it unfit for food. The same is true of other foods. Food cooked in open vessels is allowed free oxidation and escape of nutrients. This suggests light cooking in closed vessels and the free and more general use of uncooked foods.

Impoverished conditions of the blood (anemia) are cases for the physician, who will demand accession to the best of air and a carefully regulated diet from wheat, oats, beef, beans, peas, apples, pears, peaches, grapes, etc.

Let Your Dollars Grow in Broadview

In the finest home addition on the Hilltop, with a large part already built up and the remainder being rapidly improved by the city, you can buy a tree clustered lot for as low as $900. This is in the new section of Broadview, Plat 2, which extends south from the built up section and was opened for sale just this year.

Lots in the first plat were sold in 1923—and Plat 1 has 120 beautiful homes today. This phenomenal success, and the money it has made investors, guarantee you even more certain profits in Plat 2. For Broadview is established as the finest residence section on the Hilltop; it is close to schools, churches, stores and street cars, and it needs only the completion of city improvements to develop Plat 2 as Plat 1 has already been developed.

These improvements are going in now while you watch them. Make a small down payment, with easy monthly charges, on a $900 lot and you are absolutely certain to see your dollars grow in Broadview.

Drive or take car straight out West Broad Street and turn south through beautiful Broadview to Plat 2. The million-dollar development of this two-year-old Hilltop section will amaze you.

Seein' and Hearin' Things

—Some of our folks were undecided which way to jump the other evening when a "honk, honk" greeted their ears. Gazing upward some thought it might be some of Henry's flying divers," but 'twasn't, as they were real honkers. There was a leader and more than 'steen others following in a V shape as they went headed toward Miami, Florida. They were Canada geese (we call 'em wild geese), which had abandoned their summer "cottages" along the northern lake shores and were preparing to fill a season's engagement at the southern bathing beaches. They traveled something after the order of the recent Knight Templar trains on their western tour—in three sections, the first passing early in the evening, a second about 9 o'clock and a third about 2 a. m. Probably they did that in obedience to their traffic code. They took big chances, however, with our code when they passed inside our corporate limits with neither spot lights or tail lights; and narry a one stopped while crossing Broad street. Well the night was cold and we suppose our "coppers" were afraid of attacks of "goose flesh" if they attempted to chase them. May joy go with 'em However there's one consolation—gooseberry pie will stay with us all winter.

—We felt sorry fof an unfortunate truck driver one of the recent cold days. He had a big load of brick and a flat tire, and while he was leaning over, the cold north wind seemed to function to a queen's taste under his coat tail and cause it to skid up toward his shoulders. 'N then it was just dinner time, too. Glad 'twasn't us.

—We're often thought a lot when we see a roaring fire in the furnace to keep things warm and at the same time a big cake of ice in the refrigerator to keep things cool.

—We see where Economic Information Leaders of Franklin County met in Columbus recently and discussed the hog situation. Are wondering which one —We used to think that our sox had about everything beat on developing holes, but "ogeegosh" our coal pile has 'em skinned a mile since the beginning of the recent shivering spell.

QUAINT MASKS AND COSTUMES

A large, good natured and fun-loving crowd celebrated halloween last Saturday night on West Broad street from Whitethorne to Huron avenue, enjoying themselves in the spirit of the season.

Many comical and unique makeups and costumes were in evidence as the crowd moved from one point to another.

The band kept the crowd in good humor with the music and at 7 o'clock lead a parade of several hundred people, starting at Whitethorne and marching west to Huron avenue, where the dancing was held and prizes awarded for the various events. Red fire was lighted in front of the parade as it marched west, which made a most beautiful display.

And the free cider and sandwiches were enjoyed by all.

In fact the celebration was about the most successful event of its kind ever put on on the Hilltop.

The following persons were awarded prizes:

What home owner or resident of the Hilltop would want the trees and shrubs around his home destroyed, ashes and rubbish dumped in his back yard and his front lawn used for a football gridiron?

Well that is just about the treatment the lawn and playgrounds at West Broad school is being subjected to. Trees and shrubs have been destroyed, ashes, chicken feathers and rubbish dumped on the playground and the front lawn used to play football on.

Everybody in the neighborhood of the school should take as much pride in these grounds as the children who attend the school and those in authority do, and should lend every effort to keep them in a clean condition.

The playing of football on the front lawn after school hours may be the action of thoughtless boys, but the habit of dumping rubbish on school property is one to be condemned.

Are the parties who have been doing this interested enough to go to the West Broad school grounds and clean up their rubbish?

EXCEEDINGLY BUSY CORNER

We stood at the corner of Central and Sullivant avenues about 4:30 o'clock last Sunday afternoon and counted, in ten minutes' time, 216 machines, one motor bus, two city street cars and an interurban passing that corner from the four different directions. That is equal to 1296 vehicles an hour, or a little better than one every three seconds.

We were told that the traffic at that corner on week days is even greater than that, especially from 3 to 6 in the afternoon, sometimes reaching as high as about 1600 vehicles an hour.

As we have mentioned before in the record, this is one of the most dangerous corners in the residential sections of the city as three of the four corners are built up with business houses, cutting off a large part of the vision of traffic till one almost reaches the curb.

Hundreds of children pass this corner four times each day, going to and from Dana Avenue school, and a large portion of them are in the beginner and first grades of that school.

It was reported that the city council was about to pass an ordinance making Sullivant avenue a through street and causing all vehicles to come to a stop at all intersection of that and other streets, but as yet we have heard of nothing being done in that matter.

Wouldn't it be a good idea for all residents concerned—especially those having children going to school—to get busy and have council act on this before some serious accident to someone's child happens?

The Needle Craft club met with Mrs. Lillian Grove of Camp Chase for the first meeting of the new year. All members were present and the new officers presided. A 1 o'clock lunch was served after which there was a business session. The secretary read a good letter from Mrs. N. A. Curtis of Cleveland. Mrs. Malcolm Grove, 1540 Neil Ave., a former member of the club, was a guest. After the business was taken care of the afternoon was spent in a social manner.

The Amo club was delightfully entertained with a casserole lunch by Mrs. W. F. Kidd, 160 Midland Ave., last Tuesday evening.

Mrs. A. L. Moon, 57 S. Terrace St., is at home recovering from an operation performer at Mt. Carmel hospital.

A LITTLE STORY THAT'S TRUE

Here's another told us by a Hilltop fireman:

"One summer the boys at the engine house had a tomato patch back of the engine house. One of the bunch, 'Skimmer' by name, never would help take care of the patch but when a nice ripe tomato showed up on the vines, he would generally beat 'em to it. Skimmer was off duty several days and when he was due to return a big tomato was just beginning to turn. Foretelling what Skimmer would do when he saw it, one of the bunch got some red barn paint and gave the big tomato a first, and then a second coat of rich red, and polished it all up on the vine. The first morning of Skimmer's return he sneaked out to the patch and nosing around, spied the 'big boy.' Quicker than it takes to tell it, his claws closed in on it and never relieved it till it was safe in his locker, the rest of the bunch keeping an eye on him nevertheless.

"By and by he said he guessed he'd have a tomato feast, and going to his locker, proceeded to eat the big tomato.

"Fearing serious results, one of the firemen knocked it from his hand, but he grabbed it up and finished it, stating that it 'tasted fine.'

"Then a season of anxiety with visions of ambulances, hospitals, doctors, stomach pumps and such traveled the think thanks of the crew all the rest of the day, but Skimmer just seemed to thrive on it like a goat on tin cans."

HIT-SKIP AUTOIST HITS LITTLE GIRL

Lenore Herman Injured at Central and Thomas Avenues Last Friday.

Lenore Herman, 5 years old, 475 S. Central Ave., was hit by an automobile at Central and Thomas avenues last Friday night. The child suffered cuts and bruises. The driver of the car speeded away after the accident, and the victim was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital by Hattie Ward, 475 S. Central Ave. She was not seriously injured.

Seein' and Hearin' Things

—While strolling around last Sunday afternoon, we were gazing at a bunch of snow still covering the space of a sloping hillside, when we heard sort of a humming noise, and looking not far from there saw several hundred bees buzzing around half a dozen hives enjoying the warm sunshine. It struck us as being something unusual—snow and bees at the same time.

—A little West Side girl, riding west on Broad street, asked "What street is this we are passing?" and was told that it was Front street. She then remarked: "Is that one we just passed "Back street?"

—A lady over town, while standing at the corner waiting for a green light, was heard to remark: "Well, there's one good thing about them, we are resting while we're waiting." We just thought, why not have the city erect several benches at each corner so that one could take a complete rest.

—A four-year-old "Henry," packed to the roof with Young America from 6 to 20 years old, both sexes, hobbled into town last Sunday from the suburbs of Briggsdale making as much noise as a concret mixer, because of tireless wheels. One tire had slipped off the rear wheel and was hanging over the axle and dragging along the street. Well, the bunch seemed happy, though.

—Two fellows last Saturday (halloween) night seemed to be having more fun than a bushel of monkeys. Had a large can with a rosined string fastened through one end, which they put against the back of some celebrating damsel, then with rosined gloves, rub back and forth on the string. The result was like the honk of an automobile and generally produced a yell and jump from the victim sufficient to attract notice for half a square around.

—The mess on the streets and marked-up store windows last Sunday morning was enough to not only cause our merchants to think things, but also even say things. However, it didn't take long to clean up, after all.

The subject of "Literature for Our Youth" will be discussed at the next meeting of Highland Avenue P.-T. A., Tuesday evening, Nov. 10, at 7:30. Mrs. Cannon will represent the parents and the teachers and pupils will also be represented. Miss Trump and Miss Baker will furnish music. Reports will also be made on the state convention at Cincinnati. The parents of the pupils of the first and second grades will have charge of the social hour.

Those from a distance who were present at the funeral and burial of W. H. Kennedy were Ex-Consul B. N. Gunsaulus and wife of Wellington, New Zealand, Mrs. Amor R. Brown of Cleveland, Mr. O. F. Briggs of Cleveland, Fred Evans of Cardington, E. D. Lloyd and wife of Marengo, William L. West and wife of Westerville and Rev. F. A. Gilmore of Shelby.

Think of it. Here are choice lots in an addition with 120 fine new homes, beautiful streets, parks, all city improvements being completed while you watch them—the closest to High Street of all the marvelous Hilltop developments—and yet you can buy many of these lots for only $900 on the most attractive kind of terms.

Columbus investors—here is where you simply can't help making money. We've developed more Hilltop property than anyone and we'll bank our reputation of 11 years' success on Broadview, Plat 2.

VITAMINES

When astronomers see evidences of the existence of an undiscovered star, they hunt—perhaps within a radius of a few million miles—till they find it. Food scientists are as eager to discover as ethereal, immaterial, a thing as a new vitamine, which they may know to exist. Then when found its character must be determined by experimentation and it is duly named and placed on the list. The general name "vitamine" is from the words "vitality" and "amine" and was suggested by Professor Funk.

Nobody ever saw a vitamine. The strongest microscopes have not been able to locate them, or verify their existence. Like radio waves, they exist, but are things not to be seen. Like electricity, we have always had them and have had benefits from them, but not in such large measure as if we had known.

We are affected by many things we can't see, hear nor taste, but must believe in them because of their potency. Air-waves, vibrations and electricity are in nature, and have always existed; their development depends upon inventive discovery. The method of vitamine discovery has been more a negative procedure than positive. A part of a food is taken away and the deficiency results in feeding are noted. Developments in discovery have been gradual because demonstration of comparative results are necessarily slow. Sufficient progress has been made, however, that vitamines are widely known to be a very necessary element in food. They are not food nutrients, but their presence is necessary to make the food nutrients (protein, fats, sweets and starches) available. They are naturally thought of and grouped with minerals because of the similarity of their relation to the food nutrients.

Mr. Henry T. Fincke suggests that in the grouping, for simplicity's sake, we call them all "vitaminerals"—not a bad idea, for the average non-scientific mind does not care to differentiate, especially between the several kinds of vitamines. But all people should know whether the food they eat still has its natural mineral element, and that its vitamines have not been removed or ruined by overcooking.

It is important, however, that those who cook be able to differentiate, because of the different treatment which the different vitamines require. Indeed the neglect of proper vitamine treatment is more serious than it is to be careless about food values, because the availability of food value depends largely upon mineral and vitamine integrity.

The vitamines so far discovered are named "A," "B," "C" and "D." A, B and C have been sufficiently exploited, that information about them can be relied upon. More completely: their names are "Fat soluble A," which is made available by cooking in fat, and "Water soluble B and C" which may be cooked in water. Some foods, rich in Vitamine C, lose a part or all of their virtue by cooking, and, hence, would better be eaten raw. They are: such green vegetables as lettuce, celery, onions, cabbage, etc., and citrus fruits.

There is talk of a "Vitamine X," but, as in the case of the others, we must wait. Their working from both ends of the alphabet should give us hope that they will all be run down sooner or later.

The ever present question is: If vitamines are not nutrients, why are they so important? Someone has compared vitamines to the ignition spark in the automobile: it has no power in itself but without it the most powerful engine would be inert. If there were no vitamines in the food you eat, it would not nourish you. The advantage in knowing them is, that we may better conserve them—choose our food with reference of them and the minerals, giving second place to the nutrients which have been idolized so long.
